SUMMER SCHOOL

Starts June 28

1943

HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

FOREWORD

IN spite of the dislocation of our traditional academic schedule because of the Naval Training School to be established at Trinity College on or about July 1st, we have decided to go ahead with our plans for our usual summer session for the benefit of those who wish to continue their education during the months of July and August. Classes will begin on Monday, June 28, continuing for six or eight weeks, depending on the course elected.

As can readily be understood, it is not easy to plan now just what courses will be offered, for we do not yet know definitely just what demands will be made upon our faculty. Since needs for the war effort take precedence in these days, it is possible that we shall have to withdraw some of the courses listed in this pamphlet. We shall do everything in our power, however, to meet the demands made upon us, and suggest that those who are planning to take summer work at Trinity communicate as soon as possible with Dr. Buell, so that we can determine what is desired. In these uncertain days, financial investments may be precarious, but it is certain that any investment of time in study will bring rewards.

R. B. OGILBY.

TRINITY COLLEGE offers the following courses for its summer school of 1943. Credit is given for these courses—toward a Bachelor's Degree for all and toward a Master's Degree for some. Although Trinity College does not award the Bachelor's Degree to women, all summer school classes are open to both men and women, and credit can be transferred to other colleges awarding such a degree.

All classes will be held in classrooms and laboratories on the campus. These buildings are fairly cool even on hottest days. Information concerning the exact building and room may be obtained at the time of registration.

Early registration is desired. If the blank is sent in by June 12 with a registration fee of one dollar, this fee will be deducted later from the charge for tuition. The registration fee will be retained if paid later than this date. Final registration may be made June 26 and June 28 from 9:00 to 12:00 in Boardman Hall. Classes will start June 28.

If sufficient demand develops other courses may be added. On the other hand a few of the following courses cannot be absolutely guaranteed. A naval unit to start at the college about July 1 might make unexpected demand on our staff. This would not affect many courses and is not anticipated for any.

The Director of the Summer School, Dr. Irwin A. Buell, will be glad to answer any questions concerning credits, admission requirements, et cetera. There are no extra fees for laboratory courses or for graduate credit.
