PHILOSOPHY 210. Philosophy of Art. June 26 to July 25.

This course will begin with an examination of various answers to the questions why is there art or what is the role of art in human experience. In the course of this investigation, various traditional problems in the philosophy of art will be considered such as the nature of art, truth and belief in art, the relation of art to the expression of feelings or emotions, and the nature and justification of criticism. The course will conclude with a study of art as exemplifying a general theory of symbolic systems, thus relating modes of art to the symbolic processes of science and language in general. One course credit (3 semester hours.)

1:30–3:30 p.m., M, T, Th, F. Mr. Brown.

PHILOSOPHY 218. The Ethics of Science. June 26 to July 26.

A study of the moral perplexities arising out of the social use of the technological development of science, especially in areas affecting the natural environment and human biology and psychology. Some attention will be paid also to the normative dimensions of scientific research: the "ethic" of objectivity and the pursuit of truth, the social and personal conditions influencing research efforts. One course credit (3 semester hours).

6:00-8:00 p.m., M, T, W, Th. Mr. Brown.

PHILOSOPHY 331. Platonic Educational Philosophy. July 5 to August 11.

Through a study of such dialogues as the Lysis, Charmides, Theaetetus, and Symposium, the Socratic educational theory as it is practiced in the dialogues will be contrasted with the apparently ironic theory stated in the Republic. Regular attention will be paid to the application of Platonic views to contemporary education. One course credit (3 semester hours).

7:00-10:00 p.m., M, W. Mr. Hyland.

PHILOSOPHY 332. The Feminine in Philosophy. July 5 to August 11.

The contemporary controversy about women will be approached by investigating whether the distinction between feminine "nature" and a masculine "nature" is philosophically coherent and what the consequences of this coherence or lack thereof might be. Texts will include selected Platonic dialogues, selections from Aristotle's Politics, Simone de Beauvoir's The Second Sex, and others. One course credit (3 semester hours).
