FRESHMAN PLAY SUCCESS.

Large Audience Sees Good Work at Parsons' Theatre.

Junior Week and all its festivities was auspiciously inaugurated on Wednesday evening, when the class of 1916 presented Augustin Daly's comedy, "7-20-8", at Parsons' Theater, before a large and appreciative audience. The other name of the play is "Throwing the Boomerang", and its plot is based on the complications resulting from a husband's practicing deception on his wife. It was given for the benefit of the Hartford Dispensary and it should realize several hundred dollars from the performance.

It was a very creditable performance from every standpoint. Considering that the selection of the cast was limited to the freshman class, the different roles were excellently well taken, and showed a great wealth of histrionic ability in the class of 1916. The stage setting, in the charge of Mr. Ruel C. Tuttle, '89, was almost perfect—and in the opinion of some of the theater management, the most elaborate ever seen on Parson's stage.

Every one of the ten freshmen in the cast showed evidence of careful training. There were very few dull moments during the performance, and the fact that the four female roles were taken by men was the most amusing feature of the whole play, and kept the audience in an uproar of laughter from beginning to end.

James Landon Cole played the part of Courtney Corliss, a gentlemen of leisure, and he played it well. He is more deserving of praise in view of the fact that he had just gotten up from a sick bed.

Oscar Wilder Craik, in the role of Launcelot Bargiss, "a retired party who becomes the victim of the inevitable," scored a great hit. His portrayal of this exceedingly difficult character was as faithful as it could be made, and kept the performance alive throughout.

Victor Di Nezzo as Signor Palmiro Tamborini was a great success, also, and the audience showed their appreciation of his acting by frequent applause.

Of the female parts, Edward Abbe Niles as Dora Hollyhock scored the greatest success. He made up as a very beautiful young lady; his costumes were very elaborate and beautiful; and he played the part, which is a difficult one on account of its lachrymose nature, with great ability.

Frank Coyle made a good son-in-law to Launcelot Bargiss, and his acting was as natural as life.

Robert B. O'Connor, as Professor Gasleigh, possessed the true proportions for his part and acted it well.

Harold T. Thorne was Florence, the much-sought "7-20-8", and made a tall and beautiful girl, while the part of her mother, Mrs. Hypatia Bargiss, was well taken by John Norton Ives.

SECOND SENIOR SMOKER.

Professor Kleene Tells of German University Life.

Professor G. A. Kleene was the speaker at the second smoker of the senior class held Monday evening at the I. K. A. fraternity house. He took as his subject, life at the universities at Berlin and Lubingen, at each of which he spent a semester in the early nineties. He spoke first of his early desire to study in Germany and of finally enrolling in the University of Berlin. He said that the foreign students at the University usually lived and had their meals in pensions, but that like the German students he had lived in a rooming-house frequented by Germans and had obtained his meals at German places, in order to get acquainted with the people, and in order to learn the language better.

College esprit de corps, he remarked, was wholly lacking there and in other universities in the country, since there were very few interests shared by all the students. "Instead of saying they have attended a certain university," he said, "Germans say that they have studied under a certain professor," and he had the highest praise of the ability and scholarship of the professors. The training of the men who entered the university, the rigorous demands which obtaining a diploma put upon them, and the often serious results which follow failure were most interestingly described. He quoted Bismark's saying, that "One half of the German University students go to the devil and the other half ruled Europe," and said in comment that he didn't believe that half of them did go to the devil and that he knew that the other half came nowhere near ruling Europe. The absolute freedom from restraint he considered responsible for the great number of men who did degenerate, but he thought that those who went through the full course were pretty sure to be very fine men. The main thing which enabled the men to loaf during the first part of the course and yet be able in such numbers to pass the rigorous examinations, covering the entire course, given before a degree could be obtained, was the fact that the men knew how to study before they entered. He gave interesting descriptions of the lectures of the seminars, a much stiffer arrangement than those which American college men know, and of the final oral examination.

During the summer semester, he said, he went to Lubingen in South Germany, a much smaller institution, among people very different from the hard, practical Prussians, people who possessed what is called Gemutlichkeit, or kind hearts, sympathy, dreamers and poets. He told of the various social organizations to which he belonged, first the Auslanderverien, a group composed of foreign students in which he was the only American. He stated that the founder of the organization

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE.

Tufts and Middlebury Dropped. Rutgers Added.

Football manager E. J. Meyers, '14, has definitely announced his football schedule for 1913 as follows: Oct. 4—Worcester Tech. at Hartford. Oct. 11—Bowdoin at Brunswick, Me. Oct. 18—Amherst at Hartford. Oct. 25—Colgate at Hartford. Nov. 4—New York University at N. Y. Nov. 8—Haverford at Haverford, Pa. Nov. 15—Rutgers at New Brunswick, N. J. Nov. 22—Wesleyan at Hartford.

The schedule is in every respect an excellent one. Four home games out of a total of eight compares favorably with last year's schedule when there were five home games out of nine. Middlebury and Tufts colleges have been dropped from last year's list, and Rutgers has been added. The most commendable change is the placing of the Wesleyan game last on the list, with two games which, are not likely to be wearing ones, coming before it. The football enthusiasm reaches a climax here with the Wesleyan game and any game after it is almost sure to see a natural and decided falling off in the players' "pep".

The games with Worcester Tech, Haverford and Rutgers, judging by precedent in the case of the first two and by reports in the latter, are not likely to be specially hard. New York University is considerably better than a nice mouthful for Trinity, and a good game may be looked for with them. Bowdoin will meet us on her own territory and is likely to make a heroic effort at a "come-back" after last years' defeat. With Amherst and Colgate, Trinity has old scores of her own to wipe out, and the prospects are that two excellent games will be seen here in succession. Last of all, with good prospects for victory, the Wesleyan game is sure to be in point of interest, excitement and enthusiasm, a fitting climax for the season.

Track Meet Saturday.

On Saturday afternoon the college will have the opportunity of seeing the track men in real action. They will meet the team representing the Hartford Y. M. C. A., and stand a good show of bringing home the bacon, although the recent rains have necessitated a lack of practice. The meet will commence promptly at 2.30 p. m.

Barber, Terry Fellow.

The Mary A. Terry Fellowship for the ensuing year has been awarded by the faculty to William Pond Barber, Jr., of the class of 1913.

Opener Postponed.

The Intramural League game between the Delta Kappa Epsilon baseball team and the Phi Gamma Delta aggregation, scheduled for Monday morning, was postponed owing to wet grounds. This was to be the opening game of the season for Division A of the league.

INTRAMURAL SERIES BEGUN.

Alpha Delta Phi and Neutral Body Win the First Two Games.

Two games of the Intramural League schedule have been played this week, and the Alpha Delta Phi's and the Neutral Body have come out victorious. At 6.15 a. m., on Monday at Trinity Field, the Alpha Delta Phi team defeated the nine representing I. K. A. The score was 7 to 2. Yesterday morning the Neutral Body trimmed St. Anthony Hall to the tune of 8 to 4.

In the first game, the batting of Edsall and Elder, as well as the home run by E. Barnett, featured for the conquerors, while Meyers and Chapin put up the strongest games for the vanquished. The score (seven innings):

OFFICE—1 SEABURY HALL

"NOW THEN TRINITY"

"7-20-8."

The freshman class, particularly those members of it who took part in the performance of "7-20-8" Wednesday evening and those whose efforts made the presentation possible, deserve the congratulations and the thanks of the college body for their excellent work. The performance was by no means perfect, but it was a very efficient entertainer and it showed long and hard work. Now if the college body as a whole will wake to a realization of what it might do in the same direction, their work may have some highly pleasing results.

Williams Hall.

The picture of Williams Hall, published in the last issue of the Tripod through the courtesy of the Hartford Courant, was probably pleasant for most Trinity men to look upon, and makes them further grateful for the goodness of the college's great benefactor, J. Pierpont Morgan. The building, like the present main structure, is shown to be of a thoroughly collegiate and thoroughly impressive type. Like the gift itself, Mr. Morgan's selection of Mr. Morris as architect was very happy.

SECOND SENIOR SMOKER.

was Professor Wilfred R. Martin, long a professor at Trinity, and he said that he considered it unfortunate that the men in college couldn't have come several years earlier, to have enjoyed the privilege of studying under this man, one of the greatest professors Trinity ever had. He also told of a chess club to which he belonged, though he didn't play chess. He spoke most interestingly of the various phases of student life, of the beer-drinking customs and habits of the men, of the student duels and of the still cherished friendships formed there. The description of the duels attracted his listeners greatly, and it was told very vividly.

In summing up the work of the university, he said that physically the men did not seem much below the average of American students, in spite of the lack of athletics, which he said was coming into greater favor there now. Intellectually he considered the average American better equipped to live than the average German, though the German students have a great many more and deeper intellectual affairs in common. Morally, the men who went to the dogs, went far worse than any American students, while the graduates as a whole were of an unusually high type. He again commended the morality of the average American College man.

The men asked Professor Kleene many questions at the conclusion of his talk and discussed the matters in it informally. The smoker broke up with an enthusiastic "Trin" for the speaker.

FRESHMAN PLAY.

A great deal of credit is due to the managers of the play, James Landon Cole and Oscar Wilder Craik, who organized the cast and were mainly responsible for the success of the performance.

The cast was coached by Miss Clara M. Coe, and the results of her careful training were very evident in the smooth manner in which the performance went off. The costuming was supervised by Mrs. N. H. Batchelder. The managers for the dispensary were Walter S. Garde and Samuel C. Doty.

ETHICS CLUB CONSTITUTION.

Lecture on Relation of Ethics to Economics.

The Ethics Club met in the Psychological laboratory last Thursday evening at 7.30. The Constitution was read by John S. Moses, the president of the Ethics Club, and after a brief discussion it was adopted. Professor Kleene was then introduced by Professor Tower. In an exceedingly interesting manner Professor Kleene pointed out how the economic forces conflict with ethical ideals. He argued that in the majority of cases the economic forces are so predominant that they determine the nature of the prevalent moral ideal. The argument gave rise to an enthusiastic discussion. The meeting adjourned at 10 p. m. and thanks were accorded to Professor Kleene by a unanimous vote.

To Professional Men:

No class of men need life insurance more than do professional men. As a rule, the income of a professional man is largely, if not wholly, dependent on his brain, and when the activity of the mind ceases, his income ceases, or is at once greatly reduced.

The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company offers to the professional man who desires to assure his wife and children for life, or for a specified term of years, the continuance of a substantial part, at least, of the income to which they were accustomed during his lifetime, a contract perfectly suited to these needs.

$1,000 CAMPAIGN.
Contributions for General Secretary Increasing.

The campaign among the undergraduates for raising the $1,000 necessary to procure the general secretary for the college branch of the Y.M.C.A., is progressing steadily. The sum now pledged is a little over $165, and this represents only about a half of the college body. So well have the undergraduates replied to the appeal for funds that the committee is in hopes of seeing the final figures of $250 at least. The encouraging way in which the undergraduate body is taking hold of this matter seems to indicate that they really feel the need of such a man to work for the development of the organization and the college. The committee as yet has not had time to see a great many of the men but any of its members will be glad to talk the matter over personally with anyone interested in the movement and willing to help. The undergraduate committee is composed of Moore, '13, Fort, '14, J. Moses, '14, and they would be very willing to give particulars of the campaign to all who are interested.

J. P. MORGAN BURIED.
College Body Pays Respects as Cortege Passes.

J. Pierpont Morgan, trustee of Trinity College, was buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Monday, after services in St. George's Church in New York City, of which he was Senior Warden. The services in New York were conducted by the Rev. Karl Reiland, '97, at 10 o'clock Monday, and the body was brought to Hartford by special train after the service for interment. The train arrived in Hartford at 2 o'clock, bearing besides the body, the close friends and relatives of the deceased, including President Luther, Rev. William H. Vibbert, and Ambrose Spencer Murray, jr., who represented the corporation. At 12.45 the college body met in Alumni Hall and voted to stand along the line of march of the funeral procession, as it passed along Main Street from the station to Cedar Hill. Practically every man in college gathered in front of Professor McCook's house on Main Street and stood with bared heads while the cortege passed.
