A Word from the Editor

The Alumni of Trinity College will be pleased to learn that Thomas S. Wadlow, '33, who has been on leave from the College, has resumed his duties as Alumni Secretary after having served overseas on a mine-sweeper off Normandy and in the Mediterranean. He returns to a College which is once again resounding to the bustle of civilian undergraduate life. It is a stir felt not only on the campus but among the Alumni as well. The years ahead will see much activity on the part of Trinity's graduates.

For a while I shall continue working on the Alumni News, while Tom takes up the Alumni Fund and the various other functions of his office. We welcome his return, knowing of old his interest in, and concern for, all that pertains to Trinity's Alumni. For myself, I can only say that I have enjoyed my work as Acting Alumni Secretary, and that I have enjoyed making the acquaintance of a great many of my fellow Alumni. I wish to express my thanks to those who have cooperated so enthusiastically in the Alumni Fund and in other matters in which we have been mutually interested.

The Navy at Trinity

Visitors to the Trinity College Chapel, examining the carvings on the choir benches, sooner or later come upon a pew-end topped by the figure of John Paul Jones. This pew-end was given to Trinity College at Commencement in October, 1944, by the men of the Navy V-12 Program stationed here, to commemorate their residence at the College from July 1, 1943, to October 30, 1945. On the arm of the bench is a whale, symbolic of that early mariner of Bible story. In the main panel the Constitution, under full sail, heels through a choppy sea. As a motto to be inscribed on their gift, the Apprentice Seamen have whimsically adopted the famous words, "We have not yet begun to fight."*

The Navy's V-12 Program began operation on July 1, 1943, commencing simultaneously in over two hundred colleges and universities throughout America. On that date approximately eighty thousand men, especially selected as officer candidates, began their training. Some of them were barely out of high school; others were "fleet men" with battle experience. The courses which the colleges offered them were, basically, the regular academic programs modified and augmented to suit the particular needs of the war emergency.

Trinity College has contributed its share to the V-12 Program. The Navy's peak enrollment at the College was 410 in 1943-1944. The Navy Unit started at the College with an enrollment of 402 men, worked up to the peak of 410, and tapered off after the spring of 1944 to a final figure of 140 in October, 1945. The men slept in double-decker "sacks" in the dormitories. Commons became their mess hall, and a large annex was built onto the College kitchen.

different officers. From July 1 through October, 1943, Lieutenant Ives Atherton was Commanding Officer, with Lieutenants

Frederick E. Mueller and Vincent J. Conroy, respectively, Executive and Physical Training Officers. Lt. Atherton was transferred at the end of October, 1943. Lt. Mueller succeeded him and continued as Commanding Officer until the summer of 1945, at which time Lt. Conroy, who had been Executive Officer under Lt. Mueller, took over the command of the Station. Lt. Conroy's Executive Officer was Lt. Forshag.

BOND SALES

During its stay the Navy has not remained aloof from extra-curricular activities, but has entered into the life of the College and of the Community. On three occasions the V-12 Unit staged War Bond Drives, under the able and enthusiastic direction of Lt. Conroy. The most successful of these was a drive put on between December 1 and December 7, 1944, in which Trinity led the entire nation in quantity of War Bonds sold during the Navy's Pearl Harbor Day Extra War Bond Campaign. The winning figure was $84,478.50. The culminating event of the Drive was the presentation to the Unit of a pennant by Admiral Thomas C. Hart, former commander of the Navy's Asiatic fleet, and now United States Senator from Connecticut.

Another Bond Drive on July 4, 1945, was staged on the College campus. Several thousands attended the day-long rally, during the course of which Lieutenant-Commander R. B. Downes, damage control officer on the historic Franklin, gave an address in which he described the last action of his ship. At the rally Italian rifles, German shell cases, mess kits, helmets, and a Nazi flag were given away to the bond purchasers. A display of Navy equipment including a water changing machine for the purification of drinking water in combat was displayed.

The total issue value of War Bonds sold by the Navy in its three drives (Independence Day, 1944, Pearl Harbor Day, 1944, and Independence Day, 1945) came to $164,453.50. Moreover, the Unit has had better than 96% participation in the War Bond allotment program in which bonds have been purchased by salary deductions.

NAVY SHOWS

The Navy men put on a number of shows during their stay at the College. The first, a variety show accompanied by an orchestra selected from the men at the Station, was staged in September, 1943, in the Chemistry Auditorium. The second Navy show, a more ambitious undertaking, was a presentation of Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, suspiciously altered in important respects to resemble Navy life at Trinity. One of the Apprentice Seamen taking part in this show turned out, to everyone's surprise, to be none other than Professor Perkins attired in Navy blue and equipped with a clarinet, upon which he played several tunes for the edification of the audience. Needless to say, he was enthusiastically received. A third Navy performance, again a variety show, was presented in May, 1944.

In the fall of 1944 the Navy "revived" the Jesters, putting on the Thurber-Nugent play, The Male Animal, at the Avery Memorial. After two performances at the Avery, the show "hit the road," and put on a performance for the hospitalized soldiers at nearby Bradley Field.

REVIEWS

A feature of the Navy life at the College which has been of much interest to visitors has been the program of Saturday reviews on the football field. The seamen prepared for these reviews in marching contests held on the campus under the elms. During the week the platoons would compete with each other for honors in drill. On Saturdays, the entire company assembled on the football field for review by the officers of the Station. In August, 1944, Governor Baldwin, accompanied by Brigadier General Reginald B. Delacour, Adjutant General of Connecticut, reviewed the Unit. At the June, 1945, Commencement, the V-12 Unit was reviewed by Chief of Naval Personnel, Vice Admiral

Randall Jacobs, to whom the College awarded the degree of Doctor of Laws. In his Commencement address Admiral Jacobs termed Japan a "spiritual swamp" and added, "We will never rest easy until the sunlight of truth is let in."

SPORTS NIGHTS

An important feature of College life was the program of six Sports Night shows presented in the Alumni Hall gymnasium. The first of these was presented on September 1, 1944, under the direction of Lt. Conroy, then Physical Training Officer. The program included eight boxing bouts, two wrestling matches, and exhibition boxing by professionals. So well was the show received that more of the same kind were planned. Music, entertainment, and refreshments were included in the programs. At the end of the sixth and last Sports Night, statuettes were presented to the outstanding performers of each of the shows.

ACADEMIC INSTRUCTION

It is needless to say that the academic demands of the Navy were somewhat different from those of an institution which has always been known as one of New England's liberal arts colleges. There was an immediate demand for large numbers of mathematics courses, particularly in specialized courses, such as celestial navigation. Professor Hughes (German), who already held the positions of Dean and Acting President, took on a course in Advanced Calculus. Professor Burger (Biology), Dr. Copeland (Biology), and Professor Notopoulos (Classics) gave courses in Plane Trigonometry, Differential and Integral Calculus, and Analytical Geometry, to help out the busy staff of regular mathematics men, Professors Dadourian, Mitchell, and Wyckoff, and Dr. Thielheimer.

The English Department, too, was augmented by a number of "re-tooled" teachers. Professors Scott and Naylor (Romance Languages), Professor Watters (Music), and Mr. Taylor (Fine Arts), found themselves instructing the Navy's equivalent of English A. It would be tedious to enumerate all the adjustments of this sort made by the faculty. Suffice it to add that Professor Barret (Classics) taught German and History; Professors Shepard and Allen (English) and Professor Bangs (German) taught Naval History; Professor Towle (Economics) taught United States History; and that by the end of the Program few of the College's "regular" courses bore much resemblance to their earlier civilian selves.

FACULTY

The faculty has been engaged in war work outside the campus. Professor Bissonnette is now in Biarritz, France, teaching biology to the Army. Professor Scott, of the Romance Language Department, is with the Office of Strategic Service in San Francisco doing work in Japanese. Professor Altmaier has been in the Marines, and Professor Helmbold has had an odyssey in the Mediterranean, North Africa, Italy, and other points, as a Navy officer. Professor Mitchell spent this past summer as a consultant at the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft in East Hartford. Dan Jesse early this year was given the temporary rank of Major in the Army, and visited various Caribbean Army centers, giving instruction on football techniques. Together with Ray Oosting he has now left for the Pacific, where the two will give instruction in football, basketball, and other sports. Ray also holds the rank of Major. He spent most of the summer in Lexington, Virginia, giving instruction in basketball and volleyball. Professor Taylor has been serving as the Executive Officer of the V-12 Unit at Lawrence College in Appleton, Wisconsin.

Professor Doolittle, '31, has been engaged in research at M.I.T. on radar. Lieutenant-Commander Walt McCloud has been stationed in Kodiak, Alaska, and at Georgia Pre-Flight in the Navy. Ralph Erickson has been discharged from the Army, in which he has been serving in the reconditioning program of the Air Corps. Captain William G. Wendell, of the Marines, has been stationed in Washington. Lawrence Lafore, of the History Department, is now connected with the State Department and is stationed in Paris. His colleague, George Cooper, received an Ensignship in the Navy after studying Japanese at Boulder, Colorado. Subsequently he was honorably discharged from the Navy and joined the Department of State. He is now in London. Mr. Kramer has been connected with the Red Cross. Jack Williams, '36, formerly of the French Department, has been studying Japanese in Washington and is now with the Navy in the Pacific. Mr. Daniel B. Risdon has seen service in France, Germany, and Czechoslovakia with an armored unit. Lieutenant Norton Coe, also of the English A staff, received his commission not long ago at New Orleans in the Transportation Corps. Tom Wadlow, '33, our Alumni Secretary, has recently resumed his duties here at the College after serving on a minesweeper in the Mediterranean and European theatres.

ALUMNI

Anyone who has seen the Alumni Notes sections of the Alumni News during the past few years does not need to be told that Trinity's Alumni have been serving in all parts of the world. The College has had over a thousand Alumni in service, many of whom have kept in touch with the College. Notices of their doings have been regularly published in the News.

RETURNING TRINITY MEN

The College is looking forward to the return of the Trinity men whose undergraduate careers were interrupted by the war. A number of these men have already come back; among them Dave Tyler, Don Puffer, Jim Kinsella, High Moore, Jack Prall, Jim Kapteijn, Reed Schroeder, and Frank Borden. The College Admissions Office would like to hear from all men who look forward to returning. Service men who plan to return to the College can get back into academic ways even before discharge by taking U. S. Armed Forces Institute correspondence courses. Trinity gives credit for these courses on the same basis as the college under whose auspices they are taken.

A representative platoon poses for its picture, with "4-O", the Unit's mascot

Professor Perkins Defends "4-O"

To the Editor of the Courant:

I wish to correct your serious blunder regarding the little white dog that proudly led the Navy V-12 procession last Thursday at the Old State House. Both the Courant and the Times referred to him by the ignoble name of "HO," while in reality he rejoices in the proud title of "4-O," meaning perfect physical condition, in naval parlance. Also both papers erred in calling him the mascot of the Drum and Bugle Corps. Actually he has been mascot of the entire V-12 Unit for about a year.

Apparently "4-O" adopted the Navy boys rather than they him, and his conduct in the capacity of self-appointed mascot has been exemplary. He even won the Purple Heart decoration for wounds received during a gallant action against another dog that invaded the campus without a permit. He is devoted to the uniform, though he never gushes to express loyalty, but carries himself with dignity at all times, and pays no attention whatever to civilians. He ignores them as if they did not exist.

In the classroom, where he often honors the instructor with his presence, he is quiet, orderly and discreet; in fact, his conduct is quite human, including going to sleep if the lecture bores him. This letter will, I hope, not only correct the errors already noted, but also serve as a well-deserved tribute to a perfect mascot. May "4-O" long lead the procession!

Navy Sports

The past twenty-eight months have been active ones in the Department of Physical Education. Given the task of developing in the Apprentice Seamen sent here by the Navy a high level of physical fitness and maintaining that level once reached, the Department set up a schedule of activities which had body-building value and which lent themselves readily to a mass exercise program.

The program as finally evolved included four distinct phases:

1. BASIC PROGRAM

Required of all first term men and second or subsequent term men who failed to reach a satisfactory level of physical fitness. Activities included were calisthenics, running, rope climbing, iron wand drills, rope skipping, tumbling, combatives, physical fitness tests, and so on.

2. MAINTENANCE PROGRAM

Required of all second and subsequent term men who had reached a satisfactory level of physical fitness. Swimming and life saving, group games, wrestling, boxing, relays, and athletic sports formed the basis of this program.

It might be of interest to note here briefly some of the results of our swimming program. While approximately ten per cent of the men were unable to swim upon entering college, every man who remained at least one term succeeded in meeting the minimum Navy requirements. In addition, the following tests were passed by the over nine hundred men who attended Trinity as Apprentice Seamen:

Navy Third Class Test	911
Navy Second Class Test	855
Navy First Class Test	593
Amer. Red Cross Functional Swimming	758
American Red Cross Senior Life Saving	372
American Red Cross Instructor's Course	148

3. INTRAMURAL SPORTS AND DEMONSTRATION

As a supplement to the required work, a continuing program of intramural sports was offered with excellent participation and keen competition, not only among the V-12 boys but also from our own civilian students. The most popular sports were touch football, softball, basketball, water baseball, swimming, and track.

Frequent "Sports Nights" were held, under the able direction of Athletic Instructor Sp. (A) Trozzi, with the emphasis on boxing and wrestling. To round out the programs, demonstrations of Warfare Aquatics were given to enthusiastic audiences in our own pool, and also in several of the pools in the greater Hartford area.

4. VARSITY ATHLETICS

A distinct effort was made to provide the men with an adequate program of inter-collegiate competition. Despite the many severe obstacles to be overcome, such as travel restrictions and the difficulty of securing suitable opponents, representative teams were organized in basketball, swimming, track, and baseball.

Basketball, under the direction of Mr. Oosting, enjoyed unusual success, numbering among its victims such teams as Yale, Holy Cross, Wesleyan, and Williams. The play of Ed Faber, a V-12 transfer from Cornell, was especially noteworthy. Although a marked man, "Red" averaged eighteen points per game, and according to many basketball enthusiasts was one of the best players ever to wear the blue and gold on the court.

The 1943 track team broke several long-standing college records and was our first undefeated track group since 1932. Pete Torrey, Parker Carleton, Lou Meyers, Joe Piligian, C. A. Campbell, and Ray Halsted were outstanding performers.

Baseball, under Mr. Jessee, also compiled a good record, particularly the 1943 team, which defeated, among others, the Hartford Senators (Eastern League Champions that year), Yale, and Wesleyan. "Curt" Baker, a transfer from Springfield College, was a great pitcher and was largely responsible for most of the wins.

November marks the end of the Navy's stay at the College and the return to an all-civilian student body. Plans have already been formulated for a resumption of athletic competition with our traditional rivals. Basketball, swimming, and baseball teams will be organized this year with football coming into the picture next fall. The support of the Alumni in our athletic program in the past is greatly appreciated and it is hoped that this support may continue, not only by attendance at games, but also in interesting prospective students in the College.

PHILIP BARTLETT GALE

Now may he rest who has kept faith so long
 With those commandments that bind word and deed
 To worthy action. Ever was he keyed
 To rectitude, and, strong among the strong,
 He welcomed problems, and the steep ascent
 To tasks exacting, and to ventures wide.
 As leader he was called to plan and guide,
 And think in terms of a broad continent.
 His fruitful years a host of friendships brought
 Since men of all degrees had learned to trust
 His purpose, and his frank and steadfast word.
 And when he passed as, in our turn, we must,
 Regret and grief on every hand were heard,
 And praise unstinted for the good he wrought.
