TRINITY PROFESSORS AT WASHINGTON CONVENTIONS.

Professors Merrill and Babbitt have just returned from the recent annual joint meeting of the American Philological Association and the Archaeological Institute of America, which was held this year at George Washington University, Washington, D. C. Professor Merrill is the president for the year of the Philological Association, and Professor Babbitt is a member of the council of the Archaeological Institute. In connection with these meetings sessions were held also of the managing committee of the American School of Classical Studies and of the managing committee of the American School of Classical Studies in Rome. Mornings and afternoons were chiefly given to the reading of papers, the two societies meeting sometimes together and sometimes separately for that purpose.

On the evening of Wednesday, January 2nd, before a joint meeting of the the annual address as president of the Philological Association: "On Certain Roman Characteristics." There were more than two hundred members present at this gathering, to hear the opening address. Professor Merrill also presented a paper before the Philological two societies, Professor Merrill delivered Association upon "Budaus and the Lost Paris Codex of Pliny's Letters."

At the meeting of the committees on the Roman School the resignation of the director, Professor Richard Norton, on account of ill health, was accepted, and Professor Jesse B. Carter of Princeton University, who has been serving as professor in the school, was elected director for a term of three years.

On Friday the members of the associations were received by President Roosevelt in the East Room of the White House. In a brief address to his visitors the President stated very vigorously his interest in the sort of study which the associations were formed to encourage and to carry out. He remarked that there was no danger that in this country we should have any lack of material prosperity, but he thought there was grave danger that we should not keep up with the necessities of productive scholarship.

It is an interesting fact that at this reception the President's warmest greeting was extended to the one negro who is a member of the Philological Association, Professor Scarborough of Wilberforce University, whom the President detained in conversation for several minutes.

The attendance of the members of both societies at the meeting was larger than ever before, and the many courtesies extended by Washington clubs and individuals helped to render the occasion one of the pleasantest that those present had ever enjoyed. The next meeting of the associations is to be held at the University of Chicago, beginning on December 27th of the current year.

New Haven reporters have regarded as the most notable feature of the Washington meetings the privilege generously accorded to their members of grasping the muscular hand of President Roosevelt, who was pleased to extend to classical Philology and to Græco-Roman archæology the same interest and benign encouragement which he has recently granted to the Irish Saga.

BASKETBALL GAMES.

Trinity Wins Two Out of Three.

The first of our vacation series of games was played against the Central Y. M. C. A. of Brooklyn on Thursday, December 20th. Trinity was defeated in an exciting game by the score of 44 to 24. Olmsted and Waldron played a particularly good game.

The line-up was as follows:—

Trinity.		Y. M. C. A.
Olmsted	l f	L. Behrens
Cook, Claussen	r f	H. Behrens
Donnelly	c	Hollins
Waldron	l g	Salmon
Pond	r g	Wagenfohr

On the next evening we played Adelphi College of Brooklyn, and won a victory by the score of 48 to 9. The forwards played an especially good game.

The line-up was: forwards, Olmsted and Donnelly; center, Cook, Claussen; guards, Pond and Waldron.

On the evening of Saturday, December 22nd, Trinity defeated Manhattan College by the score of 23 to 22. At the end of the first half the score was 16 to 3 against Trinity, but in the second half our men shifted positions, with the result of a close victory. Cook and Olmsted did very commendable work.

The line-up was: forwards, Olmsted, Donnelly, Cook; center, Claussen, Donnelly; guards, Waldron, Pond.

NOTES.

Among others, President Luther spoke recently at the 101st anniversary of the New England Club of New York at the Waldorf Astoria. Among those who spoke were: President Fletcher, Bishop Lawrence, President Alderman, and Commander Peary.

Professors Babbitt and Merrill attended the joint convention of the American Philological Association and of the Archaeological Institute of America, Professor Edwards the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in New York, Professor Adams that of the Modern Language Association at New Haven, while Professor Kleene and Mr. Carlton have been to Providence, the former to attend the convention of the American Economic Association, and the latter that of the American Bibliographical Association.

Professor Cecil F. Lavell will read a paper before the Connecticut Historical Society on "The Historical Value of Art" in the hall of the society this evening at 8 o'clock.

LECTURE BY RICHARD BURTON '83 ON THE MODERN DRAMA.

The "Courant" of January 4th gives the following notice of a lecture on the Modern Drama delivered in Springfield on the evening of January 1st by Professor Burton of the University of Minnesota, formerly a member of the "Courant" staff:—

"Mr. Burton began by saying that of the three forms in which a story may be told effectively, two being the epic poem and the novel, the drama is the most direct, the most vital and the most graphic presentation of life. 'The things seen,' he quoted, 'are mightier than the things heard.' He touched upon its importance educationally, holding that its great power as an educational factor comes through the fact that it appeals to the uneducated as can no other form of expression and can be understood by them at a glance. After tracing broadly the development of the drama from the first simple amplification of the Roman Catholic liturgy recited in churches for the edification of the ignorant, he attacked the old spirit of prejudice against the theater, combatting the argument that good people are always instinctively antagonistic to the drama by showing that the attitude of English and American people is due to historical conditions, alternations of Puritanism and Cavalierism and of exceptionally able dramatists and mediocre artists, and to the slowness with which the Puritan hatred of the English middle class, out of which the English commonwealth grew under Cromwell, has been dissipated.

"Contending that England and America are producing genuine dramatic literature, he held that to Ibsen, who revolutionized dramatic technic and wrote plays that forced people to think, and to 'The Sons of Ibsen,' is due all that is best in modern drama. He referred to the high renown of Suderman and Hauptman in Germany, of D'Annunzio in Italy, of Maeterlinck in Belgium, and then turned his attention to the difference between modern drama, which, following Maeterlinck's famous dictum that the great dramas are those of silences, tends to cut out as much as possible everything not essentially dramatic, and the 'talky-talky' dramas of Shakespeare's time, when language had to convey things that could not be caught by the audience on the dimly lighted stages of the Elizabethan era.

"He then devoted some ten minutes to eulogizing Bernard Shaw, laying stress upon Shaw's satiric thrusts at shams and his ability to make people think and his general iconoclasm. Attacking 'uncomic' comic operas as being 'baby food' and the vaudeville as being destructive in that it becomes impossible for its devotees to appreciate a play which is not a series of episodes, he turned to Stephen Phillips and Yeats as being men who are the first in the new order of English 'theater poets' and to William Vaughn Moody, author of a number of poems and of 'The Great Di-

DEATH OF J. W. FELL, '89.

After a brave fight against one of the most dreaded of diseases, there entered into rest on Saturday morning, December 15th, a man who, because of the brilliancy of his mind, the integrity of his character, and the success with which he worked while he could, deserves more than a mere notice of his death.

Joseph William Fell, whose boyhood was spent in Bristol, Conn., was born in Collinsville, January 31, 1869. Julius M. Fell, his father, died when he was only four years old, leaving him and a younger sister to the care of his widowed mother, who early instilled into him the habits of frugality and industry, which gave promise of a useful and successful life.

It was his great ambition in those days to obtain a college education, and after making the most of the Bristol schools, the way was finally opened to him largely through his own aptitude and willingness to work.

He entered Trinity in 1886, and at once took high rank in his class. He was graduated with honors in 1889, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science and the appointment of salutarian. After a short time spent in teaching, he took a position with the "Buffalo Evening News" and made Buffalo his home for a number of years.

In September, 1893, Mr. Fell was married to Miss Edith Long of Kingston, Pa. In 1895 he received an appointment in the Department of Public Documents in Washington, where he found more congenial work and was able at the same time to pursue higher studies in chemistry, for which he had special talent.

He received the degree of Master of Science in 1897 from Columbian University, but before he could enter upon the work for which he was now fitted, his struggle with ill health began. He resigned his position and went to Asheville, N. C. In a year or two he had improved enough to accept a position in the Chemical Laboratory of the Naval Proving Grounds at Indian Head, Md. After a few years, however, he was obliged to give up and return to Asheville, but this time he did not improve. Then he went to the Adirondacks, but the seeds of tuberculosis were already too firmly implanted, though he succeeded in warding off the inevitable for a surprisingly long time.

He was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa society, of the American Chemical society, and a communicant of the Episcopal church. His sister, Annie P. Fell, died in 1889. He is survived by his wife and two children as well as by his mother, Mrs. Augustus H. Funck, and his half-brother, Harold A. Funck. He was buried in Bristol, on December 20th.

There will be a college smoker at the Lodge of the I. K. A. on the evening of Tuesday, January 15th.

TO ALUMNI.

THE TRIPOD is published for the Alumni even more than for the Undergraduates. With this in mind we are striving to produce a paper which shall be interesting and necessary to Graduates, and also to reach as large a number as possible. We are very largely dependent on the Alumni both for our moral and financial support. If you are not already a subscriber will you kindly give this matter your attention?

"NOW THEN—TRINITY!"

EDITORIAL.

The report in one of the city papers, Saturday, of the death of Stuart Dravo was widely spread and every one who knows Dravo was for the time deeply shocked. It is needless to say that the falsity of the report, established immediately after its publication, was of eminent satisfaction to his many friends. Much feeling has been aroused among the students, against the unknown author of the thoughtless act, perhaps considered a joke, and it is to be hoped that the affair was not the work of any Trinity man.

College reopened Thursday at 5:45 P. M. with the regular chapel exercise, after a vacation of two weeks. President Luther spoke a few words to the students assembled, wishing them success for the college year of 1907. Almost the full complement of students is now back to resume college duties and there is every promise for another successful year in Trinity's history.

COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor of the "Tripod,"—

Dear Sir:—The 1908 "Ivy" is now in the process of construction and it is to put before the college a catalogue of the material needed that I am venturing to ask a small part of your valuable space.

The "Ivy," to be a success must have two things, good illustrations and the best writings that the students with literary ability can produce.

The illustrations needed are drawings, which beside including the usual subjects such as the faculty, athletics, classes, and head and tail pieces can embrace a wide variety including almost anything that pertains to college affairs. Photographs of college incidents and events we especially desire. The inspiration of the author is about the only guide that can be set for the literary part, and in the line of humorous material we desire such articles and notes as are usually included under such a heading. Those students who own cameras can assist the editors very materially by submitting pictures at as early a date as possible. I would also add that we wish the individual photographs of the members of the Junior class before the 14th of January. College honors should also be handed in by the members of both the Senior and the Junior classes.

In closing, I would simply restate the necessity of having material, both literary and pictorial, submitted at once. I would suggest that the fellows who can draw consult with the editors regarding subjects so that four or five men will not spend their time on designs for the same topic, when only one picture can be used.

Ralph Reed Wolfe,

Editor-in-Chief, 1908 "Ivy."

FRESHMEN BASKETBALL TEAM SCHEDULE.

vide,' as one who will do much for the American drama. He saw signs of a great dramatic future, although prejudice against the theater must be gotten rid of and more culture, that is, intelligent selection and conscience, must be brought to bear. 'When we go to one good play, we kill a bad play,' he said in closing.

SENIOR ASSEMBLY.

The First of a Series to be Held.

At a meeting of the Senior class held Saturday, it was decided not to give a play at this time, but to have an assembly* in Alumni Hall at an early date. A committee consisting of Tech.
chairman, Ferguson, Myers and Bryant
was chosen, which decided on Friday,
January 18th as a date for the dance.
A program of twenty dances was decided upon, and the dancing will be from eight to one o'clock, and light refreshments will be served. This dance ought to be a great success, and it is hoped and expected that the college body will go in large numbers, as the price, one dollar is considered very low for the excellent assembly which is planned. If this assembly should prove a success more may follow, which would be establishing a good custom at Trinity.

Edward S. Van Zile, L. H. D., of the class of '84, who is a poet and novelist of wide reputation and the author of some of our best modern plays, will lecture to the class in English VI., on Friday of this week, at a quarter before eleven, on the contemporary drama. The lecture will be held in the English Room. All who are interested in the subject are cordially invited to be present.

The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company,

HARTFORD, CONN.,

Why should I insure my life?

Because it is a debt you owe to those who are dependent upon your earnings for their support.

You admit that it is your duty to supply their needs from day to day, but forget that it is equally your duty to provide an ever ready and sufficient equivalent for your earning power, which your family stands in constant jeopardy to lose by your premature death.

Guard your family against disaster and yourself against dependency in old age.

When should I insure my life?

Now! The cost will never be less, and tomorrow you may not be able to obtain insurance at any price.

Even if others are not now dependent upon you, take time by the forelock and you will be the better able to meet future responsibilities, and at a smaller premium.

Where shall I insure my life?

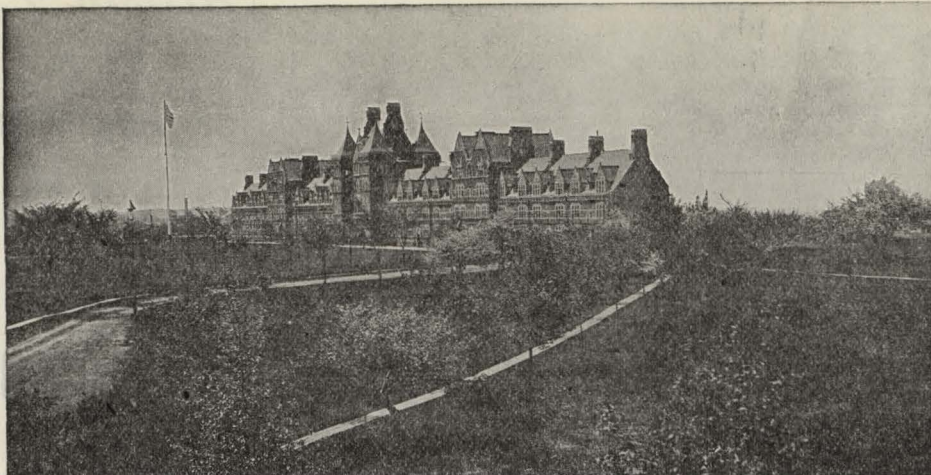

In a purely Mutual Company. In a company that earns, declares, and pays annual dividends. In a company that is doing a conservative business.

Such a Company is The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn. It furnishes perfect protection at lowest cost.

For further information, address the Company, or any of its agents.

A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standing is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised.
