Dr. Perkins was the first faculty member to substitute bicycle for automobile

Professor Henry A. Perkins is an alumnus of Trinity not merely because he has been on the Faculty forty years, but also because Trinity gave him an honorary degree of Doctor of Science in 1920. The retirement of Dr. Perkins takes from the Faculty one of its best liked professors and a popular and colorful figure.

Professor Perkins claims to be the only Trinity man in the "Gillette Be Damned" society, but the real reason for his growing a Van Dyke has recently been learned: he needed it to distinguish himself from freshmen when he first became an instructor at Trinity in 1902.

Dr. Perkins probably does not like to have the word "retired" applied to him because he is truly the kind of man who will never retire from many activities. He expects to continue scientific studies and to carry on with his numerous hobbies which include music (almost any instrument), painting, stamp collecting, mountain climbing, tennis, sailing and horseback riding.

When the buzzer ended Dr. Perkins' last class period, he was amazed to look up and see a large number of visitors including some alumni and colleagues. True to form, he had concentrated on the work of the day — electrical power fields and "wattless current" — instead of wasting classroom time sentimentalizing.

As a gesture of appreciation, the seniors presented Dr. Perkins with a gift of something over $400 to help with research work in the physics laboratory. Dr. Perkins wishes it to be known that this was a most appropriate gift because his interest is still in the teaching and development of physics. He also appreciates the fine physicist's clock, a gift from his last class.

CHARLES G. WOODWARD, 1898
Alumnus of the Year

To those who have followed the record of Charles G. Woodward it should have been no surprise that he was awarded the Eigenbrodt Trophy May 16. A director of four railroads and an officer in eight other companies, Mr. Woodward has proven that he ranks with the country's greatest financiers. He is a retired vice-president of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. where he is still a member of the Board of Directors and chairman of the Finance Committee.

Mr. Woodward has recently published a fascinating book entitled The New London, Willimantic and Palmer Railroad Co. Anyone interested in the early history of Connecticut transportation should not miss this book.

Mr. Thomas F. Flanagan, '12, chairman of the Board of Fellows, made the presentation of the Eigenbrodt Trophy this year and stated that the winner should be an outstanding alumnus with national or international prominence and/or a record of great service to the College. Charles G. Woodward had all the qualifications.

Former winners of the trophy are the following:

- William G. Mather, '77, in 1935
- Hon. Joseph Buffington, '75, in 1936
- Martin W. Clement, '01, in 1937
- Hon. Philip J. McCook, '95, in 1938
- Hon. Lawson Purdy, '84, in 1940
- Richardson L. Wright, '10, in 1941

ELIOT WARD, '13, Alumni President

COMMENCEMENT

In spite of the rain that moved the Open Air Service into the Chapel, the 116th Commencement and Reunions were highly successful.

The Class of 1917 started things off with an interesting School of Experience in the auditorium Friday afternoon. The speakers were Dr. Ralph Storrs, who told about the medical profession and warned the audience of the probability of "regulated medicine" after the war; John Bierck, who described possible careers for newspaper men and indicated that there is a great deal of difference between newspaper men and journalists, the difference being that the former still enjoy the freedom of the press; and then Northey Jones, who told something about Wall Street in his own inimitable style. Finally Dr. Ogilby read a paper by Professor Wadlund who was then in the hospital recovering from an operation. The paper dealt with the various possibilities in the teaching profession.

The School of Experience was followed by an Alumni-Faculty Dinner in the College dining hall attended by about one hundred. Mose Brines, '00, did his usual excellent job of leading the group in song.

The various activities of Saturday morning were carried out on schedule starting with Holy Communion, the Rev. James Henderson, '02, in charge. His classmate, the Rev. Edmund J. Cleveland, had charge of the Morning Prayer at 9 o'clock.

At the meeting of the Alumni Association, Alex W. Creedon, '09, presiding, there were reports by President Ogilby and Tom Wadlow, alumni secretary. Thomas F. Flanagan, '12, presented the Eigenbrodt Trophy to Charles G. Woodward, '98. Lawson Purdy, '84, representing the Trustees, reported that Dr. Jerome P. Webster, '10, had been elected Alumni Trustee and that George C. Capen, '10, and Lisenard B. Phister, '18, were appointed Senior Fellows.

Mr. Capen, chairman of the Nominating Committee, reported the following nominees who were then properly elected:

Officers of the Alumni Association

- President — Eliot Ward, '13
- Vice Pres.: — Alex W. Creedon, '09
- Treasurer — Harvey Dann, '32
- Secretary — J. Ronald Regnier, '30
- Asst. Sec. — James Henderson, Jr., '37

Junior Fellows: Frederick T. Tansill, '22 and John S. McCook, '35. Executive Committee: Raymond C. Abbey, '10, Ward E. Duffy, '15 and Charles T. Kingston, Jr., '34. Alumni Fund Council: Melville Shultheiss, '19 and Robert V. Holmes, '33. Athletic Advisory Council: John R. Carey, '39. Committee for Nomination of Alumni Trustee: Thomas F. Flanagan, '12 (chairman), Harold N. Chandler, '09, Erhardt G. Schmitt, '16, Lisenard B. Phister, '18 and G. Keith Funston, '32.

Following the Alumni Luncheon, the Yale game drew a large crowd which filled the additional new stands erected just the day before. Bill Scully was the hero of the day. Not only did he hold Yale to three hits, but he was effective at bat. Don Viering got the only double of the day and Ned O'Malley's tenth inning single brought home the winning run. It was an exciting end to a most successful season. Many alumni rightly congratulated Dan Jessee and Captain Joe Beidler on the best Trinity team they had ever seen.

After the president's reception, about 150 alumni went down town for reunion banquets. The 1823 Dinner was held at the University Club. Under the same roof were the President's Victory Dinner for the baseball team, as well as the 1922 and 1912 Class Dinners.

The Class of 1917 held its reunion in the rathskeller of the Heublein which was well filled with smoke and young men 25 years out of College. In the next room with less smoke was a large group of 1902 alumni celebrating their fortieth reunion. Mose Brines was again responsible for much hearty singing as he visited the various groups at dinner.

During the night clouds gathered, consequently forcing the Open Air Service indoors. Eugene E. Wilson, president of United Aircraft, gave an address on Leadership in which he urged the seniors to accept the challenge to explore the range beyond the horizon of science and industry.

At the Sunday morning Holy Communion Service the Rev. Clarence E. Ball, '82, presided as usual. At the close of the service a new College Flag was presented in memory of the late Mrs. Vivian Altmaier, and a Roman Wall stone from All Hallows Church, London, was unveiled.

The Chapel was crowded for the 166th Commencement as 96 seniors received their Bachelor's Degrees. The Rev. Michael Coleman, who gave the Commencement address, said to the graduating class, "On you, my brothers, on your age rests the burden of winning the peace — a peace not for America, not for Great Britain, not for a League of Nations, but for the Lord."

HONORARY DEGREES

The following are translations of the citations used in the awarding of six honorary degrees May 17, 1942. The original Latin prose was written by Professor James A. Notopoulos.

EUGENE EDWARD WILSON — Doctor of Science

Orator: This man, oh revered President, is a graduate of our Naval Academy and distinguished himself in the First World War. After attaining the rank of commander he retired from one service to enter another service of our country, becoming president of United Aircraft.

President: He is also a very ardent devotee of Izaak Walton, O son of the South Wind.

Orator: There is a story, revered President, that Fabius Maximus saved Rome by delaying; a greater glory shines upon this man because by speeding he is helping to save America. This arms manufacturer has undertaken and, happily for our country, is carrying on a labor which even Hercules of old would have fled from. Through his ability winged machines, like the wasps of Aristophanes, are pouring forth with wondrous speed, the greatest boon to our country and our allies. I present to you a man worthy of honor, who has spoken well today in our campus about the art of leadership, Eugene Edward Wilson.

MICHAEL COLEMAN — Doctor of Divinity

Good words should be spoken on a good day, oh revered President. The Good Lord will also put an end to these evil times and once more the heavens will smile with suffused light. Then at last, when our most pernicious enemy shall be overcome, from its ruins All Hallows, famous in name and age, for many centuries offering to men the bread of life, will arise once more into the heavens, to the greater glory of God.

This revered man, the priest of this great church, was fearless when in the city of London, as John says in Revelation, "there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth." Then this vicar of God, knowing that salvation only cometh from the Cross, gave solace to the wounded and sick, both of body and soul, a symbol of faith under fire. I present to you this man who pours forth a golden stream of piety, one who is binding us through bonds of friendship and good will more closely into one society of brothers, Michael Coleman.

SAMUEL HERBERT FISHER — Doctor of Laws

Orator: I have heard, oh revered President, that this man when he was at Yale pursued Latin in the manner of the daughters of Danaus. As a result he is now completely in our power and can't do anything about it.

Behold the man, revered President, who is equally prepared to serve his country in war and peace. This distinguished lawyer organized the celebration of the Tercentenary of Connecticut, when we honored our ancestors and their way of life. Having served with distinction as chairman of the Governor's Committee for Safety in the Streets and Highways, he has now, in our hour of danger, become head of the State Defense Council, where he is laboring to make us air wardens, to see to it that the bombs of bombastic Adolph Schickelgruber do not harm us, that everyone should "blackout" his doors and windows, that the passerby in the night should falter when the street lights are darkened. I present to you a man who is easily the first citizen in the eyes of his fellow citizens, Samuel Herbert Fisher.

GEORGE GARDNER MONKS — Master of Arts

Orator: This man, oh revered President, having been well educated at Harvard, Columbia, Oxford and the seminaries of our church, has for the past sixteen years been guiding Lenox School in the practice of virtue, has made it flourishing and famous for an excellent though inexpensive education. This has been his ideal: to do good to our youth and country. Nothing can bestow a greater advantage upon our children, nor a greater service to the country than an excellent school where many have graduated and become distinguished here and elsewhere.

President: It is most fitting that I should also quote to him the verses written by our blessed Babbit and me on a bell from St. Paul's School:

Even as once we sent to you many boys,
So to us they often return again as masters.

Orator: I now present to you, George Gardner Monks, the rector of this school, a man most fitted by his ability to guide our youth to higher things.

JOHN MARSHALL PHILLIPS — Master of Arts

Different things please different men, revered President. It delights this man to know the life and manners of our forefathers as revealed in those works of art which that ancient, lame, and famous craftsman, Vulcan, made: silver cups, spoons, knives, etc. That master ministered unto the gods, but this man to the King and Queen of England, explaining the merits of their own English collection at the World's Fair. Having come from Philadelphia to our neighbor, Yale University, he is now curator of the Mabel Brady Garvan Collection, he teaches American art, and has written an authoritative book on American silver (just between you and me, like Sherlock Holmes, he traces in this book the missing silver plate stolen from King's Chapel in the 18th century by a minister, can you imagine that, oh revered president!). I now present to you, John Marshall Phillips, who is so eminent in his field that he has recently been invested with the Fellowship and Livery of the Goldsmiths and Silversmiths Guild of London.

WILLIAM HUTCHINSON PUTNAM — Master of Arts

Perhaps you remember, oh revered President, the golden saying of our Cicero, "Men resemble the gods in nothing so much as doing good to their fellow citizens." This applies to our fellow citizen who even if he is not a college man truly shows the same love of the arts characteristic of our men. Though a busy business man he has often turned his heart away from the din of the market place impelled by the love and devotion to the city and its citizens. This man has rendered service to our city as president of the Park Board, chairman of the Mayor's Flood Control Commission, director of our Hospital and the Community Chest. I now present to you a man who has always been zealous to do good to our city, William Hutchinson Putnam.

NECROLOGY

GEORGE SHIRAS, HON., 1918

Dr. George Shiras, III, who was awarded honorary degree of Sc.D. at Trinity in 1918 died in Marquette, Michigan, March 25, 1942.

EDWARD D. APPLETON, 1880

Mr. Appleton died at his family home in North Andover, Massachusetts, January 29th at the age of eighty-five. He was vice-president of D. Appleton & Company, New York publishers. He is survived by a brother Charles A. Appleton of the class of 1882. A graduate of St. Paul's School, Mr. Appleton was a member of the University Club, the Century Club, St. Anthony's and the Chicago Historical Society.

SAMUEL N. WATSON, 1882

Dr. S. N. Watson died in Santa Barbara, California, March 27th. A retired Episcopal minister, Dr. Watson held several pastorates in the mid-west before going to Paris where he was rector of the American Church of the Holy Trinity from 1912 to 1918. In 1907 he was decorated as a Chevalier in the Legion of Honor and also received from Belgium the Chevalier Order of Leopold.

THOMAS McKEAN, 1892

Mr. McKean died at his home in Villanova, Pennsylvania, February 7th. He was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School and was well known as an author and dramatist.

ISAAC D. RUSSELL, 1892

Mr. Russell, for many years treasurer of the American Hardware Company, died in the New Britain Hospital last January at the age of 75.

EDWARD G. CHURCHMAN, 1895

Mr. Churchman of Baltimore, Maryland, died February 21, 1942.

SYDNEY K. EVANS, 1895

The Rev. Dr. Evans, retired United States Naval Chaplain, died in Atlantic City March 25th at the age of sixty-nine. He had gone to Atlantic City for a rest after a heart attack. Dr. Evans had been appointed Chaplain in the Navy by President Roosevelt in 1907 and was aboard the U.S.S. Minnesota when it circled the globe with the fleet. In 1915 Dr. Evans was appointed Chaplain at the United States Naval Academy and fifteen years later was made Chief of the Naval Chaplain Corps. He retired in 1937.

WILLIAM S. LANGFORD, 1896

ARCHIBALD M. LANGFORD, 1897

Trinity lost two prominent alumni who were brothers within a month. On February 8th, A. M. Langford, Dean of Peddie School for eighteen years, died in his home at Hightstown, New Jersey. His brother William S. Langford died March 2. William Langford succeeded Walter Camp as secretary of the Football Rules Committee in 1925 and held that post through all the changes that took place in the game until December, 1939, when poor health forced him to retire. In January, 1940, the Touchdown Club of New York named Mr. William Langford for its annual award for an outstanding contribution of permanent value to football.

EDWARD S. TRAVERS, 1898

The Rev. Dr. Travers died April 25th after a four years illness. He was rector of the Church of the Messiah in Rhinebeck, New York, since 1931 and before that had been Chaplain at West Point Military Academy. He was graduated from Berkeley Divinity School and obtained his D.D. degree from the University of Pittsburgh in 1918. In the Spanish-American War he was a private in the First Connecticut Volunteer Infantry.

FRANK T. BALDWIN, 1900

Mr. Baldwin died at his home in Mt. Vernon, New York, on April 9, 1942.

ALFRED B. QUAILE, 1902

Mr. Quaile died at St. Luke's Hospital in New York City on January 14th. For many years Mr. Quaile taught French, Latin and Music at Salisbury School where he was headmaster.

LOUIS GOLDFIELD, M.D., 1913

Dr. Goldfield of New York City died January 20, 1940.

MAX S. BERK(OVSKY), 1918

Word has come to the Alumni Office that Mr. Berk(ovskiy) died in 1936.

SAMUEL J. ALLINSON, 1922

Mr. Allinson died about five years ago in New Haven.

HERMAN ASCH, 1924

Mr. Asch died at the Jewish Memorial Hospital in New York City on January 20th. He entered the teaching profession in September, 1924, and organized and conducted special classes for "dull-normal" pupils. He was a member of a city-wide committee making up a Biology Syllabus and published several articles on Child Development.

WILBERT A. BJORKLUND, 1931

Wilbert A. Bjorklund died February 24 at the Hartford Hospital. He was sales correspondent and assistant sales manager of Curtis 1000, Inc.

WHO'S WHO

A. NORTHEY JONES, 1917

If you ask any Trinity man of the pre-World War I vintage who is the sparkplug of the Class of 1917, he will tell you that it is Allen Northey Jones.

Mr. Jones is a member of an old Trinity family. His father, the Reverend Dr. William Northey Jones of Newtown, Connecticut, is a graduate of the Class of 1888. He has another Trinity son, Dr. Theodore W. Jones, '25.

A. Northey Jones spent his first years after College as a buck private in France. He returned to Trinity for his Master's Degree which he was awarded in 1920. Then began his successful career on Wall Street where, he says, "we are not the gamblers you think we are."

Mr. Jones was with J. P. Morgan & Co. until September, 1935, when the New Deal legislation forced the separation of the security business of J. P. Morgan & Co. from the banking business of that firm. He then became vice-president and director of Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. There he continued the same type of work — raising money for American business corporations. When Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., was dissolved in December, 1941, Mr. Jones became a partner in Morgan Stanley & Co.

Northey Jones has always been an active and popular alumnus. He was president of the Alumni Association of the College from 1932 to 1934 and has also served two terms as alumni trustee before being made a permanent trustee.

He is national treasurer of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity, a director of Doctors Hospital, New York. Until recently he has been a member of the Council of Phi Beta Kappa Alumni Association in New York.

DR. WILLIAM DWYER, 1909

It is unnecessary to review the medical record of Dr. William Dwyer whose reputation has spread far beyond his home town of Hartford.

Equally interesting, however, are the many ingenious extra-curricular activities of this well-known alumnus. To start with he worked his way through College spending a good deal of time as a physical education instructor. In the summer Mr. Weaver, superintendent of schools, appointed him instructor of physical education for the Park Department. In College Dr. Dwyer belonged to the Indoor Track Team, the Sophomore Smoker Committee and the Ivy Board. Even now few of his friends know the part he played as a freshman at the time of the St. Patrick's Day scrap. Harry Maxson and a chosen few (mostly Dr. Dwyer) hoisted the class banner to the top of the Memorial Arch by the Park River the night before the fight in spite of snow that made footing dangerous. A duplicate key and an ingenious mechanical rig made this feat possible.

Dr. Dwyer's mechanical ability continues to help him in his profession and hobbies. He can make his own special medical instruments when necessary and is well known as the doctor who flies and inspects his own airplane.

Dr. Dwyer specializes in ophthalmology, otology, laryngology and rhinology. He belongs to numerous clubs in Hartford and has two children: William, Jr., a senior at Princeton; and an attractive daughter, Frances, who is a junior at Smith and a frequent guest at Trinity proms.

Trinity is proud of Dr. Dwyer as one of the leaders among the many alumni in the medical profession.

AMONG ALUMNI

LYMAN B. BRAINERD, 1930

When Lyman Brainerd was appointed a permanent trustee of Trinity College five years ago, he was probably the youngest trustee in the history of the College. Mr. Brainerd's rapid strides in the field of insurance are indication that Trinity has in him a representative with ability beyond his years whose active interest and affableness will be of great service for a long time.

Shortly after graduation from Trinity, Mr. Brainerd began work for the Hartford Steam Boiler Insurance Company where he was appointed assistant superintendent of agencies in 1937. Two years later he became superintendent of agencies and in January, 1942, was elected a director of the company. In February he was made vice-president in charge of agencies.

Mr. Brainerd is also a civic leader in Hartford. He is a director of the Neuro-Psychiatric Institute, a member of the aviation committee of the State Development Commission, and was recently appointed by the Governor to the aviation committee of the State Defense Council. He is also the officer in charge of operations of the Connecticut Wing of the Civil Air Patrol and is a former chairman of the Connecticut Aeronautical Development Commission.

Lyman Brainerd lives in West Hartford with his wife, the former Judith Pigeon of Wellesley Hills, Massachusetts. They have three children: Lyman B. Brainerd, Jr., age five; Judith, age three; and Richard Pigeon, born in June, 1942.

Obviously, Mr. Brainerd's chief avocation is flying, a hobby started when he was in College. He is a member of the University Club and the Hartford Golf Club.

ARTHUR P. R. WADLUND, 1917

Professor Wadlund has been a brilliant physicist ever since his undergraduate days when he was the only student who thought the courses in physics at Trinity were not too difficult. Now after eighteen years as a member of the College faculty he has been appointed Jarvis Professor of Physics replacing Dr. Henry A. Perkins retiring head of the department.

After graduation from Trinity, Dr. Wadlund joined the great majority of his classmates in France where he soon became a corporal. His first position back in the United States was that of engineer of tests for the Greenfield Tap and Die Corporation. In 1920 he became testing and consulting engineer for the Henry Souther Engineering Company of Hartford.

In the fall of 1923 Dr. Wadlund was appointed assistant professor of physics at Trinity. With a year's leave of absence he finished work on his Doctor's Degree which was awarded to him at the University of Chicago in 1928.

In addition to his work at the College, Dr. Wadlund has been consulting physicist at the Hartford Hospital where his work on X-rays and radium is of tremendous value. He is considered one of the leading authorities in the country in this field.

Dr. and Mrs. Wadlund live in Wethersfield with their three children. The daughter is a graduate of Middlebury. The older son is at the University of Chicago while the younger son is still in secondary school.

Dr. Wadlund is a member of numerous societies and associations relating to physics and has written scientific articles for all of the important journals on the subject.

All Games Will Start At 2 P. M.

The photograph above shows Judge Philip J. McCook, '95, presenting the McCook Trophy to Don Viering, '42. The McCook Trophy goes to that senior who is proficient in sports and at the same time an outstanding leader in other phases of college life. In presenting the award to Viering, football and baseball player, Judge McCook said, "Others gave all they had, but this boy gave just a little more."

Other awards of the year: most valuable player in baseball, Joe Beidler; in football, Al Will; in soccer, Jim Cannon. Dr. Carl Altmaier's tennis team also deserves credit for its brief undefeated season with victories over Vermont, Springfield, Worcester Tech and Coast Guard.

SPORTS

Scully: Trinity 1, Yale 0

Steers: Trinity 7, Princeton 4

Dan Jessee's baseball team had one of its best seasons, losing only the opener to Rutgers and later on a close game (5 to 4) to Amherst although the Trinity nine outhit Amherst 12 to 6. The strength of the Trinity team is implied by the fact that three of its members have attracted the attention of professional managers. Bill Black is reported to have worked out some with the A's, Captain Joe Beidler is now with the Hartford Laurels and Bill Scully had an offer to train for the Boston Braves with Evansville. But the Army wants Scully and Beidler, while Black has two more years at Trinity.

How about next year — and football? Dan Jessee does not know who will be back and cannot plan much in advance. It has been announced, however, that Trinity, like her opponents, will play freshmen on varsity teams.

Most valuable Joe Beidler

ALUMNI NOTES

JACK FOLLANSBEE, '39
First Trinity Graduate Torpedoed

1882 — 1910

Since graduation in 1939, Jack Follansbee has spent almost all of his time aboard ships and has risen from ordinary seaman to purser. On his first trip he sailed to the West Coast only a month after graduation and was accompanied by classmate Bob Muir who is now studying at the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. During the summer Bob and Jack made two trips to the West Coast and back aboard the Chickasaw City and the Steel Exporter, both of the Isthmian Line.

In the fall Jack Follansbee continued his wanderings alone, this time aboard the Steel Engineer to India, Burma and then a 52 day voyage home via Capetown. On this trip his ship put in at Aden, Arabia, while the Italians were bombing the town. It is believed that the Steel Engineer was the last American boat to go east through the Suez Canal.

After returning to New York, Jack worked for two months in the office of the Grace Line before he again had the urge to go to sea. He spent a year sailing between New York and Valparaiso aboard the Santa Lucia as purser's clerk. After eight trips on this ship Jack was transferred to another freighter of the Grace Line where he had the position of purser.

At 11:30 on the night of April 12th, Purser Follansbee was busy in his office. As the ship was making its way peacefully a short distance off the east coast of Florida, Jack heard a terrific explosion and knew immediately what it was. The ship listed severely to starboard. Jack grabbed his life jacket as he rushed to the bridge in order to turn on the emergency lights that would help others find their way to the life boats. By the time he got to his own life boat station, he found that the boat had already been lowered. He therefore slid down one of the lines to his boat on the port side and was the fourth man to take his place in that boat. A few minutes later as the ship was sinking, the men in Jack's life boat picked up two other survivors as the ship's decks became awash. A wave then threw the boat over hatch No. 3 as the freighter was sinking. It was with the greatest of difficulty and a fair amount of good fortune that the survivors in the life boat were able to push clear of the sinking freighter. Meanwhile, they picked up two other sailors, one of whom was in good shape, the other unconscious.

With the Captain at the tiller, the party of eight started for shore. As the others took turns rowing, Jack worked for an hour and a half on the injured man only to find that artificial respiration was of no help because the victim had received a concussion of the brain probably from a missile.

Shortly after leaving the scene of the disaster, the survivors saw a Swedish freighter come close by and meet the same fate. The two life boats along with the survivors from the Swedish freighter in their life boats started rowing for shore. In spite of a heavy sea, the sailors found it possible to step masts in the life boats and to make use of a good breeze. At about 8:00 A.M. they put in near Cocoa, Florida, where the people in that small town were most generous with food and clothing.

Later Jack Follansbee said that the Swedish ship had been caught between the cross fire of two submarines and that it burst into flames quickly. The ship had a large illuminated blue and gold flag showing her identity clearly.

In telling his story, Jack emphasized the hospitality of the people at Cocoa who did everything possible to make all members of the rescued party happy and comfortable. This treatment continued on the way to New York when a Mrs. Donahue who had a private car on the same train supplied all of the survivors with food, cigarettes and money.

One little experience like this is not enough to keep Jack Follansbee on shore. He has recently set out again as purser aboard another Grace Line freighter.

1882 — The Rev. C. E. Ball claims to have been the oldest alumnus at this Commencement in spite of the fact that Judge Joseph Buffington, '75, and William G. Mather, '77, preceded him in College. Mr. Ball entered College after working a number of years. As usual he took again this year the Sunday morning Holy Communion Service.

1883 — Friends of John R. Carter were happy to see him back at Trinity for Commencement after many years of absence. Mr. Carter brought the good news that his brother the Rev. G. Calvert Carter, '87, is back in this country and is living in New York City.

1884 — Lawson Purdy is probably the most faithful and regular of all class leaders. Ever since the Class Agent System was adopted his class has contributed 100% and his class has also had annual reunion dinners for the past twenty years.

1891 — I. K. Hamilton lost his brother Hale May 19. Mr. Hale Hamilton had been a stage and screen star for 40 years.

1892 — T. Welles Goodridge came a long way for his 50th reunion — from Santa Barbara, California. He was probably the only alumnus present who could remember being in the old college buildings on Capitol Hill. When Mr. Goodridge was very young his father took him to see Prof. Johnson, father of the late Frank Johnson. Mr. Goodridge remembers the visit and the old brownstone buildings.

The Rev. Mr. Crabtree of Barrington, R. I., and Mr. Turnbull of Manchester, Conn., were the only others to attend the fiftieth reunion.

1894 — Rev. Wm. M. Bours has recently published an attractive booklet on churchmanship. Mr. Bours has been Chaplain to the Bishop of California since 1919, and has been in the Diocese of California since 1895. His booklet was published by the Recorder Press, San Francisco.

1896 — Last March Time magazine had some interesting paragraphs on Sam Ferguson "a pioneer in low utility rates, power pools, the mercury turbine, many another social and technological change . . ." Time says that Mr. Ferguson looks ahead. Trinity is proud of the way he has been looking ahead for many years.

1901 — James A. Wales is among the alumni whose work has been greatly affected by the war. Therefore he is now vice-president of Kelly Nason, Inc., a New York advertising firm.

1902 — Rev. James Henderson of Saint Alban's School, Washington, continues to be a frequent visitor at Trinity. When the McCook Trophy was awarded to Don Viering this May, it reminded many alumni that Mr. Henderson, present for the week-end, was the first winner of the trophy — in 1902.

Dr. Francis T. Miller has had the honor of being commissioned to write a biography of General MacArthur.

1905 — President Ogilby appointed Ven. W. F. Bulkley Trinity College representative at the inauguration of Dr. Cowles as president of the University of Utah last April. The Ven. Mr. Bulkley is archdeacon of Utah.
