HON. OWEN J. ROBERTS LAUDS SMALL COLLEGES

Problems of Modern College Outlined at Annual Campus Service

MATERIALISM OPPOSED

Colleges Must Enforce Rigid
Intellectual Discipline—
Classical Education Praised.

"The small colleges have tremendous advantages over the large universities, as they provide for a closer intellectual and spiritual contact, and a better pursuit of educational ideals," declared Justice Owen D. Roberts, of the United States Supreme Court, in an address presented at the annual open-air service held on the campus in front of Northam Towers last Sunday morning.

The procession, led by College Marshal Keith Funston, who was followed by President Ogilby, Justice Roberts, Dean Thurman L. Hood and Rev. LeRoy B. Hutt, of the faculty assembled before Northam, and the order of service began with the singing of the hymn "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Hosts!" President Ogilby officiated at the service and was assisted by Dr. Hutt, who read the Scripture lesson, chosen from the gospel of Luke. Following the hymn, "Oh, God Our Help in Ages Past", President Ogilby introduced Justice Roberts as the speaker of the occasion.

In opening his address, Mr. Roberts stated the many advantages of the small college as compared to the large university, and compared Trinity with the University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in 1895. He firmly opposed the present march of mechanistic ideals in institutions, and declared that the modern educational system was badly in need of reform. In the first place he advocated the enforcement of a more rigid intellectual discipline, which meant a narrowing of the curriculum, with fewer electives offered, and fewer subjects taught. Mr. Roberts regretted the fact that most college graduates choose, for the most part, a large variety of courses, instead of concentrating upon a few subjects, and learning these well. He referred to students of modern languages and the classics, who upon receiving their degrees, were unable to translate or speak the language in which they had majored.

As a second reform the speaker advocated the abolishing of practical or vocational courses, such as Geography, Bookkeeping, Economics, and the like. These courses might contain practical information, which would doubtless help the business man in his career, but they did not provide him with the mental training. "A college," he said, "does not exist to prepare a man for anything. It exists to make one more of a man. The cultured man is one who lives in a universe apart from the material world. In that universe he is able to enjoy the beautiful and the good."

In concluding his address, Justice Roberts stated that he was an ardent believer in the study of the classic languages, for the humanities pertained to all the interests of human nature. The classical student was enabled to realize these ideals which formed the character of leading national statesmen, and hence for the future welfare of the United States, minds of the governing classes could

to Shutout Victory

The 'Varsity nine closed the 1931 season last Saturday by pounding three Alumni pitchers for ten runs while Adams and Boeger were holding the Alumni scoreless for nine innings. Immediately after the game the letter men elected Henry O. Phippen of South Hamilton, Massachusetts, as captain for the 1932 team.

The game Saturday was the ninth victory out of eleven starts for this season's team, and was not as one-sided as the score indicates. The Alumni team flashed some good ball throughout the game, but lack of

On Friday afternoon, June 12, the new stained glass window in memory of Judge William Franklin Henney, former mayor of Hartford, was set in place just in time for Trinity's commencement. Inspected by President Remsen B. Ogilby, trustees and alumni, this window is pronounced by them and by experts to be of unusual beauty and artistic merit. During the nights of commencement week-end the window was illuminated by the use of a flood light.

It is a gift of Miss Mary Henney of Hartford, sister of the man who was mayor of that city from 1904 to 1908, and received his honorary degree at Trinity in 1906. The window depicts the Last Supper. In the lower left-hand corner are the seals of Hartford and Connecticut, and in the lower right is the coat of arms of the Henney family, with an angel holding a book.

On the evening of Sunday, June 14, the Baccalaureate Sermon was delivered at Christ Church Cathedral by the Rev. Louis Cope Washburn, D.D., Trinity, '81, of Philadelphia.

The Rev. Washburn took for his text, "And in the midst of them was a man of high stature", which occurs in the book of Ezra. He went on to explain the meaning of the text and interpreted "a man of high stature" to mean a strong man with a high personal idealism to which he was steadfast.

Mr. Washburn went on to point out

Ceremonies

7 HONORARY AWARDS

Justice Owen Roberts of Supreme Court Receives the Degree of Doctor of Laws from Trinity.

The class of 1931 was graduated yesterday morning in Alumni Hall before a large Commencement audience. Fifty-eight Seniors received their diplomas in the celebration of the one hundred and fifth annual Commencement in the history of the college. It was the largest graduating class that Trinity has ever had.

Four degrees of Master of Arts in Course were awarded, and three men received the degree of Master of Science in Course. In addition to these five honorary degrees were awarded. The degree of Master of Arts was received by Goodwin Beach of Hartford and Philip Curtiss of Norfolk, Doctor of Letters by Walter Ralph Steiner, of Hartford, Doctor of Laws by Owen Joseph Roberts, Supreme Court Justice of Washington, D. C., Doctor of Divinity by Howard Chandler Robbins of New York.

The Academic Procession, led by George Keith Funston, '32, the College Marshal, was formed about 10 o'clock on the campus. The ceremonies of graduation were begun about 10.30 in Alumni Hall when the Salutatory address was delivered by Charles Edward Jacobson. At the conclusion of the Salutatory the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science were conferred upon the fifty-eight Seniors, twenty-one receiving the former degree and thirty-seven the latter. The Master's degrees in Course were then conferred and the Valedictory address delivered by Lewis Albee Giffin.

The Commencement address was delivered by Walter Ralph Steiner, M. D., of Hartford. Dr. Steiner spoke briefly and to the point. He warned the graduating class of the pitfalls which they would encounter should they think their education complete with a Bachelor's degree. He said that education was never complete and he used the medical profession as an example of a continual process of learning.

The degrees "Honoris Causa" were then conferred by President Ogilby and Professor Frank Cole Babbitt, senior member of the faculty.

Degrees were awarded to the following men:

Bachelor of Arts, in Course.
Newton VanAkin Blakeslee.
George Laurence Blauvelt.
Harold Charles Bonell.
Lyman Bushnell Brainerd.
Milton Albert Cookson.
Ezra Sampson Diman, 3rd.
Eugene Addison Durand.
Joseph Francis Fleming, Jr.
Julian John Glynn.
Sigfrid Ebenhard Green.
John Fleet Isherwood.
Edward Willard Ljongquist.
George Albert Mackie.
Daniel Butler McCook.
John Baldwin Meeker.

AVE ATQUE VALE!

With the passing of the one hundred and fifth Commencement, the editors of "The Trinity Tripod" take this opportunity to extend their greetings to the Class of 1931, hoping that their achievements in future years will bring distinction and honor to the old college "neath the elms". We hope that during their four years of training within these halls they have acquired the culture of educated men which will fit them well for public service.

JUSTICE ROBERTS' ADDRESS

Trinity men have good reason to be proud of their "Alma Mater" after hearing the address of Justice Owen D. Roberts, of the United States Supreme Court, delivered at the annual open-air service held in front of the Northam last Sunday morning. In outlining the advantages of the small college over the large university, Mr. Roberts referred to the close contacts which existed between the student and professor, and other important factors which ultimately facilitate a better pursuit of educational ideals. These facts all have their bearing upon Trinity, and, as a matter of fact, they alone account for her long prominence as an institution of learning. In regard to Justice Roberts' opinion favoring a return of colleges to the study of the classics, we might also state that Trinity can be classed as a leading institution in this movement, since there is at least thirty per cent. of the student body studying either Latin or Greek.

In considering the speaker, we close this rambling, incoherent, discussion by stating that Justice Roberts' address was perhaps the finest that we, as undergraduates, have ever heard presented at the college. We hope that he will render Trinity a similar service in the future.

TO THE READERS OF "THE TRINITY TRIPOD"

The editor-in-chief offers his apology to the readers of "The Trinity Tripod", for the false quotation of statistics which appeared in an editorial "What About the Fraternities?", of the issue of May 26, 1931. All misstatements will hereby be corrected in the following paragraph:

As expressed in the editorial, the statistics show that eighty-five per cent. of the fraternity men have flunked out of Trinity in the past five years, whereas the correct figures show that eighty-five of the men forced to leave Trinity within the past ten years, have been fraternity men.

best be trained through the study of Latin and Greek. The speaker illustrated this in referring to the educational training received by the leading English statesmen for the past two centuries or more.

The service was concluded with the singing of the Trinity Centennial Hymn, the words of which were composed by Professor Odell Shepard, of the English department. The Foot Guard band then struck up the Star Spangled Banner, after which the college flags were borne to the old chapel by Sheldon Roots and Daniel B. McCook.

At the Class Day exercises, which were held on Saturday morning, the program commenced with the opening address of farewell by Lauriston Scaife, Class Day Chairman, and there followed the reading of the class poem by William D. Guckenbuehler, and the delivery of the class history by John Fleet Isherwood. The class statistics, which rapped college characters and customs in a humorous vein, were read by John B. Meeker. Several athletic awards were made by John Gooding, president of the Athletic Association, and Glee Club and Jesters' charms were presented to the undergraduate candidates by presidents Ljungquist and Guckenbuehler, respectively.

Following the presentations of gifts to the seniors, by Ralph D. Britton of Elmwood, presenter, the class prophecy was read by Jerome Wyckoff. Robert O. Muller presented to Professor Frank C. Babbitt, secretary of the faculty, the class present, a beautiful brass book-rest to be used on the altar of the Crypt Chapel. The exercises were brought to a close by an oration delivered by the Rt. Rev. Philip Cook, of the Class of 1877, Bishop of Delaware.

BOOK REVIEW

AN ECONOMIC HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, by Edward Frank Humphrey, Northam Professor of History and Political Science. The Century Company. Price $4.

Realizing the lack of a good modern economic history which would serve either as a text, a reference book, or a source of reading for pleasure, Professor Humphrey determined to satisfy the need with his Economic History of the United States. He has succeeded admirably.

The chief purpose of Professor Humphrey is to discover in the record of our economic growth an explanation of conditions as they are at the present time. Here is no mere collection of dates, statistics, or formulas; rather personalities, descriptions, and movements are stressed.

The author's treatment is intensely interesting. He holds our attention in the book just as he does in the classroom. His style, while scholarly, at the same time is fluent, lucid, and natural so that it is readily understandable to a person who has never read history before. All of American history and institutions are interpreted in the light of our economic development. Every phase of the economic progress of the United States is treated in this penetrating study and through this interpretation we learn about political history and social development. This is possible because Professor Humphrey shows how dependent our political and social history has been on economic influences. He unites history and economics. Our history to a larger degree than that of any other nation is the story of business development.

The book traces the evolution of the European agricultural handicraft society into our present-day American civilization based on science and industry. Special attention is given to the transformation which followed the introduction of the Industrial Revolution. Throughout the book a liaison is kept between the narrower trends of industry, labor, agriculture, and commerce and the larger historical elements of international relations.

politics, education, and the like. The work starts with the discoveries of the New World and follows the economic interchange and the mutual reactions of the New World and the Old World systems. It notes the rise and fall of the mercantile system of economic thought and deals with the American system as created by Alexander Hamilton and Henry Clay, noting its conflict with the Adam Smith doctrine championed by Thomas Jefferson and his followers. Particular attention is given to the nationalization movement which followed the Civil War and the consequent consolidation, or merging, of railroads, banks, industries, et cetera, into nationwide units.

The organization of the book is excellent. The economic epochs of American history are divided into five main parts with subheads under them. Thus a clear outline of the work is given. This is of indefinite value as an aid to clear understanding when using the book as a text, for which the work was primarily designed. With the aid of the ample index the clear organization enables one using the book for reference to find just what one wants in the shortest time. Each topic is treated fully yet concisely. Another distinct advantage is that unlike so many economic histories, commerce, industry, labor, and other economic phases are not treated for the whole period of American history in one separate chapter devoted to each. The topics are worked in according to their development in a certain age which enables us to get a complete view of American economic life at any particular time.

There is an abundance of maps, charts, graphs, and halftone illustrations which supplement the text perfectly. The book seems to be all the more a product of Trinity College when we know that several excellent maps were drawn for it by Harris K. Prior, '32, and Richard C. Meloy, '32. In short, this "Economic History" is a distinct contribution to historical scholarship and one of which every Trinity man may justly be proud.

—K. FUNSTON.

Last Supper Window Proclaimed Masterpiece

Alumni, visiting the college for commencement, will be able to get an idea of what the completed chapel will look like, as the North Chapel has been finished.

There have been 150 contributions for the Mothers' window. The total amount subscribed is in excess of $1,500. There will be no set time in which contributions will have to be handed in. Dr. Ogilby expects to receive many contributions this summer.

The Last Supper window has been finished. It is difficult to get an idea of the beauty of this window as too much light comes in from the inside.

Description of the Last Supper Window in the North Chapel.

This window is given to Trinity College by Miss Mary Henney in memory of her brother, Judge Henney, who was at one time Mayor of Hartford. He was a graduate of Princeton, but received the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from Trinity.

Mr. Sanborn, the artist, in representing the Last Supper has made an original departure from the conventional treatment of the Last Supper in art established years ago by Leonardo da Vinci. Leonardo showed the Master on the other side of the table surrounded by His disciples. Mr. Sanborn, however, represents us as standing behind the Master, who is seated at the table with the disciples around on the other side. They are looking at Him in wonder. He is looking up and sees a vision of Himself on the Cross the next day, but He knows that everything is all right because he sees around Him on the Cross the arms of His Heavenly Father.

The panel on the left represents Moses who, when he brought water out of the rock for his thirsty people, was in a way anticipating the Eucharist. On the right is represented St. Paul with a picture of him giving the Bread and Wine to the sailors in a storm at sea.

On the bottom of the left hand panel are the seals of Hartford and of Connecticut to typify Judge Henney's services to the state. At the bottom of the right hand panel is the Henney coat-of-arms together with an angel holding a book as a tribute to the Judge's literary ability.

This is the Friendship Chapel. At the bottom window is in Latin the inscription "Greater love hath no man than he lay down his life for his friends."

One of the Friendship windows is also completed. The Damon and Pythias window is the gift of Major Frank L. Wilcox in memory of his friend, Robert Coleman, '77.

The Aeneas and Achates window is the gift of President Ogilby in memory of his friend, Bishop Brent, as a tribute to the friendship of an older man for a younger. When President Ogilby was with Bishop Brent in the Philippines the Bishop often spoke of him affectionately as "Fidus Achates."

The lower part of the window shows Aeneas fleeing from burning Troy, attended by Achates. In the upper part of the window Aeneas and Achates on their wanderings have reached Africa.

practice and team-work spelled their defeat. "Bub" Whittaker and "Nick" Mastronarde both of the class of '28, and "Harry" McKniff, '25, divided the pitching role of the graduate team among them.

Ray Adams was on the mound for the 'Varsity during the first three innings and received credit for the victory, his eighth of the season. He was relieved in the fourth by Bill Boeger who was touched for only three hits in the last six innings, two of them by Sturgess, Alumni outfielder.

Ray Adams led the 'Varsity offense with a triple and two singles on which he scored three runs. Jack Gooding, co-captain with Adams for the past season, scored two runs and accepted seven chances without an error at second base in his last college game.

BASEBALL TEAM MAKES BEST RECORD IN YEARS

Judging by the number of games won and lost and by the calibre of the teams beaten, the 1931 baseball team can be justly called the best team Trinity has had in any sport in the last dozen years. The team won eight games and lost but two, including in the teams that they defeated Wesleyan, Williams, Worcester Tech, Union, and Connecticut Aggies.

Much of the credit for a successful season must be given to Coach Gilbert V. Wright, who made the most out of the material on hand and developed a spirit that gave the individual members of the team confidence in each other and in the team as a unit.

Co-captains, Jack Gooding, '31, of Forest Hills, N. Y., and Raymond Kelly Adams, '32, of Deep River, set a classic example to their teammates by their constant effort and excellent work. Gooding played second base and led the team in fielding, making but one error in 57 chances and besides batted over .300. Adams can safely be rated the best small college pitcher in New England. He is one of the few college pitchers in the East who went through the season undefeated.

The season's opening on April 22 was a big disappointment to the Trinity fans. A weak team from Lowell Textile came to Trinity Field and by making the most of Trinity's misplays in the late innings of the game, overcame what appeared to be a safe lead and won 11 to 5.

Coach Wright revamped the Gold and Blue lineup for the Connecticut Aggie game at Storrs. Phippen was brought in from the outfield and replaced Bell as catcher. Carey and Vignati were put in the outfield. The game was Trinity's first victory. The Aggies were completely baffled by Adams' pitching and as the Trinity batsman found the home team's pitching comparatively easy, the team returned to Hartford with a clean-cut 8 to 2 victory.

that fifty-five hundred years after Ezra, came Christ who was another man of "high stature", and whose coming Ezra himself had predicted. The greatest figures of history were described by the speaker as being men of "high stature" and he stated that in the chaos of the modern world there was again a need for men of that calibre.

The speaker said that it was the duty of every young man to build for himself a high idealism and moral code, and that our mechanistic age must soon come to its limit, to that meeting place of the finite and of the infinite where reason fails. He quoted Sir James Jeans, the noted English astronomer and physicist, as saying recently that the only worthwhile philosophy was an idealistic philosophy.

Using George Washington as an example, Mr. Washburn illustrated true greatness as arising from a combination of a strong personality and will with a steadfast personal idealism and morality. Using Washington as a further example the speaker illustrated how his idealism could be traced through the history of Christianity, the great idealistic movement to which all modern development can be traced in spite of its present weakening.

Addressing the graduating class directly, Mr. Washburn exhorted them to build within themselves a strong faith in Christian ideals and to endeavor to make themselves into men "of high stature."

At the conclusion of the sermon the Baccalaureate hymn was sung by the entire congregation and then the benediction was said. The service was concluded by a Recessional.

TRACK TEAM ELECTS R. S. CHRISTY, CAPTAIN

Track Season Shows Very Fair Record—Daut Stellar Performer

At a meeting of the lettermen last week, Ralph S. Christy of Westerly, Rhode Island, was elected to the captaincy of the 1932 track team. Christy has been a consistent performer in both hurdle races for the past two years. Christy is a member of the class of 1932 and of the Alpha Chi Rho Fraternity.

The track season this year was a decided improvement over recent years. The team engaged in four meets and won two of them quite handily. Massachusetts State was defeated in the first meet of the season at Amherst. The following week the team journeyed to Northfield, Vermont, and was defeated by the strong Norwich University squad. In this meet Captain Bill Welivar lowered the college record for the 220-yard dash by one-fifth of a second.

The meet with Clark University was held in Hartford and proved to be a walkaway for the Blue and Gold men. In this meet Mort Spray shattered the college record for the discus.

The Connecticut Aggie meet of Decoration Day was the most thrilling meet of the year. The final score was 63 to 61. Before the final event, the broad jump, the score was tied at 58 all. The Aggies won when Dan Chubbuck, their one-man team who took seven firsts, beat Bobby Daut by three inches.

The star performer of the season was the freshman Bobby Daut. Entering in five or six events in every meet, Daut averaged around 15 points. In another two years he should develop into one of the best all-around track men in the East.

ADAMS PITCHES SHUTOUT VICTORY OVER CLARK

Blue and Gold Team Has Little Trouble in Defeating the Worcester Nine

On Tuesday, May 26, the Trinity batsmen defeated Clark at Worcester by a score of 4 to 0. Ray Adams, the Blue and Gold ace, pitched shutout ball, striking out 12 and walking two batters. Only one Clark man reached the bases during the first three innings of the game, and eight of the first nine men at bat struck out.

Co-captain Gooding was the batting star for Trinity with three hits in three times at bat.

The game was not as close as the score indicates, for many runs for the visiting nine were prevented by several double plays of the Clark men. The Blue and Gold team played errorless baseball, ably backing up the excellent work of Ray Adams on the mound.

BASEBALL TEAM MAKES BEST RECORD IN YEARS.

Worcester Tech, came to Hartford on April 29 and Ray Adams won his second victory in a convincing manner. The score was 13 to 7. This was the first victory over the Engineers in several seasons in baseball.

Trinity's chances to defeat Union appeared to be pretty slim, as the visitors had to their credit a one-sided victory over West Point. Ralph Houlihan, a freshman, made his debut as a Trinity pitcher by turning in a very creditable performance. Union was defeated in a very interesting contest, which was shortened to six innings by a heavy rainstorm, by the score of 3 to 2.

The objective game of the season with Wesleyan was entirely successful, as Trinity won a very well-played game by a score of 5 to 3. Adams outpitched the Wesleyan captain, Olin Nye, letting down the Cardinal and Black with but four hits. Gooding accepted seven chances without an error and his double started the seventh inning rally that won the game. Fontana and Phippen contributed important hits.

The Williams' game was the best played of the season. Trinity started poorly and at the end of the first inning Williams was leading 2 to 0. From then on Adams was invincible and rallies in the seventh and eighth innings netted three runs for Trinity and a well-earned victory. In this game Adams received excellent support in the field.

The most dramatic game of the season was with C. C. N. Y. In the ninth inning it appeared that Trinity's sixth straight victory was assured. The visitors, however, tied the score. The lead seasawed until the first part of the twelfth when C. C. N. Y. scored two runs. Trinity's chances for victory seemed to have faded. Then Phippen hit a home run with two teammates on the bases. The final score was 8 to 7.

Trinity's winning streak was broken by Massachusetts Aggies at Amherst. The Blue and Gold infield cracked and the whole team seemed listless. The result was a 12 to 6 defeat.

The game with Amherst for which Adams had been saved was rained out.

Clark University was Adams' next victim. The score was 4 to 0.

In the final intercollegiate game of the year the Connecticut Aggies were again defeated. This game was not up to Trinity's high standard of play.

RUSHING AGREEMENT MAY BE USED

In view of the recent failure of the proposed system of sealed bids to pass the Interfraternity Council when two fraternities on the Campus did not agree, a special meeting was called on Saturday afternoon by Mr. Robert O'Connor, president of the Alumni Association. At this meeting one alumnus and one undergraduate member of each fraternity were present.

Nothing was accomplished in favor of the sealed bid proposal, but it was suggested that the agreement which was in use last September be reinstituted. Work will be done in this direction by correspondence with members of the various fraternities during the summer under the direction of G. K. Funston, president of the Interfraternity Council.

TRINITY CLOSES SEASON
WITH 9-7 VICTORY

Blue and Gold Men Turn Back
Conn. Aggies in Loosely
Played Game

On the morning of Saturday, May 30, the Trinity nine completed a highly successful season by defeating the Connecticut Aggies 9 to 7 on the Trinity diamond.

Bockwinkel was the big gun in the Trinity attack, collecting a single, double, and a triple, and scoring three runs himself. Ray Adams, despite the rough sledding, pitched the entire game himself, striking out five men and walking two.

Thus defeating the Aggies for the second time this year, the Trinity baseball team completed the best season any Blue and Gold nine has had in many years, winning eight of the ten games it played. After defeating both Williams and Wesleyan, Trinity's chances of defeating all of the Little Three were spoiled only by the fact that the Amherst game was called because of rain. Co-captains Adams and Gooding, and the Trinity nine as a whole, are to be congratulated for a most successful season.
