plans of the trustees, the dedication of the Trowbridge Memorial will take place on Saturday, October 19, at 8 p. m. Addresses will be made by President Ogilby, Professor Oosting, of the Physical Training Department, and possibly Mr. Howard T. Greenlev, '94, of New York City, the consulting architect of the college. Following a few short addresses by other guests, the first official dives in the new pool will be taken by Professor Oosting and Mr. Clarke, the new swimming director.

Members of the Yale and Wesleyan demonstrate the various types of dives and racing strokes, after which be duplicated. a game of water polo will be played. Immediately after the swimming exhibitions, numerous games of squash planned to have present Mr. Ralph Power of Montville, Conn., President of the United States Squash Racquets Courts Association, and former internationlist for Canada. Mr. Power will play Mr. Paul Callanan, who ranks as one of the best players ever turned out by Harvard. Along with several others, Mr. Hobart H. Hyde, a leading tennis player of the Hartford Golf Club, will also appear in the matches.

At the conclusion of the games, an opportunity to inspect the building will be afforded to all present. Admission will be allowed only to members of the college body, the faculty, and those of the alumni who are returning for their fall class reunion. As the capacity of the building is limited to 550 persons, there will be no admission to the public or to relatives and friends of the college body

HAVERFORD TO OPPOSE TRINITY THIS SATURDAY

Game to Mark Resumption of Sport Relations Between the Two Colleges

The Blue and Gold football team, inspired by its hard-earned victory over Worcester Tech, meets Haverford this Saturday on the local gridiron. The game will mark the resumption of athletic relations between Trinity and Haverford, inasmuch as In accordance with the tentative the last game between the two institutions was played in 1922, with Trinity on the winning end.

> Thus far Haverford has played two games. The first with Ursinus resulted in a scoreless deadlock, and the second with Susquehanna resulted in victory for Haverford by a score of 19 to 0. The Blue and Gold record thus far stands with a 44 to 0 loss at the hands of Williams, and a 7 to 6 victory over Worcester Tech.

Morris, Haverford's fullback, is the outstanding player of his team. He is an excellent punter as well as an accurate passer. Both Haverford ends, Conn and Crawford are six-footers, so that Trinity's defense against swimming teams, under the direction the aerial attack will have to be funcof Messrs. Local Men's Club May Sponsor Performances of Society; Members Requested to Suggest Plays.

The Jesters, Trinity College Dramatic Society, held a meeting last Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock at the Alpha Delta Phi house, in which the chief business was the election of new officers for the coming year. The results of the election were: for President, Coles, '30; for Business Manager, Taggard, '30; for Property Manager, Twaddle, '31; for Stage Manager, Mitchell, '31. President Coles then took charge of the meeting, and after their nominations a rising vote was called for the election of Guckenbuehler, '31, Isherwood, '31, and Gauthier, '30, as new Senior members of The Jesters.

The rest of the time of the meeting was taken up with discussions concerning the possibilities of presenting a play, or series of plays some time this fall or early winter. The relative merits of presenting a three-act play, as has been usual, or of offering three one-act plays instead was gone into. Favor was about equally divided between the members as to the advantages of either of these two alternatives. The feeling was that three one-act plays should be well received as a novelty, only this would present a problem in the way of additional costs for a triplication of costumes, sets, properties, etc., with reference to the financial consideration, which is of more than usual importance at the present time, successful record of last year. TRINITY DOWNS WORCESTER TECH IN FIRST HOME GAME OF SEASON

FALL TRACK MEET TO BE HELD OCTOBER 18

Coach Oosting Well Pleased with Progress of Large Track Squad

On Friday, October 18, Coach Oosting will hold the annual fall track meet. This is to be an informal contest which every man is invited to enter. All the events including the weight and pole vault events will be run off. The object of this meet is to bring out all the men who offer possibilities for next Spring.

Since the squad was first called out. Coach Oosting has been gradually increasing the amount of exercise taken by the men, until now, each man is able to concentrate on the more strenuous routine necessary for his particular event. In spite of the fact that this is the largest and most ambitious track group in the history of the sport at the college, the coaches have been able to divide the men into small groups where they are carefully watched and instructed.

It is gratifying to watch the manner in which the men go through their workouts, their spirit and cooperation helping Coach Oosting and Mr. Clark to develop each man in his individual event. All the men are showing up fairly well, and, although it is still too early to pick out those men with ability, it is easy to see that Trinity will be represented by a much better squad next spring than it was last

With the exception of Nve. captain of the squad, and several other members, who are playing with the football team, the veteran track men have been working steadily, attempting to regain and better their last year's form. Carlton and Carson have not

SCORE 7 TO 6

Phippen Scores an Extra Point: Linesmen Hold Worcester for Downs When Goal is Threatened

A revamped Trinity eleven, showing more scrap than has been seen on Trinity field in several seasons, doggedly fought its way to a 7 to 6 victory over Worcester Tech. last Saturday.

The decided improvement in the eleven over the performance against Williams was a source of satisfaction to the many Trinity fans who turned out to see the first home game. The shifting of Slossberg to the backfield materially strengthened the team's attack. The line worked as a unit, opening wide holes. The forwards proved to be stone when Trinity's goal was threatened, holding Worcester for downs, or else recovering fumbles. Phippen was a great steadying force. His punts kept Worcester on the defense in the first period, and got Trinity out of several tight holes later in the game.

Worcester had a veteran team, composed of several regulars and four reserves from the 1928 eleven which beat Trinity 34 to 0. The Red and Gray threatened early in the first quarter when they were given first down on Trinity's 38-yard line because of a penalty for holding. Putnam made first down in two plays on Trinity's 26-yard line. Here the line held and Asp punted. A Trinity rally was cut short by another penalty after Slossberg had made fifteen vards around end. THE TROWBRIDGE MEMORIAL

With the opening of the new Trowbridge Memorial, greater opportunity will be given to members of the student body to avail themselves of a form of recreation which is not limited to eleven men or to nine men or to five men. Swimming is a sport in which nearly every young man may participate. It is a form of exercise which a man can indulge in without the necessity of undergoing six months' practice. It is true that a man does not become an expert swimmer until after many years of practice, but it is likewise true that with a few lessons from a coach a man may derive nearly the maximum amount of pleasure in a few weeks. Moreover, swimming is a sport which does not require the expenditure of a great deal of energy; one may still play while one exercises. It is a lamentable fact, that most of the present day sports entail much more work, and much more practice than they deserve. What benefit, in the way of pure play and healthy recreation, do 350 men derive from watching eleven men batter themselves up and down 100 yards of greensward? To the rational mind there is but one answer.

The Trowbridge Memorial, in addition to its fine swimming pool, will provide facilities for those who wish to play squash racquets. This game, as we understand it, is one which also may be played by the whole undergraduate body, and not merely by a select group. Here again, the advantages for individual play and health recreation are obvious.

It is only fitting, therefore, that the college-its president, faculty, alumni, and undergraduate body-participate in some simple exercise to show its gratitude to the donor, the architect, and others who made this building, and the splendid opportunities it offers,

NUMBER ONE

"The biggest upset in a day of football upsets occurred in Hartford on Saturday when the Trinity team nosed out Worcester Tech by a single point. That was a real upset, not even the most sincere admirer of the Blue and Gold giving Trinity an outside chance of defeating the boys from the Bay State," said Mr. Albert W. Keane in yesterday's "Courant", and two columns over, on the same page, Mr. William J. Lee said, "The college football returns Saturday left the guessing gentry gasping for breath, but the big wallop for the grid-struck citizens in this particular sector came with Trinity's 7-6 win over Worcester Tech.

And so, two of the greatest sports-writers (and sportsmen) in this sector were left gasping for breath while we at Trinity had already started looking toward a season's record of four straight victories, with, of course, an inevitable blanking of Wesleyan in the last game. For this Worcester game was only a beginning, one that took a long time in coming, it's true, but, nevertheless, a beginning; it was impossible to look at the team on Saturday without realizing that something radical had happened. To quote Mr. Lee again, "Trinity football players have been a laughing stock. Perhaps they have been goats long enough, * * like inspired players Saturday.

All of which may sound very much like the final chapter in a Dick Merriwell dime seller. But the fact remains that the Trinity players really were inspired. Possibly the fact that they had changed back to the same blue jersey that Trinity used to wear when beating Wesleyan was a mere commonplace—had something to do with it (and let's hope that the yellow jersey is definitely junked), possibly they merely suddenly got the idea that they were going to win; at any rate, they won, and we in the stands just said, "I told

Perhaps the things that the (to us, fanatical) alumni have been telling us are really so. Perhaps there really was a time when Trinity teams made three or four touchdowns in the last five minutes of play. Things like this sounded pretty much like the gabblings of senseless old men three or four weeks ago, but now we know that they are so; now we know that Haverford, Hamilton, and Wesleyan are (in the order named) going to start wondering what hit them so suddenly.

The mere fact that Meier-or Cooper-or Nye, played as individuals means nothing. The whole thing is that the team played those who flunk out comparatively together and knocked everything down that got in its way. When early in their courses have spent a Dignam, first-string end, was injured, Johnny Childs, who weighed about a hundred and thirty pounds, and had been out for football exactly three days, went out and held down his end for the rest of the game (and, incidentally, it was Childs' running in that hurried the Worcester kick after touchdown). These were the things that evidently made our friends of the "Courant" gasp, but to us it was of study is wrong. something perfectly understandable, something that was merely in keeping with Trinity spirit.

BOOK REVIEW

A KING OF SHADOWS,

"Give me your hand," he said, "we need no other light but love."

That is the closing sentence of Miss Yeo's book. Can you guess from it what kind of a book "A King of Shadows" is? Let us give you some of the chapter headings-they may help you in your answering: "A Prince of Dreams", "Now or Never!", "The Borgia Ring", "Silk and Steel", 'Faithful Unto Death", "The Masked Ball."

If your guess is an historical romance, you are right. And what a romance it is! Color, valor and romantic love fill every one of the 384 pages of the book.

"A King of Shadows" is a far cry from the modern novel that deals in subtle character analysis and realistic presentation of problems. It tells the story of Margaret Ogilvie (not the famous one, mother to Barrie) and her loyalty to James III and to her lover, Pierro.

After the simple style used in so many of the recent books, it is difficult to plunge into the lengthy description and multiplicity of characters that appear in an historical novel. Then, too, since the historical side of the story necessitates some knowledge of events in England, Scotland and on the Continent, during 1716-1717, there is a prerequisite that few readers will be able to fulfill.

For the story itself, our taste is none too keen for the good old plot in which the heroine disguises as a boy to ride through snow and danger for her lover and the king. The melodramatic appeals to us only in certain moods, and we were not in the mood when we read "A King of Shadows."

Another element making the story hard to read is a use of smatterings in three languages: Scotch, French and Italian (the book, of course, is in English!) This makes us think of the student who, because he has had a year of Greek, feels that he must quote Greek in his English papers. The effect is amateurish.

A subject with so much colorful material offers possibilities of vivid description. And Miss Yeo has made much of this. We like the femininity difficult reading.

> "The narrow, winding street and the gables of the houses, nodding towards each other like old wives gossiping, looked unfamiliar in the dim, white light reflected from the snow; the outlook had a strange air in the faint grey of the winter dawn, as if a wizard wand had transfigured the common things of daily life into something magic and enchanted.

"The slim white hand, with its burden of blazing gems, lay on hers. It was smooth and cool as running water under her lips; then, as she rose from her curtsey, her feet caught on the wolves' skin rug and she slipped onto her knees."

The amateurish use of foreign words is shown in the following ex-

"'A riverderci caro mio', he said. Be no longer than you must. Without you I am less than half myself'."

"-the decor was of a daintiness, a gold and white, blue and rose, artificiality * * *."

What advantage is achieved through the use of decor is more than we see; there are many such abuses.

Macmillan prints this on the book

"Miss Yeo has written a swiftly moving, colorful story of intrigue (largely ecclesiastical and political in character) during the period of the Italian Renaissance and the English Tudors. Its hero-a Roman youth-might not be out of place in a novel by Dumas. The villain is a grim and poisonous old fellow who turns up at odd moments. The rise of the Jesuits serves as background and the Church's efforts to stem the tide of religious revolution in England. The figure of Ignatius Loyola is sketched in understandingly and appealingly. "Miss Yeo has a fine sense of pageantry and her story is full to overflowing of thrill and action."

It is a just statement, and from it you can decide whether or not you care to read the book. We find it

SENATE MEETING HELD TO ADJUST FINANCES

Chief Discussion Concerns Plan for Working of Senate Finance Committee

F. W. COOPER PRESIDES

Emphasizes Lack of Responsibility Shown by Undergraduates in Paying Class Dues and Assessments.

The second regular meeting of the Senate was called to order at the Delta Phi house at 7.20 Tuesday evening by President Cooper, the roll call showing all members present.

The important business of the meeting was to discuss and make recommendations for an adequate working plan for the Senate Finance Committee. Cornwell made the motion that mimeographed copies be made of the report of last year's Finance Committee for each of the present mem-This will allow proper and much needed consideration of a future plan to be followed. A discussion will be called for at the next meeting of the Senate and a course of action will be decided upon. The books and records of last year's committee have not yet been formally presented to the present Senate, and in connection with this item, letters to President Ogilby and MacInnes from Ellis, last year's chairman of the Finance Committee, were read, together with the The motion on respective replies. the floor was seconded and passed.

The striking lack of cooperation of the undergraduates in the payment of class dues was brought up for consideration. Cornwell suggested that the formerly mentioned plan of making the dues payable with the college bill at the beginning of the terms be used. This was put in the form of a motion, seconded and passed.

This plan, if put through, would dispense with a perplexing problem of extra point. the finances of the student body, but President Ogilby has announced himself as opposed to the idea.

At the college body meeting on the following day, Cooper made the statement that only present Juniors who had paid their class dues for the Trinity term of their Sophomore year would be eligible to hold office or vote in class elections.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION HOLDS FINAL ELECTIONS

New A. A. President to be Selected from Cornwell, Knurek and Nye

All who voted in the Spring elections last year and in the primaries held last Wednesday will have the opportunity to elect a new president of the Athletic Association at the finals, to be held on Wednesday, October 16, at the Union. The candidates are Philip Morba Cornwell, '29, Adam Felix Knurek, '29, and Roland Harris Nye, '29.

Following the precedent established last year, Fred Cooper, '29, captain of football, president of the College Body, and president of the A. A., resigned the latter office in order that the offices might be more evenly distributed. The Senate accepted his resignation and nominated for the office six members of the Senior class: P. M. Cornwell, J. A. Gillies, J. Lovering, A. F. Knurek, R. H. Nye, and W. A. Sturm. In the primaries held last Wednesday, there was a tie for the second largest number of votes which led to the decision of running three candidate in the finals.

Cornwell is a member of the Senate and has been prominent in class and extra-curriculum activities. Knurek is a member of the Senate, the Medusa, 'varsity football squad and is captain of baseball. Nye is a member of the 'varsity football squad, center on the basketball squad, member of the Senate and the Medusa, and is captain of the track team.

punt was blocked by Topalian on Trinity's 18-yard line. Putnam tore through holes in the left side of Trinity's line for two 5-yard gains, giving Worcester first down on Trinity's 7yard line. Here Trinity's line showed a great deal of fight, holding Worcester for downs. Putnam made two yards. Nye stopped O'Grady. Dignam broke up the next play. A pass over Trinity's goal line was knocked down by Disco, giving Trinity the ball on the 20-yard line. Knurek made six yards through the line before the half ended.

Dignam, whose hand was broken during the second quarter, was forced to leave the game. This put Coach Galvin in a very tight situation, as Geiger, regular end, was unable to play. "Johnny" Childs, a Junior, who had been out for the team only two days, took Dignam's place, and played a very good game all through the second half, considering his limited football experience.

Worcester threatened early in the third quarter, when Leach recovered a fumble by Disco on Trinity's 26yard line. A fifteen-yard penalty, however, forced Worcester to surrender the ball to Trinity on downs. Phippen punted to midfield. Sedano's punt was fumbled and Underhill recovered the ball on Trinity's 20-vard line. After three unsuccessful tries at the line, a deceptive triple pass was good for twenty-six yards Phippen stopping O'Grady on the Blue and Gold 1-yard line. On the next play, Weinstein broke through Worcester's line and fell on O'Grady's fumble. Trinity punted. The ball was downed by Meier on the 28-yard line. On the second down, Putnam took the ball off Trinity's left tackle eluding three Blue and Gold tacklers in a twentysix-yard run for a touchdown. Childs partially blocked Delano's try for the

After the kick-off, Trinity started a march that ended when Sedano intercepted one of Phippen's passes. The Blue and Gold got the ball when Meier recovered Putnam's fumble. A pass from Phippen to Nye brought the ball to Worcester's 15-yard line. After three plays a pass thrown by Slossberg was grounded over the goal and Topalian fell on the ball. Worcester was held and Sedano punted. Trinity's ball on Worcester's 48-yard line. Knurek made seven yards on a and Britton alternated in carrying score in two years. Phippen added Worcester's goal line. The ball was on for her in life. Worcester's 37-yard line when the final whistle blew.

The whole Blue and Gold team played well. The work of Durand Meier, and Weinstein in the line, Nye at end, and Knurek and Phippen in the back-field, was outstanding. Durand opened up wide holes in the Worcester line, besides playing a fine game on the defense. Meier played a head-up, aggresive game, recovering several fumbles. played a strong defensive game. Nye was on the receiving of several successful passes. He was also fast going down on the kicks and stalwart on the defense. In the second period he contributed the best tackle of the game when he dove over the Worcester interference to throw Delano for a five-yard loss. Knurek was the most effective ball-carrier, being a potent factor in the Blue and Gold's drive for the winning touchdown. Phippen out-punted the Worcester kickers, greatly steadied the team, and played well on the defense.

Sedano and Putnam were the outstanding players for Worcester.

The outlook for the remaining games is a great deal brighter. This Meier; Worcester, Sedano for Asp, was Trinity's first victory over Worcester Tech since 1923.

Probably we cannot do better in summarizing this symposium than by giving an extract from a memorandum made at the time:

"So far as the alternative presented by the report is concerned, I think the following conclusions are reasonable:

Did you read all of that? We'll bet you didn't. Here is a shorter one did while they were talking) that from the same paper.

Dare we quote another editorial? That is only a rhetorical question! Of course we do! This one is from the "Wesleyan Argus."

Too Close Harmony.

"'The Yale News' recently published an advertisement that is significant of the lock-step nature of our life, on campus and off campus. this jazz-uniformity, it has its disquieting aspect also. After all, is it minimum requirements. Their own likely that after being smoothed down construction of the resolutions just in a goose-step atmosphere (where even music and books, as well as ties and socks, are chosen for them) that these followers of Eddie Wittstein will go forth to provide in their communities the courageous, contagious leadership which is theoretically theirs? There are those who may smile at what seems our belaboring of an insignificant phase of contemporary life. Yet it seems to us the symbol of a twentieth century trend which threatens to conquer the colleges as well as the rest of the American scene.

"It is easy to talk too rapturously of the virtue of non-conformity. After to represent the existing view of a study and discipline," have met us in all, man is a gregarious-and hence strong majority of the Faculty, al- joint conference. conforming-animal, whose habits though not so overwhelming, in its and actions in large part must con- argument from predominant numbers, form to the common customs of his as indicated by the test vote of 19 to breed. But the opinion in favor of his own sweet way. Ex-President a change thus definitely formulated Faunce of Brown has said: 'In little things—caps and coats and customs follow the crowd; and in Rome do as is, as already said, the result of conthe Romans do. In vital matterspolitical opinions, religious convictions, moral principles—dare to be queer; i. e., dare to be yourself.' "The mass production method of industry and the increasing interdependence of modern life have proved a blessing in their economic fruits, but a curse in their conformist influence upon our thinking. Like fire, and firewater, and college regulations, bad masters. And so we uncharitably hope that the Record-a-Week Club will die still born (though we know it won't!); for even Victrola records can be a 'vital matter'."

We see therefore that only six out opposed to the first; fourteen are satisfied with the second, ten with the first. I have tried to be conservative in my deductions; when one reads over the notes one feels (as I there is a substantial majority for the second proposition and that the original small majority (said to be only one vote) is not any measure of girls too show you're Maroon and the faculty's true preferences, while the recent symposium really does represent a prevailing preference, even more marked than is indicated by the bare figures.

(4) Though I have not interviewed all the faculty members, there is reason to suppose that the expressed opinions of those I saw represent fairly enough the others. No suggestion to the contrary has been heard."

This was followed by numerous suggestions for re-arrangement of groups of study by members of the Faculty and the President. Meantime, and on January 25, 1929, arrived a letter from the Science members withdrawing their individual suggestions made in their interviews and suggesting requirements "based on the sound educational philosophy that a good education must have breadth as well as depth."

Finally, on April 9, 1929, the Faculty voted to withdraw their recnow more particularly stated in the letter of a Committee of the Faculty. effectively, though not perhaps consistently, away from the position in the April, 1928, report, then somewhat away from the "single A. The arguments for and against its proposals, and the criticisms of them which have been already made, will be discussed later in this report under the head of analysis and discussion of the views of those interested to help our labors.

Miscellaneous Material and Views.

Various persons of whom we inquired sent us catalogues, pamphlets and they are good servants, but devilishly books. We have a mass of unclassified material, mostly from the President or members of the Faculty. some mixed with data already referred to under other heads. Among them are the regrouping tabulations, the class attendance tabulations, the "The Beacon" of Rhode Island State psychological and other tabulations, College conducts a column called the and a report by Prof. Leonard on "Poets' Corner." In the particular capacity to accommodate increased copy brought to our notice there numbers, made at our request. Harrington of Wesleyan, to ex-President Olds of Amherst, to Dean Hawkes of Columbia, to Dr. Keppel of the Carnegie Foundation, to Doctor Moe of the Guggenheim Foundation, Chairman Powell of the Swarthmore Trustees, Prof. Gabriel of Yale, and to our President, the Dean, Professors Rogers, Barret, Dadourian Costello, Hutt and Leonard. We shall mention our Alumni separately, because our conferences with them came later; similarly with the Headmasters.

One of the documents submitted to you, an interesting summary of Trinity's entire problem, not merely that of studies, begins with the two sentences: "The College is a business corporation. Has education to sell." The second proposition, at any rate, cannot be disputed, and should not be forgotten. The practical suggestions of the Fellows and an unofficial committee emphasizing the matter of current demand, are most valuable and no doubt will be given weight. At this point, however, it seems appropriate to examine the other side of the shield. That incorrigible idealist Carl Schurz used to defend himself by observing that the navigator at sea is not disturbed by his inability to touch the stars which guide his course. In a recent number of "New York", H. de W. Fuller writes:

"A college of liberal arts may rightly stipulate that knowledge which searches the fundamentals of human conduct and character is of far greater worth than knowledge which merely plots out avenues to materialistic success-that, in a word, philosophy broadly conceived is of higher value than business psychology. The pursuit of the absolute, the struggle to bridge that tantalizing gulf between theory and practice used to be a favorite occupation of midnight hours at college years ago. Let us hope that it has not become utterly unpopular today. After all, the college should bring men face to face with what, as Barrett Wendell has said, 'most of all wise men love to face—with the infinite realities that lie, and that must forever lie, beyond human ken,.'

Alumni Activity.

Two bodies, one official and the other unofficial, have been most active, zealous, diligent and useful: the Board of Fellows of the Trinity ing in general to all who complete College, and a committee stating that they represent the membership of certain fraternities. We have a report reserve to the Faculty the privi- from each. We deeply appreciate the co-operative spirit in which they were it, or his work is preponderatingly prepared and offered.
