OCTOBER 1970

Professor Nye Appointed Dean

Edwin P. Nye, professor of engineering at Trinity for 11 years, has been appointed Dean of the Faculty. He succeeds Dr. Robert M. Fuller who has been appointed president of Oberlin College.

Dean Nye has been Hallden Professor of Engineering and Chairman of the Department since joining the faculty in 1959. He will continue as a professor of engineering and will teach one course in thermodynamics this fall. Professor August E. Sapega has been named acting chairman of the engineering department.

A native of Atkinson, N.H., Dean Nye was graduated from the University of New Hampshire in 1941 with highest honors. He taught engineering at the University of N.H. for two years and then conducted research at the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics at Langley Field, Va. He also studied as a Gordon McKay Fellow at Harvard University, receiving a Master of Science Degree in 1947.

Prior to coming to Trinity, he taught thermodynamics and power plants at Pennsylvania State University for 12 (see NYE, page 3)

SPECIAL REPORT

ANNUAL GIVING

Alumni support reaches $187,118, highest in the history of the Alumni Fund!

Average gift of both alumni and parents reaches new highs!

These are the highlights of the Annual Giving Report, included as a special feature in this issue, beginning on page 7.

Some 423 freshmen, the largest class in Trinity history, reported to the campus Thursday, September 10. The class includes 176 coeds as the College began its second year of coeducation and its 148th academic year.

The entering class brings the total expected enrollment of the College to a new high of 1,499 students, an increase of 9.5 percent over a year ago when 1,368 students attended.

The total number of coeds this fall is 439, including 38 exchange students from other colleges, compared with 172 women a year ago of whom 13 were on an exchange status.

The Freshman Class was drawn from a record of 2,476 completed applications, an increase of some 26 percent over the number of applications a year ago. The increase was from women applicants with the number of applications from men consistent with previous years.

The new class had four days of optional activities to learn about the campus, the community and meet their classmates before classes began.

An all-College Convocation is planned at which President Lockwood will speak and, the next day, Trinity's newest class will assemble in the Chapel for the traditional Matriculation ceremonies. Hartford Mayor Antonina Uccello is scheduled to deliver the main address.

Leo P. Giardi, M.D., '40, one of 20 alumni doctors in Hartford area who volunteered to give physical examinations to youngsters in National Summer Youth Program conducted at the Ferris Center. (See story page 15.)

Fall Reunion Offers Seeing Trin 'In Action'

What is going on up at the College anyway?

How many times has the question been heard from alumni. Well, you won't have to ask it this month. You can come back and find out for yourself.

That is what Reunion '70 is all about. Trinity's first fall reunion—Friday, Sept. 25, Saturday, Sept. 26 and Sunday Sept. 27—offers a unique opportunity for the alumnus to see his College as it is today.

The campus, crisp from the fall air, is full of activity as student and faculty alike get geared up for the year ahead. You can hear students tell it like it is.

John Heyl Named Alumni Secretary

John L. Heyl, a 1966 graduate of the College has been named alumni secretary.

He succeeds John A. Mason '34, who has held various posts in the administration since 1946 including the last 10 years as alumni secretary. Mr. Mason will return to the campus in January and serve as assistant to the president on alumni affairs.

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Heyl attended Loomis School and, after receiving a B.A. from Trinity, did graduate work at Brown University where he was a teaching assistant in the Department of Anthropology.

He taught for two years in Thomaston, Me., and last year taught at the Hyde School in Bath, Me. While in Maine, he was the owner of a shrimp boat.

While at Trinity, where he was a Dean's List student, Mr. Heyl was a special advisor to African students on an exchange program and spent the summer of 1963 studying educational systems in Africa with a Trinity professor. Mr. Heyl has recently returned from Europe where he was vacationing with his wife, the former Janet McLaughlin of Ridgewood, N.J.

Attend one of their classes, talk to them in the Cave and attend a panel on "Student Involvement in Campus Activity and the Community."

Reunion '70!

Talk with the faculty. Greet some of your old profs. They will give you their seasoned views on what is happening and likely to happen. They knew Trinity when and they know Trinity now.

Reunion '70!

And of course you can greet your classmates and attend the president's reception and dinner. Hear his "State of the College" message Friday night and attend the annual luncheon in the Field House Saturday noon.

Reunion '70!

Back in 1967, David Beers, '57 and his wife Peggy attended his 10th reunion at the College. It was held after commencement and Beers found it a "listless affair."

But he didn't leave it at that. He and Peggy pondered why the reunion was "listless" for them and concluded that it was the wrong time of the year. They wrote a proposal to move the reunion to the fall and their suggestions and arguments for the move were printed in the spring issue of the Alumni Magazine, 1968.

In part the Beers couple wrote: "What we envisage by 'reunion' at Trinity is a return of the alumni to see the College both at work and at play. It is not entirely reunion of classmates looking back at old college days, but also a new union of thinking men and a living college..."

And they wrote: "The alumni body can hardly be given much of the essence of the College merely by being told about it by a tired administration on a sun-baked and empty campus."

From the Beers plan, as it came to be known, and the comments that followed, reunion was moved by the Alumni Executive Committee from the weekend after Commencement to September, effective in 1970.

As the Alumni Magazine with the Beers plan was coming off the press in the spring of 1968, events on college and university campuses were suddenly making front page news.

And in 1969 disruptions continued and in the spring of 1970 it was Kent State, Jackson State and the national college strike movement.

Much has been written about those days and even more has been uttered. What about Trinity? What effect did all this have on the College? What about coeducation and the new curriculum? Peggy and David Beers couldn't have known the dramatic events that would occur in the spring of 1968 and since. But ironically they wrote in 1967: "We fuss about the generation gap, let's try to close it. The fall is probably the best time to see the student's life."

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

There is no doubt that having an AIESEC traineeship in a foreign country is one of the best things a student can do in the summer. During the months of the traineeship the student gets to know two different worlds, the business world, where he is involved directly through the traineeship assignment and on the other hand the student world "on the spot." I have been lucky enough to see and learn both these worlds and furthermore, I have had the opportunity of living with a family here in Hartford, so there has been a third world for me to see. Actually AIESEC-Trinity has solved the accommodation of the foreign trainees in an ideal way. All of us six trainees, representing France, Holland, Japan, Peru, Switzerland and Finland lived with families in the same neighborhood, practically in the same block on North Oxford-North Beacon Streets. And there has really been a lot of interaction in a very international atmosphere. I have been especially lucky, as a student of economics, to stay with the family of Dr. LeRoy Dunn, Trinity associate professor of economics. In that way I have had a special opportunity to learn new things, new aspects of the American economy, educational system, politics and many other things. And of course Trinity College. I am very impressed by Trinity Campus, especially the sports and recreation facilities it offers. The campus seems to be a community itself, which is completely different from the European type of universities and colleges. The only thing I am sorry for is that I missed all student activities. I'll be back in Finland when the school year begins.

One of the very few not-so-pleasant things here in Hartford has been the hot and humid climate. But the weather seems to be beyond AIESEC's control.

Comparisons between the European and American ways of living can, of course, be made, but I want to leave these comparisons undone because AIESEC is international, and one of its major tasks is to eliminate differences between nations and spread knowledge and understanding among the same nations.

I only want to say that I am very proud of the American students in Europe are offered the same hospitality as I have been offered by the company AIESEC-US, Trinity College and first of all my host family.

Congratulations on the Reporter. Its format I think encourages immediate reading. All too often I put the Magazine away to read later—and never found the time.

To the Editor:

I read with pleasure the article concerning a possible New England athletic conference. Trinity has had many "championship" teams in the past. A formal conference would allow our teams to become official champions.

William F. Morrison '57

The proposed New England Small College Conference is not a "league" in the competitive sense. It more accurately represents a group of institutions which agree on the roles and principles of conduct for intercollegiate athletics.

To the Editor:

Perhaps I can throw some light on the paradox of our professional teaching and scientific brethren who lean to the far left and promote socialism and radical thinking.

I had the good fortune to attend an excellent liberal arts college (Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.) and was awarded a BS degree (non-violent) in 1940.

IT DIDN'T TAKE LONG for me to notice that there were two different types of students.

One was serious, solemn, nonathletic, extremely bright, nongregarious and devoid of humor. These boys burned the candle every night, earned grades that never dropped below B+, made Phi Beta Kappa.

This type also was not invited to join fraternities, didn't like beer busts and had only a nodding acquaintance with girls.

THE REST OF US studied seriously, but had a wonderful four years which were happily spiced and balanced between studies, sports, girls, fraternities, poker, billiards, beer and just plain living and learning to adjust to the outside world and each other.

In other words, we were normal.

The "grinds," as we cruelly called them, all graduated grimly with honors and promptly went on to graduate schools, never realizing that they were as uneducated as a computer.

In due course, they attained more academic honors and in their thin armor of PhDs became teachers, professors and scientists.

THIS UNHAPPY personality does not fit into our society. He sits owlishly on the fringe and thinks, and because of his very nature and background, his thinking is radical and negative.

He is incompetent to teach our young people, yet the preponderance of college professors are those poor souls.

Mr. White's letter appeared originally in The Arizona Republic.

To the Editor:

Volume 1, No. 1 of the Trinity Reporter was recently received. As the editor of a new publication you probably are interested in learning a reader's impression of this paper.

I am not a judge of news periodicals; however, I can give my thoughts on this particular issue. Facts were well presented. The layout pleases me. The captions are well marked and relative to the subject covered. The grammar is good. I would be willing to pay for this newspaper so that I might have current information on Trinity's events and alumni happenings. Why issue it free?

Now for one criticism; this does not apply to your editorial work, but to Trinity management and the students. On page 3, you show a photograph of the damage done outside President Lockwood's office by some evil, scatterbrained selfish-thinking bums. On page 1, you have a feature article on the anti-war protests of 850 students. In the same mail that I received my copy of your paper, I also received a request for donation from my class secretary, and before that a similar request from my fraternity. Now tell me this: how do you (or anyone up there) reconcile a request for financial help with the thinking and actions of so many instructors and students as your paper states?

If and when you are able to print as fact that the vandals have been identified and have indemnified the college in full, or when the entire student body has been assessed the amount of the damages and paid for it, then I might consider supporting the college. There is a responsibility of management in any enterprise to operate that enterprise successfully. If unable to do so, then it is time to consider some changes or to close up shop!

R.W. Hildebrand '27

Mr. Hildebrand's letter reached the Editors too late for the last (June) issue. He raises an important question. First, we agree the fire in Downes Memorial was an inexcusable act. However, there is no indication that it was set by anyone associated with the College and arbitrarily assessing the student body would be, in our view, a worse crime.

Secondly, the so-called strike movement was misnamed. Classes continued at Trinity, there was no coercion on any individual or any damage to property. It was part of a nationwide outpouring of youthful dissent directed at the federal government and, in particular, to the policies in Vietnam and the entering of troops into Cambodia.

While we must keep order (and the "strike" was orderly), we recognize that students are concerned about contemporary problems and quite properly explore solutions while they learn. This nation has traditionally turned to its colleges to produce educated citizenry who can make sound judgments based on reason and rational discourse.

In these complex times, colleges and universities are more necessary than ever to meet the challenges to our republic. It is a time for more support — not less. Our adversaries would like nothing better than to see us "close up shop."

Student-run

Seminars Aiding Area High Schools

School will open in September for the unique student-run high school seminar program at Trinity which celebrates its fourth birthday this year. The program, which was conceived by Trinity students, is designed:

- ...to offer an opportunity for an exchange of ideas between various segments of the Greater Hartford community.
- ...to permit high school students with intellectual desires to increase their scope by taking an advanced course seldom, if ever, covered in a normal high school curriculum.
- ...to increase awareness in the problems of the twentieth century.
- ...to concentrate on attracting that student who might not be planning on entering college, but who is intellectually keen, in order that he may be stimulated into continuing his education.
- ...to make good use of the facilities of Trinity College: i.e., majors in their fields of study.

The program has the support of the Non-Athletic Activities Board of Control of the Connecticut Association of Secondary Schools which allows the Trinity students to circulate information in the high schools and to work through the guidance counselors.

The seminars are held for an hour one night a week and cover a wide range of material. No tests are given and papers, although willingly accepted, are not mandatory. The only charge to the high school pupil is the cost of his textbooks. Classes are held on the Trinity campus.

The program has been accepted with great enthusiasm since its inception in 1966 and Trinity students have been quick to volunteer as discussion leaders. The program has been enhanced by the leadership and assistance of competent faculty and administrative advisors including Alexander A. Mackimmie, chairman of the education department and former principal of Bulkeley High School, Dr. Roy Heath, former dean of students, and N. Robbins Winslow, dean of educational services.

Course offerings for this year include: "How to Keep a Group Together—An Introduction to Sociology," "Violence and Nonviolence," "Sculpture in the 20th Century," "A Way of Thinking—Logic and Philosophical Analysis," "The New American Theatre," "The Rise of Fascism—Germany: 1918-1933," "American Ethnic Groups—Problems of Immigration and Assimilation" and "Contemporary Literature: A Study in Black Humor."

If the alumni find it hard to understand the students of today, imagine how students view alumni. Much of the "gap" could close over coffee, in a classroom, during a panel discussion or on the sidelines of the soccer match and in the stands at Jessee Field.

And there are other activities. A drama production, the opening of an art exhibit by Professor John Taylor and a film society program, all on Friday. On Saturday morning, the Chapel bells will summon the alumni to a Memorial Service for Dan Jessee.

A look at "Changes in Education in the '70's." is the subject of a panel in the late morning. Saturday noon will bring the traditional alumni luncheon in the Field House with a football game to follow then receptions and class dinners.

In addition to the department chairmen with whom Dean Nye will confer regularly, President Lockwood has formed a Special Program Council to coordinate those programs lying outside normal departmental purview and to advise the dean on related curricular matters. Members of the Council are: Dr. Drew A. Hyland, associate professor of philosophy, for Experimental Programs; Dr. Clyde D. Exchange Program Attracts 47 Coeds From Six Colleges

Forty-seven women students have been accepted under the Twelve College Exchange Program to spend either all or part of the 1970-71 academic year at Trinity. The 47 coeds—three from Vassar, eight from Smith, six from Mt. Holyoke, one from Connecticut College, six from Wellesley, and 24 from Wheaton—will join the approximately 1,450 undergraduates normally enrolled.

Thirty-one Trinity students, including two women, have been accepted by eight member colleges of the program to spend all or part of the next academic year at the following campuses: five to Vassar, eleven to Smith, two to Mt. Holyoke, three to Connecticut College, four to Wellesley, one to Wesleyan, three to Wheaton and one to Williams.

Since the resources of any one educational institution are limited, the program offers students a wider choice of educational opportunities than can be available on one campus.

Air Force, College Agree ROTC to End In June '71

The College and the Air Force have mutually agreed to terminate the AFROTC program on the campus effective June 1971.

The agreement was reached this summer and was based on dwindling enrollment in the program. Currently there are four seniors and four juniors enrolled in the AFROTC program, far below the minimum of 10 officer candidates each year which the Air Force seeks.

In announcing agreement to discontinue the program, James P. Goode, assistant secretary of the Air Force for manpower and reserve affairs, wrote President Lockwood, "The Air Force has been proud of the ROTC unit at Trinity College, the support of the program by you and your administration, and the Air Force officers produced by the unit. Every consideration possible will be accorded students currently enrolled in the AFROTC program."

The request to discontinue the program came from Dr. Lockwood after he and General B.B. Cassidy, commandant of the AFROTC headquarters, Maxwell Air Force Base, had concluded "neither the Air Force nor Trinity can justify continuing the program when so few are involved."

In his letter to the Secretary of the Air Force, Dr. Lockwood wrote: "...since it is in our mutual interest so to terminate the program, I trust that this discontinuance may occur without prejudice to any future reestablishment of a program should the occasion warrant."

The announcement mutually to discontinue the program next June comes after a year in which the program had been one of the targets of anti-war efforts. The student body had voted in May to urge the faculty to discontinue academic credit and on May 13 the faculty voted 53-47 to eliminate academic credit for participation in AFROTC after June 1971.

The Air Force ROTC program has been at Trinity since 1948. At the height of its enrollment in 1953, there were 553 students, or more than half of the undergraduate student body participating. However, enrollment has steadily declined since the end of the Korean Conflict.

chairman of the department. He succeeds Dr. BLANCHARD W. MEANS who has served as Brownell Professor of Philosophy and department chairman since 1956. Dr. Means will continue to teach on a part-time basis and will be available to assist the new chairman.

DAVID R. BURAN, assistant professor of physical education, has been named head track coach. In addition to teaching physical development, karate and wrestling, he is a defensive line coach of varsity football.

Dr. MILLER BROWN, a member of the faculty since 1965, has been promoted to assistant professor of philosophy.

RALPH L. MADDY has been named registrar and LEWIS J. GOVERNMAN '68, assistant registrar.

Dr. JAMES M. VAN STONE, professor and researcher, has been named chairman of the biology department. He succeeds Dr. J. WENDELL BURGER who will continue to teach as the J. Pierpont Morgan Professor of Biology.

Miss ELLEN MULQUEEN, former assistant dean of students at Rhode Island College, has been named assistant director of the Mather Campus Center.

New faculty appointments include...Dr. DENNIS H. WRONG, Dorrance Professor of Sociology for the Christmas Term...THOMAS P. BAIRD, associate professor of art...JAMES R. BRADLEY '57, assistant professor of classics...JACK DANIELS, assistant professor of physical education...RICHARD K. FENN, the director of admissions. E. MAX PAULIN, who joined the admissions department in 1968, has been named admissions liaison to the freshman class and assistant director. Miss ELENOR G. REID had been promoted to associate director and Miss ROBIN J. WASSERSUG, a June graduate from Radcliffe College, has joined the department as assistant director.

JOHN H. CASSIDY has been appointed assistant dean for residential life.

Dr. SHIRLEY JONES, lecturer in astronomy, was a guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Nantucket Maria Mitchell Association. She served as acting director of the Maria Mitchell Observatory during the summer.

Dr. ALBERT C. JACOBS, Hon. '68 and president emeritus, now serves as chairman of the board of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston. He is also editor of the "Diamond," a publication of Psi Upsilon fraternity.

Dr. MARK M. SHAMAMY, assistant professor of engineering, will present a paper—"Comparison of Experimental and Theoretical Results for the Hydrostatic Bulging of Circular Sheets"—at the fall meeting of the Society for Experimental Stress Analysis in Boston. Co-Author of the paper is Dr. N.M. Lang of the General Motors Research Laboratories where Dr. Shamamy worked before joining the Trinity faculty in 1968.

Dr. DREW A. HYLAND, a member of the faculty since 1967, has been promoted to associate professor of philosophy.

The Hudson River

*A smart Trinity man conceived a mighty plan,
And straightway set the project into motion;
He built a laboratory boat and he set the thing afloat;
Now Trinity's the gem of all the ocean!*

In my time at College we still sang that song of Trinity's one time prowess in pelagic science. But in those mid-Thirties days, ferrets not fish were the chief objects of Tom Bissonette's biological investigations, and marine biology got short shrift except in the Vernon Street choruses.

Apparently by the day Bob Boyle arrived on The Hill in the mid-Forties, Wendell Burger had shifted Trin back to its fabled forte. How else, at least, can one explain the fact that Boyle has ever since been fonder of fish than of food?—though he can tell you a lot about which of the former make the best of the latter.

On the other hand, if Trinity is indeed where Boyle acquired even a large fraction of the erudition apparent in his recent book "The Hudson River," the College owes him a doctorate rather than the B.A. he's credited with in the Alumni Directory. For "The Hudson" offers more fascinating information about the fish, fowl, flies, and folk that dwell in, on, or near the river than I had ever conceived of one man's knowing. The book is replete with authoritative piscatorial data (including Latin names, relevant measurements, and pertinent dates) for the most careful student, as well as engaging "fish stories" by a born raconteur. It gives a highlight history of "the great river of the mountains" from the earliest geologic times onward, as well as colorful folklore of the successive ethnic waves that settled the river's banks. And the flora and fauna of its total watershed are well surveyed, too.

Boyle aptly calls his book "a natural and unnatural history." The natural Hudson he loves as deeply as a member of his family. The unnatural things that man has done to so much of the river grieve him sorely, and he heaps scorn on its despoilers—the towns that still dump their raw sewage into the stream, the railroad that spills in engine sludge, the power companies that disfigure its banks, heat its water, and kill its fish. More important, he suggests ways these despoilers may be fought—as he himself has fought them. He has sued Penn Central for oil spillage, given crucial expert testimony at public hearings to stop Con Edison's rape of Storm King, crusaded against Governor Rockefeller's pet shore-ruining road project, lent his voice and verve to a number of conservation organizations, and effectively used the power of his talented pen often in Sports Illustrated, where he is a senior editor.

To pursue his study of the Hudson's vast variety and profusion of life, Trinity man Boyle has his own laboratory boat. He keeps it on Haverstraw Bay near where he lives at Croton-on-Hudson. And, as he confesses, he "cannot get enough of the bay....I am often the first out on the bay in the spring in my boat, a small Boston Whaler, and the last to leave in winter when the ice sets in for good....But what defeats me, what has made me at times despair, is that the bay is so vast and time is so short. There simply is too much to be done, to be collected, studied, or pondered....[But] I have not

Principles of Financial Management

C. Wendell Tewell '69

Although it is primarily intended as an introductory finance text, "Principles of Financial Management" provides considerably broader coverage than most texts of this level. This is especially true for the section on capital markets where the role of investment bankers, security market structure, and security market regulation are covered extensively.

The book is divided into six parts, the first of which develops the tools of financial management. The following two sections are devoted to what the author terms "micro financial theory." The topics discussed in this section include capital budgeting, working capital and cash management, accounts receivable, and inventories. Adding to a very readable text are excellent graphs and quantitative treatments of the topics covered. The result is a section with a polish normally reserved in financial texts for the cost of capital.

Section Three begins with a treatment of the various sources of funds and concludes with a chapter on the historical trends in corporation finance. The last chapter of the section—Chapter Seventeen—provides a capstone to the discussions of the cost of capital, short-term sources of funds, long-term debt, corporate stock and leasing. The reader is given perspective as to the relative importance of the various sources of funds over the course of the twentieth century. In doing so, Curran develops an intelligible whole out of the assorted financing methods used in corporation finance.

The first chapter of Part Four—The Capital Markets—is devoted to the role of the financial intermediary. From this given up in my determination to know Haverstraw Bay firsthand....I have set up certain collecting stations...."

His take from these stations, his collecting adventures, and the odd and amusing characters he meets in the pursuit make up a particularly engaging chapter. But the collecting is not only for personal pleasure, mere curiosity, or grist for a writer's mill. Boyle's specimens are frequently unique, and major scientific institutions such as the American Museum of Natural History, the New York Aquarium, the University of California, and the U.S. Marine Gamefish Laboratory are in his debt for contributions. He has helped science authenticate a number of fish populations in the Hudson that were unsuspected before. And he has proved that several species, officially listed as rare or endangered, are in fact plentiful, sometimes abundant, in the teeming river. Moreover, occasional specimens he's measured exceed the world record sizes given in the scientific literature.

starting point the new issues market and investment banking are discussed. Subsequently, the market for existing securities is examined. The last chapter of the section deals with the regulation of the securities markets, a topic in which the author has substantial interest. The economic effects of regulation is an area rarely, if ever, found in an introductory text; but one that the student should be aware of from the beginning of his study of finance. This chapter, like the previous one on the market for existing securities, is unique to this text and adds greatly to the content of the book.

Part Five consists of two chapters, Mergers and Reorganizations. Mergers begins with an analysis of the historical background of mergers, continues to a development of the valuation problems encountered in mergers and concludes with a case study. The use of a case study is an excellent inclusion because it gives the student a more realistic idea of the many problems encountered in consummating a merger, as well as an exposure to a form of instruction that will be encountered if further study in finance is pursued.

The topic of reorganization deserves the chapter it is allotted, especially in light of the current economic situation in the summer of 1970. While the topic appears to lose much of its relevance during periods of economic expansion, it suddenly regains it when economic slowdown appears.

In the concluding section, Curran brings forward alternative goals of financial management. The questions of social responsibility and satisficing versus maximizing may prove to be the leading issues in finance for the early years of the 1970s as the cost of capital was for the early 1960s.

My chief praise of "Principles of Financial Management" lies in its concentration upon developing the theory of financial management within the legal and regulatory constraints that it must be practiced. The result is a realistic approach to the tools and problems of the financial manager.

Trinity has already profited from Boyle's interest in the Hudson: last year he delivered the Martin Clement Memorial Lecture at the College, and I'm told that a large audience delighted in his salty and instructive ecological address. One day the Alumni Fund might also profit handsomely—that is if Bob's fantasies of developing a multimillion-dollar caviar industry on the Hudson eventually come to fruition. Several droll pages of his book are devoted to the dreams of glory for the "Greater Verplanck Caviar Company" that filled his head when he discovered by personal experiment that the plentiful Hudson sturgeon yielded a caviar not inferior to the best from the Caspian Sea. Financing troubles and many other problems suggest, however, that '49's class agent should not hold his breath awaiting a lucrative gift of Greater Verplanck stock.

Contemporary though "The Hudson River" is, dealing at length with the manifold present-day threats to the river's life and beauty, the book has also been

One Morning in the War "The Tragedy at Son My"

By Richard Hammer, MA '51

Whatever your views on the Vietnam war, this interpretive account of the massacre at Son My Village, South Vietnam, will sicken you and then send you into a rage.

It was nearly 20 months after the massacre of hundreds of Vietnamese civilians allegedly by an American unit (trials are pending), when Hammer left his desk at the New York Times and visited the ashes of the sub hamlet of Xom Lang (Americanized as My Lai on U.S. military maps).

After sifting through accounts from GI's who were there and a few of the villagers who survived, the author has reconstructed enough of the horror of that morning of March 16, 1968, and with such vividness that the reader finds himself back in that hamlet.

And once you are there (Part Three—"One Morning in the War") you wish to God you weren't.

You want to yell "cease fire" when: "A small boy three or four, suddenly appears from nowhere on the trail in front of a group of Americans. He is clutching his wounded arm with his other hand while the blood trickled between his fingers. He just stood there with big eyes staring around like he didn't understand what was happening. Then the captain's radio operator put a burst of 16 into him."

And again: "Two boys maybe four or five years old appear. A guy with an M-16 fired at the first boy and the older boy fell over him to protect the smaller one. Then they fired six more shots. It was done very businesslike."

Hammer, the father of two boys himself, has 40 pages of incredible eye witness reports that account for most of the some 400 to 500 civilians who were needlessly slaughtered that day. Some were shot near air raid bunkers, some burned in their "hootches" and many were herded into a canal, guarded for a while and then machine-gunned.

All of this was allegedly done by members of Charlie Company, First Battalion, Twentieth Infantry. During his probings, Hammer also found that another massacre took place that morning allegedly committed by Bravo Company sweeping the sub hamlet of My Hoi two miles to the southeast where an estimated 97 civilians were slain.

But Hammer goes beyond just recounting what happened that morning. The real value of this work lies in his attempts to find out how such an atrocity could happen and why. As he explains in his preface, "It has not been my purpose in this book to excuse, to blame or to condemn individuals. Instead I have tried to discover, not reasons to love, hate or excuse the United States, but rather how and why American soldiers sent to protect and defend a people could turn and slaughter them."

His analysis will anger many readers. Either because they don't agree with him or because they do.

hailed (by Brooks Atkinson) as one likely to become a classic. One cannot read it without gaining a deeper understanding of the interrelatedness of nature, of the critical danger of human tamperings with the environment, and specifically of the invaluable natural resource for ages to come that we have in the majestic Hudson—if we can still save it.

New Urban Corps Offers Aid To Students, City

Trinity students will be participants in the Hartford Urban Corps work-study program which has been set up on a joint basis by Trinity, University of Hartford and St. Joseph College with the City.

According to Ivan Backer, Trinity's special assistant for community affairs, and a prime mover for the program, "There is more and more recognition now that learning does not take place only on campus, but that much can be gained by a direct experience through working in the City. A student engaged in service-learning integrates accomplishment of a needed task with educational growth. Urban Corps thus becomes one more constructive link between colleges and universities and the needs of the community.

"The nuts and bolts of Urban Corps is tied to the work-study program. Anyone eligible for work-study, as determined by the college's financial aid officer, is eligible for work in the Corps. The intent is that instead of students working on campus, they would work in city agencies. In this way, the City gains the energies and enthusiasm of bright college students, and the students in return gain direct experience and insight into urban problems."

The work-study program is underwritten by the federal government for eighty percent of the cost. Thus, city agencies gain inexpensive help by having to pay only twenty percent of the cost.

In September, job openings in various city departments will be filled by college students from the three participating schools.

Some of the jobs developed by the City include working with the Corporation Counsel in preparing the City's 1970-71 legislative program, departments of Park and Recreation, Assessment, Civil Defense, Development Commission and the Neighborhood Center.

United States Commissioner of Education, James E. Allen Jr., who was instrumental in increasing the federal government's financial commitment to the work-study program, has said that "The need is to concentrate on ways of helping the young realize the potential of their new sense of purpose and spirit for service."

AIESEC: Student-run Training Program Lines Up Overseas Job Opportunities

Lawrence Minard, a junior from Seattle, Washington, has returned from an all-expenses paid four-week trip to Japan. Vacation? Not quite.

He was one of 15 U.S. delegates to the 1970 International Congress of AIESEC (International Association of Business and Economics Students). This means he was partly responsible for placing 5000 students from 48 countries in white-collar job traineeships in as many countries.

AIESEC is an independent, non-profit organization created by students to facilitate and administer an international exchange of students interested in business, economics and international affairs. Operating on a reciprocal basis, the AIESEC exchange enables students from more than 48 countries to gain practical on-the-job training experience with a business firm abroad.

At Trinity there are about 15 students involved in the local chapter of AIESEC. They are involved in a game of exchange. The students visit Hartford area business organizations and try to persuade them to participate in a vacation traineeship program. For each job a Trinity student opens here, the campus chapter can send one of its students to a vacation trainee job abroad.

This "exchange" program has been in effect since 1948, and since then Trinity has sent scores of undergraduates or graduate students to almost every country in Europe to work in banks, mercantile establishments and industrial firms.

Erkki Lojander, a Finnish student from the Helsinki School of Economics and Business Administration, spent the summer in Hartford under the Trinity-AIESEC program. For his feelings toward the program and his experiences while here see Letters to the Editor.

President Eisenhower once said, "AIESEC contributes to world peace and progress in providing both businessmen and students with an exercise in cooperation through the sharing of knowledge."

And several U.S. Senators, including the late Robert Kennedy, read into the Congressional Record, "...for value received per dollar expended, it would seem that AIESEC is one of our nation's most efficient and productive efforts to create better mutual understanding among peoples of the world and to train future leaders."

Trinity-AIESEC students have worked in the Svenska Handelsbanken in Umea, Sweden; in a bank in Copenhagen, Denmark; with the Chamber of Commerce in Ankara, Turkey; and in Stuttgart, Germany, to name a few.

The basic requirements for eligibility under this program are that the student must have taken at least one course in basic economics and that he speak the language of the country to which he is assigned. Each student must pay his own fare abroad. Although he can join AIESEC in his freshman year, a student is not eligible to go abroad until his junior year. He may return abroad as a senior, depending on how many traineeships are open.

In Europe, a reception officer from the local AIESEC chapter meets the students on their arrival, arranges lodging and introduces them to their employer.

The success of AIESEC on the local, national and international level depends directly on the confidence the business and management communities have in the program. The program has attracted distinguished national business, political and academic leaders to its Board of Directors and Board of Advisors.

Firms involved in the Hartford area include The Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., the Hartford National Bank, the Aetna Life and Casualty, Mott's Supermarkets, Hartford Steam Boiler Insurance Co., the HARTFORD COURANT, the Hartford Insurance Group, and Pratt and Whitney. All support AIESEC-Trinity through job offerings, financial contributions or both.

Activities are arranged at the International Congress which is held annually in a different city in the world.

AIESEC-Trinity would like to continue to grow. Anyone interested in considering an AIESEC trainee to enable another Trinity student to work abroad, or who would like additional information on the program, write: AIESEC-Trinity, Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut 06106.

Your SECRETARY asks you again to send him a summary of your career. Unless you feel that you still have a career to finish, you should now be able to report on what you have done. Since this summary will not be published until after your death, and then at the discretion of the Class Secretary at that time and the editors of "The Reporter," you need not be deterred by modesty from giving your honest opinion of the work you did and the world in which you did it. It will be included in the Class Archives and should be accompanied by a portrait, at any age. Your Secretary, for instance, is going to deposit a bearded portrait, if he can find one, in deference to current fashion. He wore his beard from 1927 to 1938, but it was a lot neater and more decorative than the beards of 1970. My expression in this portrait is almost unbearably sweet, and my wife liked to refer to it as The Blessed Damozel.

RALPH BENT responded to your Secretary's earlier appeal for such a summary, but sent no portrait. Instead he sent a picture of the hotel

A little more than a year ago, you may remember, BERT SMITH celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Invitations to the event were sent out by the Bertram L. Smith Scholarship Fund, a curiosity-arousing organization. The curiosity can now be satisfied.

It seems that Bert wanted to help the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest. So he raised a fund whose income is paid to the Seminary for the benefit of some struggling theolog. Bert wanted the Fund named for a Texas bishop, but the donors overruled him and named the Fund for Bert. The Fund therefore is not just another name for him but has independence, though it continues to serve the laudable purposes for

By the time this is published, VERTREES and Sylvia YOUNG will have returned from their round-the-world trip with a load of strange rocks for Vert's collection. We all hope they have stayed well, and that no hurricanes have ravaged their home while they were away. Any of you who have been so lucky as to receive Sylvia's delightful letters will have enjoyed the trip with them.

Holt, Rinehart and Winston, a subsidiary of CBS, has published your Secretary's twenty-second and probably last textbook: "Ibsen: Four Plays." I don't ask you to buy it, but if you have an undergraduate grandchild, he or she could do worse.

Bill Newell, sportswriter for the Hartford Courant, recently included in his column a letter received from BOB MORRIS. Reading an account of personal support accorded the University of Connecticut's baseball team in the NCAA playoffs by UConn President Babbidge, Bob recalled similar support by Trinity's late President Ogilby. He mentioned the 1934 football season when Prexy Ogilby "played the role of guardian angel" when the team visited the University of Vermont, winning 21-7 to climax the first undefeated Bantam season in 20 years. —Ed.

HAM BARBER and STAN LEEKE have taken up DICK WYSE'S idea to have an "Annual" Class of 1919 Fiftieth Reunion this fall. All members of the class who can get to Hartford on September 26 are urged to join them at dinner which will be for members of the class only.

Although DOUG PERRY remains a resident of Tenafly, N.J., he should move to Cape Cod because he loves it so much. He usually attends the Cape Cod Trinity reunion each summer and writes glowingly of the good time enjoyed by he and wife, Betty. They make the trip to the Cape no matter what the occasion. It would pay the Cape's Chamber of Commerce to take Doug on as its prime p.r. officer.

Happy to hear that WALT CANNER has emerged feeling as fit and chipper as ever after surgery last March. WALT, STAN MILLER, PAUL NORMAN, and FRED TANSILL '22 all made the annual Spring Frolic hosted by DR. WEBSTER '10 at his beautiful 26-acre estate in Riverdale, N.Y. It is an annual reunion particularly enjoyed by alumni in the N.Y. and N.J. areas.

The Hartford Courant recently pictured JOE FOLEY, assistant treasurer of the Owen Machine Gun Veterans Association, along with others of the group, presenting a check to a representative of the Connecticut Institute for the Blind. Joe is a veteran of WW I as well as a former Trinity gridiron warrior. I recall he was severely injured in the 1919 Amherst game. Those days a freshman was permitted to play on the varsity team.

Bishop CONNIE GESNER retired last January and, after a tremendous farewell send-off by the parishioners of his South Dakota diocese, he toured the U.S. and Puerto Rico, making several trans-continental trips. He married Claudia Dorland in June and their wedding trip took them to British Columbia. Best wishes to the happy couple who now reside in Longmeadow, Mass.

Sorry to hear of the passing of BILL MURPHY in June. He was the little fellow who roomed with me in Northam our freshman year. We both came out of Hartford High. I recall he was a member of the track team but College records don't bear me out. PETE RANSOM '21, who was student track coach and captain, should remember him.

WHEELER HAWLEY writes that he was in Connecticut in June. He is still a professor at Samford University in Birmingham, Ala. and, therefore, could not make Reunion. Look forward to seeing him at our 50th.

In a telephone conversation with FRANK CRONIN who is now retired, he said he and his sister leave for Florida in September for the fall and winter months. Frank is an avid golfer and spends all the good days on the links.

DICK and Betty NOBLE made their annual pilgrimage to Mercer Island, Seattle, Wash. to visit with their daughter, Nancy, and family. As usual, Dick is looking forward to the coming football season along with his brother, HERB '26 and wife, Peg.

BILL GOODRIDGE writes that his brother, Randy '24, passed away in June. Many of the Class of '25 remember him as he joined our reunions on several occasions.

TED JONES had the AL BIRCHS and the RAY MONTGOMERYS as guests at his Yarmouthport home on the weekend before the annual Cape Cod reunion which was held at the home of SHERM PARKER '22, August 17.

JAKE COOPER writes and wants to be remembered to all members of '25.

BILL CALABRESE, I learned from his wife, Marie, is presently recuperating from a slight shock. Hopefully, by the time this issue reaches the press, he will have recovered.

A note from GEORGE MALCOLM-SMITH asks about some of our classmates we haven't seen in a long time, among them OTIS ZWISSLER, JACK DECOUX, and ED SHIEBLER. "Whatever happened," writes the Duke, "to WILLIE APPLEBAUGH? He's as thoroughly vanished as Judge Slater." There are others, too, and it would be nice to round them up for our 50th in five years.

The RAY MONTGOMERYS had as their guests in July, daughter, Joyce, her husband and their two children. Two weeks were spent at East Pond in Maine where they were joined by Ray Jr., his wife and young son. As Joyce lives in Portland, Ore., it was a nice family get-together.

The Hon. DON DUMONT is now a United Nations representative to the Republic of Mali.

The Rev. STUART COWLES announces that, as of August 1, he moved to Douglas, Wyoming, to become rector of Christ Church. GENE GANE, now practicing dentistry in Westport, Conn., has been named a trustee of Mensa College in Easton, Md. "The college," he writes, "will feature avant garde education for the top 2% in I.Q."

ED MULLARKEY reports his son, Ed, a member of Trin's Class of '67, received his 2nd lieutenant bars in May (Harvard University ROTC) and his J.D. degree from Harvard Law School the following month. Second son, Neil, is now a sophomore at Trinity.

CHARLEY TOWNE has been named a trustee of the Connecticut Opera Association. Congratulations to HOFF BENJAMINS on their 30th wedding anniversary (June 22).

ERIC PURDON is completing a book, "Black Company," the story of the Negro crew he commanded during WW I. Eric's eldest son, Henry, a 1st Lt. in the Marines, was scheduled to return from Vietnam in August.

BOB DAUT has been named executive director of the Warehouseman's Association of the Port of New York.

CHESTER NEWMAN has moved to 115 Edgemont Ave., West Hartford.

BERT HOLLAND was married to Dr. Eva Engel on June 12 and the couple spent their honeymoon in West Chatham, Mass. They reside at 55 Maple Ave., Cambridge, Mass.

Jack Wardlaw, second from right, has been playing the tenor banjo even before he entered Trinity in 1925 as a member of the Class of '29. He is still a member of "The Executives," a banjo group which is in great demand at conventions and meetings throughout the south. An insurance executive in Raleigh, N.C., he has been a member of the Million Dollar Round Table for over 20 years, is the author of two books on selling techniques, a sales motivation recording, and has published numerous articles. It just may be that his banjo will be heard at the 1970 Reunion.

ANNUAL GIVING REPORT

It is indeed encouraging to review the splendid results of the 1969-70 annual giving campaigns conducted among Trinity alumni and parents. Particularly gratifying was the record total of $187,118 raised by the alumni—the $59,603 raised by parents—and the record average gift of alumni ($83.12) and parents ($127.36), both substantial increases over the previous years.

We are most appreciative of this support during a year when the economy has undergone severe stress and private higher education has experienced equally severe fiscal readjustments. Your support thus demonstrates a conviction about the significance of Trinity's academic program.

In addition, your support has made possible the continuation of our faculty salary plan, our financial aid program to needy students, and progress in library acquisitions. I cite these areas because they lie at the center of the learning which Trinity offers future alumni.

On behalf of the College, may I thank all who contributed to the annual giving campaign and my special thanks to Mr. John T. Wilcox '39, chairman of the Alumni Fund; to Mr. A. Dix Leeson, chairman of the Parents Fund; their committees and all who worked so diligently.

Many of Trinity's great athletes have over the years regressed toward the life of portly middle-aged frustrated "memorizers." But there is a small but significant group, particularly of note within the ranks of 1955 alumni, who have blossomed into athletic prominence beyond their achievements at Trinity. Headed by FRANK LUBY, a consortium of '55ers have sponsored and participated in an annual Memorial Day golf event that will undoubtedly rank eventually along with the Westchester Classic and Dow Jones Open in Eastern golf tournament annals.

The field of star-studded performers bidding for top money (it was of such magnitude, the exact figure was not revealed for security reasons) was headed by former champ, "banana ball" B. SCOTT PRICE. Other notable swingers included HANK SCHEINBERG, DICK ZAMPIELLO, PHIL TRUITT, plus other great golfers, familiar names to even the most casual golf fan.

This "best ball twosome" contest was won by RHOADES FARNHAM '54 (who let him in?) and Ann Price, spouse of the aforementioned B.S. This was not without a struggle and great stretch drive by Phil Truitt who finally succumbed by managing to place four balls into the strategically placed water hazards (there were two). "Babe" Luby who had a two-year winning streak broken was helped to a last place finish by long-ball-hitting Dick Zampielo.

On the serious side, congratulations to RON COE on being named general sales manager of the rubber products group for Thermold Division of H. K. Porter Company, Inc. And to GORDON REESE who is managing director for International Flavors and Fragrances in Tokyo. Gordon plus wife and three boys have enjoyed their first year in Japan and the excitement of their new international life. Gordon says learning the Japanese language is quite a challenge.

DICK FREYTAG had been in Tokyo also, having been assigned there by the First National City Bank; but Dick has recently left for a masters degree at M.I.T. on a Rhodes Scholarship. FRANK LUBY has joined the F.B. Rogers Silver Company after 12 years with Union Carbide.

DON PIERUCCI has formed an architectural and design firm with a former Carnegie-Mellon classmate. The partnership of Pierucci and Stefanovich is currently in the midst of a $3 million office building job being constructed in McKeesport, a nearby Pittsburgh suburban town. Don achieved a masters degree in urban design from Carnegie. Don's wife, Louise, is well known for her artistic talents (weaving) and has several large tapestries displayed in downtown Pittsburgh office buildings. Louise has opened her own shop on Pittsburgh's well-known Walnut Street and has called it "The Fringe."

Perhaps most of you know that BOB THOMAS died this past May and it is appropriate to say in this column how sad our class and all those who knew Bob are to lose such a fine person. Bob had a perfect disposition as he fought fiercely to achieve on the athletic field and in the classroom, but was a relaxing, entertaining gentleman to be with at all times.

JOE REINEMAN is moving to New York City on a new assignment (details unknown). He and his family will be living in Greenwich. GERRY HELDRICH is a practicing lawyer in Chicago for the firm Peterson, Bogucki, and Beck. Gerry graduated from Chicago Law School. RANDOLPH GOODRIDGE, 1924

Randolph Goodridge died June 2, in Pittsburgh, Pa. He leaves a brother William, Class of 1925, and a niece and four nephews including James C., Class of 1963. Other relatives who had attended Trinity were: his grandfather, the Rev. Edward Goodridge, Class of 1860; his great uncle, Frederic Goodridge, Class of 1857; his father, Thaddeus Welles Goodridge, Class of 1892; and his uncle, Edward Goodridge, Class of 1902.

He was born in Fenwick (Saybrook), Conn., June 25, 1900, and prepared for college at Hartford Public High School.

After graduation from Trinity, he attended Yale and received an M.S. in 1928. He did geological work, including prospecting for sand for Connecticut Quarries. In 1930 and 1931, he was in Africa, prospecting in the bush for copper in Northern Rhodesia.

He attended Columbia Graduate School, then for a few years until the war, he conducted a small business selling soapstone griddles and other products, using stone from a family-owned quarry in Vermont.

During the war, he served in the U.S. Army from 1942 to 1944, and later joined the Grenby Company in Plainville, Conn. He worked for 13 years for the Merrow Machine

Sports For Urban Youths Keep Ferris Center Busy

With federal backing, Trinity reached out this summer and touched the lives of nearly 500 inner-city youths for six weeks in the Ferris Athletic Center.

Ever see the smile on a young boy's face when he has just been congratulated by a college basketball coach? Or see a girl's eyes sparkle as she takes her first few swimming strokes into the arms of a waiting instructor?

It was happening every day, Monday through Friday, in various parts of the Ferris Athletic Center and on surrounding fields for six weeks this summer.

Under sponsorship of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), Trinity was conducting a National Summer Youth Sports Program for hundreds of boys and girls from the inner city.

They came in all sizes, shapes and colors and most were from low-income families. The program at Trinity, designed for 350 selected youngsters, had a daily average attendance of about 300 and recorded some 500 different individuals who came into the program at onetime or another.

It made for a busy summer at Ferris Center. The federal program was in addition to a city recreation program at the College in which the Department of Parks and Recreation used the Field House and pool on a walk-in basis under the supervision of city personnel and Trinity students assistants. This was the second year of that program. Daily attendance averaged close to 200 with the pool the main attraction. Some 150 took swimming lessons before the National Summer Youth Program youngsters arrived.

The objective of the federal program, which was initiated nationally in the summer of 1969, is to provide instruction in athletic skills, cultivate sportsmanship and to promote good health habits and personal hygiene.

Trinity was one of several colleges added in 1970 to the 100 institutions that participated the year before. Karl Kurth, director of athletics, planned the Trinity participation and the staff of 20, including seven coaches, conducted the program under the coordination of Edward Miller, a graduate student who is assisting in the Physical Education Department.

The participating youngsters were broken down into morning and afternoon groups. The first session, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., was for those who had to be brought by bus to the Center. The afternoon group included those who were within walking distance of the Campus.

The staff provided instruction and supervised participation in some 12 (see FERRIS CENTER, page 16)

JOHN ALEXANDER LADD MONTGOMERY, 1933

Word has reached the College of the death of John A. L. Montgomery on August 13, 1969 in Dover, Del. He leaves his wife Mrs. Margaret Brereton Montgomery.

Born September 10, 1910 he prepared for college at Groton School, Groton, Mass. He transferred from Harvard University to Trinity in 1930, graduating in 1933. His fraternity was the Sigma Chapter of Delta Phi. He received his master's degree from Harvard in 1938 and also studied at the University of Paris; Georgetown; University of Maryland; and American University.

Before World War II, in which he served for nearly four years in the Army he worked for the Federal Government and Montgomery Ltd. Bank, Boston, Mass. After the war he taught at Woodlawn College, Toronto; the University of Toronto; Bullis School, Silver Spring, Md.; and, since 1962, had been professor and chairman of the modern language department at Wesley College, Dover.

THOMAS JOSEPH CUSICK JR., 1936

Thomas J. Cusick Jr. died July 27 at Uncas-on-Thames Hospital, Norwich, Conn. He leaves two brothers, John F. and Raymond Cusick.

Born March 3, 1913 in Hartford, he prepared for college at Bulkeley High School, Hartford. He entered Trinity in 1932 with the Class of 1936. As an undergraduate, he was a member of the Senate and the Political Science Club. Alpha Tau Kappa was his fraternity.

During World War II, he served in the Air Force and was discharged with the rank of lieutenant. From 1945 to 1947, he was a counselor to the blind war veterans at the Avon Old Farms Convalescent Hospital, and, from 1947 to 1950, taught English at the University of Connecticut. At the time of his death, he was administrative assistant to the dean of students at the University of Connecticut.

HAROLD WILLIAM DUENNEBIER, 1936

Dr. Harold W. Duennebie, medical examiner of East Lyme, Conn., died suddenly in his office June 26 in Niantic, Conn. He leaves his widow, the former Emma Betke; a son, Stephen A., Class of 1974; and two brothers, Frederick C., Class of 1935, and Otto E., Class of 1940. Frederick K. Duennebie '65 was his nephew.

Born July 3, 1915 in Hartford, he prepared for college at Hartford Public High School and entered Trinity in 1932 with the Class of 1936. After graduating, he entered Tufts University Medical School and received his degree there in 1940.

During World War II, he served in England with the U.S. Army Air Force and retired in 1946 with the rank of major. He began his medical practice in Niantic in 1947 and became senior physician at the State Correctional Institute in that town. He was on the staff at Lawrence Memorial Hospital, a member of the New London County Medical Association, the American Medical Association and the American Academy of General Practice.

Dr. Duennebie was a charter member of Christ Lutheran Church of East Lyme, and an elder, a trustee, and church organist.

ROBERT JOSEPH THOMAS, 1955

Robert J. Thomas died May 27 in New Haven, after a long illness. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Carmel Panzo Thomas; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Thomas; a daughter, Miss Kimberly Thomas; and two sons, Robert and Gregory.

Born September 24, 1932 in Hamden, Conn., he prepared for college at Hopkins Grammar School, New Haven, and entered Trinity in 1951 with the Class of 1955. As an undergraduate he played freshman football and belonged to the Newman Club. His fraternity was the Alpha Chi chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

After graduation he joined his father's firm of Thomas Buick Automobile, Inc. of Hamden and was vice president and general manager at the time of his death.

Fall Squads Confront Challenging Schedules; Gridders Open Against Williams September 26

The football team opens the fall sports schedule Saturday, September 26 with the 29th renewal of its series with rival Williams College. It is reunion weekend at Trinity and that fact could help the Bantams in this traditional battle.

The soccer team, which will be seeking its 19th winning season under Coach Roy Dath, will be taking a final pre-season tuneup also on the 26th before the Alumni with downstate Quinnipiac visiting Hartford.

The cross country team, which doesn't go into action until October 3, Parent's Day, against a strong Bates squad will be trying to build a winning combination around Captain John Durland.

The Ephmen will be coming onto Jessee Field sans Jack Maitland which is sad news for Williams' Coach Larry Catuzzi but not for the Bantams who were unable to contain the 204-pound Little All-American in three seasons.

Although Maitland's graduation leaves big shoes to fill, the Ephmen have an experienced squad with 26 returning lettermen, including veterans on the starting offensive line, a fullback and two quality quarterbacks.

Don Miller, in molding his fourth Trinity team as head coach, has 24 returning lettermen and most of the offensive line back on which to build. But like Catuzzi at Williams, Miller has some big shoes to fill, particularly in the backfield with passing star Jay Bernardoni now graduated.

Halfback Dave Kiarsis, who averaged 6.9 yards per carry last fall is the only returning starter to the backfield. Co-captain Mike James will be converted from end to wingback where he played as a sophomore.

For a quarterback, Miller will be looking to George Matava, a senior defensive back who played quarterback in high school and as a freshman, Bill Foster, who was Bernardoni's backup last season, and Erich Wolters, who guided the freshmen to a 4-1 season last fall.

Co-captain Jon Miller anchors a veteran offensive line while Bill Sartorelli is the only returning starter to the defensive line where much rebuilding has to be accomplished. Some experienced defensive backs and sophomore prospects up from the freshman eleven help brighten the defensive picture.

The grid schedule is the same as last fall except for the University of Rochester replacing PMC Colleges. Rochester defeated both Amherst and Williams in 1969 and should be a real challenge for the Bantams in 1970.

There have been two changes in the physical education department which also affects the football coaching staff. Jack Daniels, former head coach at Mt. Carmel High School in Auburn, N.Y., will assist as line coach, and William Sferro, a former assistant at the University of Virginia, will work with the defensive secondary.

Daniels and Sferro replace Terry Herr, who has joined an investment firm, and Joe Wilson, who will be studying law at The University of Southern California.

The soccer team will be seeking to continue winning ways but will face a more demanding schedule with only six lettermen back. Two strong New England soccer teams, Brown and Middlebury, have been added to the schedule, replacing two college division teams. Trinity is in the major university division in soccer.

Lettermen Douglas Snyder and Megna will be the only veterans returning to the forward wall which will have to be rebuilt. Some bright sophomore candidates should help here. Besides Clark, experienced backs include Bayard Fiechter and William Abendroth while Richard Wood will be back in the goal.

With few veterans back, a more demanding schedule and overall lack of experience and depth, the 1970 soccer team faces a real challenge to keep the long string of winning seasons going.

Cross Country, which has to run in the shadow of football and soccer popularity, has been an exercise in determination and perseverance on the Hilltop.

Lean years have befallen this courageous band of runners and last fall the team captain, Charles Hosking, was injured before the season. This year Captain Durland will have three veterans with him on which to build for 1970. A volunteer coach of last fall will not be back because of business pressures and much of the pre-season preparation will fall on Durland and the individual dedication of his teammates.

With Durland will be veterans Michael Geiser, Steven Wilcox and William Zachary. Sophomores up from the freshman team will be depended upon to round out the squad.

The seven-meet schedule will be rigorous. It will be an uphill battle this fall. But this game squad could start the road back to better days for cross country at Trinity.

activities, including tennis, track, gymnastics, swimming, basketball, touch football, volleyball, badminton, wrestling, physical development, trampoline and modern dance.

Participating on the professional staff were five Trinity coaches including Robert Shults, basketball; Dave Buran, track and field; Robert Slaughter, swimming; Jack Daniels, wrestling; Joe Wilson, physical development. Mrs. Mary Mahan and Mrs. Eddie Joyce, both members of the physical education department at Central Connecticut State College, also served on the staff.

Nine Trinity athletes were staff assistants, including Howie Greenblatt, Answering an appeal from Athletic Director Karl Kurth when funds were cut from the National Summer Youth Sports Program, sponsored by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and the NCAA, 20 Trinity doctors in the Hartford area volunteered their services to conduct the required physical examinations. They included: Drs. Joseph J. Bellizzi '44, Aaron Bobrow '30, Thomas B. Carey '33, Roger G. Conant '44, Edward J. Conway '41, Joseph Danyliw '44, David M. Geeter '55, Leo P. Giardi '40, Henry M. Kaplan '41, Paul G. Kuehn '48, Charles J. Middleton '60, Winfield T. Moyer '45, Paul S. Norman '52, Salvatore S. Piacente '36, Joseph N. Russo '41, John J. Sayers '30, Humberto Solano '57, William J. basketball captain; Tony Lomey, basketball; Ron Megna, soccer co-captain; Ralph Morini, football; Nat Williams, basketball; Dick Wood, soccer and swimming; Jim Wolcott, basketball; Dave Sample, football and swimming; and Jay Davis, tennis.

On a typical day each youngster received instruction and practice in three activities of his or her choice. Each received a free lunch and at various times the entire group would hear special speakers on various topics as part of the educational component of the program. For example, there was a session on career planning, a talk on the dangers of drugs, a demonstration on grooming for the girls, and, when there were disturbances in the streets of Hartford in July, a police official came in and talked with the youngsters many of whom came from neighborhoods beset by violence.

During the six weeks the youngsters had fun, but they were also serious about learning. The intensity to which they became involved in an activity perhaps is best demonstrated by an 11-year-old boy who was waiting in line during a basketball drill. A local reporter approached him and asked if he could talk to him about his views of the program. "Wait a minute," the boy said, "I don't want to miss my turn. I'll talk to you later."

Another group of youngsters were giving one of two Universal Gymnasiums (multi-station exercise machines) a work-out in the weightroom. One boy struggled to lift some metal weights, and beamed when he finally raised more than he had the day before. "I like weightlifting," he said afterwards, "because I can't do this at home."

A 13-year-old sat during the mid-day juice break and admitted "I like the program because it keeps me out of trouble and I meet many friends here."

A young girl bounced on a trampoline under the watchful eye of a gymnast from Colorado State. The object of the particular exercise was to summersault and land approximately at the starting point. The girl didn't quite have it right, but she was coming closer. "I've never been on one of these before," she said referring to the trampoline, "and I didn't think I would be able to do it, but now I think I can."

Each youngster in the National Summer Youth Sports Program was registered in the program, given a physical examination, an identification card and a T-shirt lettered, "Trinity-NCAA Summer Camp." The card and shirt provided an identification in the program and were proudly displayed by the youths.

The physical examination turned out to be an alumni project which helped save the program of many youngsters. Federal funds were trimmed just before the program started and Karl Kurth faced a problem. Some $5,000 had been cut from his allocation and he had to decide whether to cut back the number of youngsters who could participate or cut the budget elsewhere. He appealed to Trinity alumni in the Hartford area who are practicing medicine and 20 volunteered to give free physical examinations and a substantial saving was made in the budget, allowing for a maximum enrollment of youngsters.

There were daily rewards in seeing youngsters accomplish a skill or maneuver and their progress was evident in the last week of special events which included a basketball tournament, a swim meet and a track and field meet.

Attendance ran high for the tournament and meets and sportsmanship was displayed by winners and losers alike. One winning relay team challenged a staff group to a race. It was a close race but the staff team of Ed. Miller, Lomey, Megna and Morini prevailed by one second. The cheering and handshakes that followed this race perhaps summed up what the program was all about.
