The Ivy
Dedication

TO THE
REV. PROF. HENRY FERGUSON, M. A., LL.D.

THIS VOLUME OF THE
TRINITY IVY
IS DEDICATED

By the Class of 1906
"As a little sprig of ivy
Planted by the college wall
Ever reaches out its tendrils
Till at length it covers all,
So thy spirit, Alma Mater,
    Planted once within our heart,
With its roots of old traditions
    Which the years gone by impart,
Reaches to our souls its creepers,
    Tendrils formed of love for thee,
Binding us to thee forever,
    Loved and loving Trinity."

Greeting.

The class of Nineteen Hundred and Six herewith presents to you, Dear Reader, a history of the past year at Trinity College. It has been a very eventful year, and one to which this humble book by no means does credit. The Editors have found many difficulties in preparation of this volume, but nothing so disturbed them as the continually recurring thought that so much must be left out of these pages. The Undergraduate can supply the missing chapters. We would that our Alumni and friends might also. Therefore, Dear Reader, if you are pleased with this passing acquaintance of our College, be assured that a fuller acquaintance will do us more credit. And so the class of Nineteen Hundred and Six bids you good-day, and asks you to call again.
Acknowledgments.

The Nineteen Hundred and Six Ivy Board acknowledges with sincere thanks the help and interest of members of the Faculty, Alumni, friends, and undergraduates in the preparation of this Ivy. To its own class the Board is particularly grateful for its loyal and ready support.

In particular to

John Jordan Boller, '06,
Lester Monroe Pond, '06, and Elmer Munson Hunt, ex-'06, for their contributions of drawings.

History of Past Year.

To most of us it seems as if but one brief week had passed since the freshmen were escorted out of chapel by many willing feet to the tune of “Fresh—fresh—fresh!” And yet those same striplings are now boasting themselves to be sophomores, while those of the Senior class who fondly dreamed of nine long months of college life before them have suddenly awakened to the fact that these months have eluded their grasp in a most inexplicable manner.

The time seems short, true enough, but think of the things that have been done since September the twenty-second, the day on which we welcomed sixty-eight new men, the largest class which ever entered Trinity.

These people began to show their strength first on the tenth of October by winning the underclass meet with the Sophomores by a score of 32 to 4. The best time ever made on our track in the half mile was made by Dougherty, '07. The only trouble was that he ran only one lap.

The first thing, however, which enters one’s head in connection with the beginning of college is football. In this line of activity we were unfortunate this year. We had a good captain and a good coach, but some of our best players were laid up at critical moments. However, the team did a good piece of work on Inauguration Day by defeating the Stevens Tech. delegation by a score of 5 to 0.

And what a day for Trinity that Twenty-sixth of October was! Never did her sons assemble with a greater spirit of devotion and enthusiasm. It is agreed by all that the inauguration of Dr. Luther as our eleventh president marks the beginning for the college of an era of prosperity such as has been hitherto unknown.

As soon as we had settled down again to ordinary living, the cry of “All out, Freshman Banquet!” was raised and everyone was kept on the jump till December third, when that annual event took place in Springfield. Springfield people are always glad to see Trinity men.

We enjoyed the unusual pleasure of a three weeks’ vacation at Christmas, after which the watchword was basketball. The interclass games created much excitement for a while, and the championship of the college was finally won by the Sophomores. The varsity team was very lively and took both of the games with Wesleyan.

The height of the social season came at the usual time, just after the midyear’s exams. Everything in Junior Week went off with great success and all agreed that the “Prom” had never been surpassed.
The St. Patrick’s Day events were well worthy of note. The freshmen hung two banners downtown and the Sophomores displayed a remarkable degree of ingenuity in their attempts (finally successful) to get the 1908 numerals down. In the annual indoor track meet, which followed St. Patrick’s by a few days, the freshmen captured everything.

And now for three months all eyes have been on the baseball team—not only our eyes, but those of men interested in intercollegiate sports in all parts of the country. At the time of writing but two games remain of a record-breaking season for Trinity. The schedule has included all of the Big Four, also West Point and Annapolis, victories being scored against such teams as those of Pennsylvania and Holy Cross. We won the series of three games with Wesleyan, shutting out our opponents twice, the scores being 6-0, 2-3, and 3-0.

Among other things, this year has been marked by the birth and flourishing infancy of a semi-weekly newspaper, the Trinity Tripod. May the life of such an influence towards Trinity’s welfare be long and prosperous.

Among the minor college activities the Musical clubs have given several good performances, and the interest in debating has increased, although we recently lost a very close debate against Rutgers. The Sophomore Dining Club has held several enjoyable banquets, and the usual six cotillions have been given by the German Club.

Now, at this commencement time, as we look back over the year, we unhesitatingly pronounce it one of unusual activity and marked progress. New blood will soon palpitate in our veins and may it stir us to continue our onward march along such lines as these.
The Future.

The Ivy chaps ask me to write them an article on "Trinity, Her Future." They say six hundred to a thousand words would suit. I accept the invitation, for I am always glad to say or write a word for my College Mother, but I do not want six hundred or a thousand words to write of her future, for to my mind that future is bound up in three words, "Now then, Trinity." President Luther, consciously or unconsciously, sized up the situation in those three words when he spoke to the men on the night of his election and gave them that thought and inspiration. I could not state it better in ten thousand words than he has in three.

The future of Trinity turns on the "Now then" of those who love her. I am glad to see that we are grasping this fact. We see it in the men in College, in the recitation room, on the diamond, the track, the college publications. The doing of something for Trinity, the "Now then", doing and not talking, that spirit is in the air. We see it extending to the Alumni. We find their interest in the College growing and the "Now then" spirit attacking them, making them feel they must and ought and will do something for their College Mother "Now then". So when you ask me to write of her future my reply is that the future of Trinity College is bound up and being worked out and must be worked out in the "Now then, Trinity" of the present. If you and I, undergraduate, faculty, trustee, alumni are meeting that standard of duty call, we can look forward with restful confidence to the Trinity future.

Joseph Buffington.
The Technical Department.

For several years the citizens of Hartford and the authorities of Trinity College have had under consideration the establishment of technical courses, at the College, in Mechanical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, and Civil Engineering.

The success of many of our graduates in their work in Electrical Engineering demonstrates that in that department we have for some time been able to give a thorough training. Yet a further advance should be made by the specializing of the work and by the appointment of additional instructors. Another building is urgently needed and a more extended course of study.

Two years ago the Civil Engineering courses were offered, and, at the last meeting of the Trustees, a professor of Civil Engineering was appointed who will devote his entire time and energy to the development of that department. It is confidently believed that the present complete equipment of surveying instruments will soon be supplemented by the installation of modern testing apparatus.

In Mechanical Engineering the College does not offer much opportunity, though a small work-shop affords elementary practice to a limited number of students. It is earnestly hoped that this department may be established without further delay. It is needed in Hartford and for Hartford. The recent move in the city in behalf of trade-schools brings into prominence the need of an advanced school where qualified men may get the sort of training needed by those who are to be leaders in the maintenance of our industrial supremacy.

The line between technical science and culture studies is practically obliterated. Men no longer recognize it. It is not yet certain whether Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will coalesce. Special loyalty of sentiment growing out of institutional rivalries may prevent the alliance. But that such a combination should be seriously proposed and considered is an unmistakable evidence of the trend of educational thought.

Trinity can teach all things to all men, with profit to all her sons in every walk of life, if she is given the means. Hartford wants and needs the Technical School. Trinity has already a large part of the essential outfit. How long must we wait for the rest of it?
A Floating Laboratory

For the Department of Natural History of Trinity College.

Most important study and research in Natural History has for some time been devoted to the investigation of the apparently unlimited and infinitely varied animal life of the ocean. There are several causes which have compelled this study of marine forms.

1. There is a wide range of animal life in the ocean, which is now generally believed to have been the original home of all the living things of the earth.

2. The ocean not only affords a wide range of forms, but furnishes them within a smaller area than either the land or fresh water.

3. Problems of embryology, physiology, the distribution of forms, and the relation of organisms to their environment, can be studied upon organisms in the ocean with great economy of material and effort.

4. Not only problems of pure science have been dealt with in this way in recent years but practical and economic questions have been solved in oyster and lobster culture and the increase of food fishes and sponges.

5. In biology much of hope and inspiration for the future are now centered upon the ocean, which is so boundless in the material offered that all that has been done seems scarcely a beginning.

The usual way of conducting investigations in the ocean is by stations on the coast where biological students and investigators work in summer time. Such stations are now found at various points in the United States and Europe. The most notable in this country are at Woods Holl, Mass., Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, Beaufort, North Carolina, The Tortugas, and Pacific Grove, California. Among the most noted deep-sea expeditions are the voyages of the Blake, the Albatross, the Beagle, the Challenger, and the Valdivia, and the records of their investigations and discoveries fill many volumes. Such expeditions have usually been made under the authority and with the financial aid of government. The United States Fish Commission keeps several vessels engaged in this work the year around.

A vessel, equipped with suitable apparatus, moving from place to place in the ocean, would furnish the most favorable facilities for comparative studies upon marine animals. The advantages of such a floating laboratory are obvious.
It is proposed, therefore, to raise money among friends of Trinity to buy a strong sea-worthy schooner. Such a vessel, practically as good as new, can be bought second hand for about $2,000. To build one would cost at least $5,000. Buying is preferable to chartering and will be cheaper in the long run, because the schooner must be used every summer, and to charter a fresh vessel every year would involve great trouble and waste of valuable time in looking for one, and every year the cost of altering and refitting for the laboratory would be gone through with anew.

A suitable vessel once found and purchased would be equipped with the necessary permanent biological, chemical, physical, and photographic laboratories. She would have on board the best sounding machine, thermometers, dredges, trawls, tangles, intermediate and surface tow nets, with winding engine and reel for abysmal as well as pelagic and littoral work.

PLAN FOR FLOATING LABORATORY.

Auxiliary schooner proposed by Richard T. Green, Builder, Chelsea, Mass.
A. Forecastle and galley (six berths.)
B. Boiler and engine.
C. Laboratory and dining room.
D. Ten staterooms for investigators and students.
X and Y. Masts.

DIMENSIONS:
Length over all, 92 feet; beam, 22 feet 3 inches; depth, 11 feet; draft, 10 feet.

In the early summer the vessel would sail to some sub-tropical island, cast anchor in a protected harbor, and within a few minutes be transformed into a stationary laboratory, fitted for more or less extended embryological and physiological research. After a month or more in the subtropics the vessel would weigh anchor for the cruise northward, making a harbor every hundred miles or so for the purpose of getting material for comparative studies. Such an opportunity is invaluable to one who is making a quantitative study of variation in some species of wide range.
In going to a new region each summer large collections for class­ study and research can be made year after year. A supply department would enable other institutions and individuals to obtain needed material, fixed and preserved as desired, and thus the usefulness of the plant to science would be much extended. Such a supply department would of course first be used for equipping in the most complete manner our own museum at Trinity. But such is the demand for material of this sort not only in the United States, but in Europe, that it is believed that in time this supply department might go a long way towards defraying the annual expense of the expeditions.

The first expedition to be made would be to the Bahama Islands where the conditions are very favorable for the most abundant and varied fauna. These islands are situated in the mouth of the Gulf stream where it debouches between Florida and Cuba bringing with it myriads of creatures which it has caught up in its wide circuit from the equator and through the Gulf of Mexico.

The Bahama Islands are never visited by yellow fever. Their climate though warm is agreeable in summer and seldom varies from $84^\circ$ to $86^\circ$. The trade winds blow steadily; the water and sky are clear and deep blue; the people honest and simple hearted. Biological investigators have already found the life there in summer both interesting and delightful.
These healthful conditions are of great importance for northern men when working hard with both mind and body on the edge of the tropics.

The idea of such a vessel as a part of the college equipment for study and investigation in biology was first proposed by Professor Edwards some fifteen years ago in an article published in the journal Science, and has been elaborated into the present plan of a Floating Laboratory. In the prosecution of his investigations Professor Edwards has spent three summers in the Bahamas, one on the Gulf coast of Texas, another along the Florida Keys, two on Long Island Sound, and one at the Wood's Hill, Mass., Laboratory, so that his experience gives to the plan a practical working basis.

The trustees of the college at a meeting held May 25, 1901, have formally voted their approval of this undertaking.

The Trinity Marine Laboratory has recently been incorporated under the laws of Connecticut.

This is a splendid opportunity for Trinity college to become a pioneer in a field as important for scientific investigation as it is attractive for undergraduate study, and we have faith that the alumni and other friends of the college will realize that now is the golden moment for success. To be first among all the colleges to establish a Floating Laboratory will give Trinity prestige the world over, and under such ideal conditions for work our investigators and students may hope to do work of the highest quality.
Some History.

We learn, as soon as we open a catalogue, that Trinity College received its charter in 1823. It is true that this statement does not credit us with a very great antiquity, and, while that infallible production known as the Trinity College Bulletin has a great many things to say about us, one might think that this, at least, could have been omitted. But the college has enough things of which she may be proud without falling back on a feeble old age. However, we are relieved to find that our authorities were not dilatory,—"the work of instruction was begun in 1824"—those were the days when the buildings were on the site of the present capitol,—the days of our fathers and grandfathers.

A great part of present college tradition comes from that time. The "Hogg" river played no inconsiderable part in the college life. The water was clearer and its whole course more suited to sports. It is a striking commentary on the perversity of human nature that the name of the stream was not changed to the "Park" until the situation of the buildings was changed. Our fathers skated on it and boated on it, but no budding genius could write immortal verse on the "gently flowing Park". No! To their forethought we owe it that we now sing, "Neath the Elms," not, "the dear little college on the Hogg."

It is very hard for us to realize how conditions have changed since that time. We are told that hay was made in the vicinity of what is now the capitol grounds. One story has come down to us of a sudden determination on the part of some of the students to fill the chapel with some of the recently mown grass. For several long night hours they toiled and sweated until the chapel was jammed. Then one of the most zealous workers informed them that he was Professor so-and-so—"sorry to trouble you gentlemen, but Trinity must be purged of all verdant green before daylight—I have all your names, by this time, you know." Trinity men always were good workers.

But the atmosphere downtown was becoming close. In 1872 ground was broken for the new buildings and the college soon afterward left the scene of her "girl-hood". On the whole it was a wise move though it must have caused some regret. At any rate, we must leave Bushnell Park with its jaundiced flood, the ancient depository of freshmen's stoves, and turn to the freer atmosphere of the hill.
In the short space during which we have been here, we have not only adapted ourselves to the environments but have found a chance to grow. To the original buildings we have added Northam, the gym, the natural history building, and the Jarvis laboratories. Our latest addition is the new athletic field for which we have our Alumni to thank and, most of all, Dr. Luther, whose wonderful college spirit and self-denial shown in time and brain-work has made it unsurpassed.

Speaking of Dr. Luther—the Junior class is sincerely happy that this year has marked the beginning of his leadership, and only wish that this volume might be more worthy to mark the commencement of the era which is coming under such a prudent, energetic, and inspiring president.
Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut.

This College was chartered by the State of Connecticut in 1823 in response to a petition presented to the General Assembly representing "that great advantages would accrue to the State, as well as to the general interests of literature and science, by establishing within the State another Collegiate Institute".

The College is governed by a self-perpetuating board of Trustees, under a charter providing that the board "shall not make the religious tenets of any person a condition of admission to any privilege in the said College, and that no President or Professor, or other officer, shall be made ineligible for or by reason of any religious tenet that he may profess, or be compelled, by any By-Law or otherwise, to subscribe to any religious test whatsoever".

The College includes and has included among its Trustees, Faculty, and Students, men of many denominational affiliations. It is a generously equipped secular institution, religious in spirit and motive, its religious services conducted in harmony with the liturgical forms of the Protestant Episcopal Church; but it is not ecclesiastical and is controlled by no ecclesiastical organization.

The corps of instruction consists of fourteen professors, three assistant professors, five instructors, a librarian, and a medical director.

COURSES OF INSTRUCTION.

The college offers four courses of instruction, viz:

I. A Course in Arts.
II. A Course in Letters and Science.
III. A Course in Science.
IV. A Course in Letters.

The courses extend over four years. Students completing the Course of Arts receive the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Students completing the Course of Science receive the degree of Bachelor of Science, and those completing the Course in Letters receive the degree of Bachelor of Letters.

Students who do not propose to pursue all the studies of any of the regular courses may be permitted, under the name of special students, to attend any class in such studies as, upon examination, they are found qualified to pursue. Upon honorable dismissal, they are entitled to a certificate from the President, stating the studies which they have pursued.
A course covering three years and adapted to the training of civil engineers is now offered as a department in the course of science. In certain departments the college offers, also, instruction for graduate students. The departments of instruction in the College number twenty-five, including ninety-eight elective and voluntary courses.

THE PRINCIPLE OF INSTRUCTION.

The number of the teaching force, large relatively to the number of those taught, admits of a close relation between instructors and students. Each student is held accountable for his work every day, and receives personal encouragement and guidance to a degree impossible where the number of the taught is greater. Practical research and laboratory methods are applied wherever possible.
THE LIBRARY.

The College Library, numbering 49,000 volumes, is under the superintendence of a professional librarian, who guides the students in the use of books. They have also at their command the Watkinson Reference Library of 53,000 volumes, the Library of the Connecticut Historical Society, the Hartford Public Library with its well-stocked reading rooms, and the Case Memorial Library.

LABORATORIES AND OBSERVATORY.

The Jarvis Physical Laboratory contains, in addition to the lecture and apparatus rooms, a large laboratory for work in the elementary courses, a reference library and several smaller laboratories adapted and devoted to advanced work of a special character. The laboratory has a very complete equipment for work in all the branches of Physics. Special attention has been given to making the facilities for work in electricity as complete as possible. The department is provided with standard apparatus for electrical measurements, and has direct current and polyphase alternating current generators for its special use. There is also a workshop in which a limited number of students are instructed in the use of machine-tools.
The Jarvis Chemical Laboratory is well equipped for work in general experimental and organic chemistry, in qualitative and quantitative analysis, in assaying, and in gas analysis. The main laboratory has desk space for thirty students working at one time. This room is devoted to work in general experimental chemistry and qualitative analysis. For work in quantitative analysis and organic chemistry separate laboratories are provided and properly equipped. A room set apart for assaying is fitted up with suitable furnaces and other necessary material.

The new Hall of Natural History contains biological, botanical, geological and mineralogical laboratories provided with every modern equipment.

The Observatory contains a six and a half inch refracting telescope, a two and a half inch transit, a standard clock, a chronograph, a small refractor, a portable transit, a sextant, and conveniences for the simpler work in astronomical photography.

A Gymnasium is supplied with the best apparatus, in the use of which the students are trained by a special instructor. A new athletic field, about nine acres in area, was recently completed at an expense of $10,000, contributed by friends and alumni of the college.

The Russell Fellowship, yielding about $400, is awarded biennially to a member of the graduating class of superior ability, who engages to pursue an approved course of graduate study at Trinity College or at some foreign university.

The Mary A. Terry Fellowship, endowed by a legacy from Miss Mary A. Terry, of Hartford, yields an annual income of about $500. It is awarded annually by the President, upon the recommendation of the Faculty, to a member of the graduating class who gives evidence of superior ability and who engages to pursue an approved course of graduate study at Trinity College or some other college or university approved by the Faculty.

The Holland scholarships, each having an annual value of $600, are awarded to the students attaining the highest rank in the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman classes respectively. Prizes of the aggregate value of $400 are awarded in the several departments.

The amount of the Treasurer's bills each year varies from $177.50 to $242.50. Board can be obtained at $4.00 a week and upwards, making the cost of board for thirty-seven weeks, at the lowest rate, $148. The amount of the Treasurer's bills can be reduced to holders of beneficiary scholarships, of which there are more than fifty.

The buildings of the college are situated on a site commanding beautiful views in the southern part of Hartford, itself one of the most beautiful cities of New England. The largest of the buildings, more than 650 feet in length, intended to form the west side of a great quadrangle, is of stone in the English secular-gothic style, and is one of the most notable collegiate buildings of the country. The Jarvis Laboratories, the Hall of Natural History, and the Gymnasium, are tasteful and commodious structures of brick. Six of the college fraternities have special chapter houses.

For catalogues apply to the President or to the Secretary of the Faculty.

About College.

The Historian for the "Past Year" will, in all probability, not make record of some things "About College," which are not important enough in themselves to receive attention in such an article, but which, nevertheless, must be interesting to alumni as well as undergraduates. For instance, it would be quite beside the dignity of the aforementioned historian to state that "the board walk from Vernon Street to the college is being displaced gradually by stone slabs." But what is more important to the undergraduate than such a decided change in a landmark which is made use of so many times a day!

In a short time the big pit near the tennis courts will be filled, and the campus will be enlarged and made more beautiful thereby. The old pit has furnished many a class tree in the last few years, the class trees changing their abode to appear in a more dignified place along the eastern edge of the campus.

The fence at the south end of the campus is no more, having joined in more than one baseball victory celebration. And the undergraduates rejoice. In the words of a professor, "It marks the elimination of the line that has all along separated the academic and science courses."

The commons and college store have improved in usefulness in proportion to the general advance and prosperity of the past year. The genial proprietors entered with the class of Nineteen Hundred and Six, and have lived up fully to the spirit of their freshman, sophomore and junior years. The past year has witnessed the visit of that familiar old divinity, Hymen.

The officers of the Athletic Association have made decided improvements in the trophy room, and have set in operation a plan to decorate the walls of the gymnasium, near the running track, with athletic banners and pictures.

But the lost bulletin board has never been recovered, and the present bulletin board is inadequate, because too small for a live college.

A "pay-station" telephone has taken the place of the college telephone, which has always been a very popular institution.

College meetings have been better attended, more practical, and attained better results than at any time in the past three years. And college meetings are a very good thermometer of the spirit of the college.
'Neath the Elms

A. P. Burgwin, '82.

1. 'Neath the Elms of our old Trinity,
   'Neath the elms of our dear old Trinity,
   No more shall we meet,
   There is right merry cheer.

2. On the hills of our old Trinity,
   In the halls of our dear old Trinity,
   Friends true and dear;
   In the halls of our old Trinity,
   There are classmates to greet;
   'Neath the elms of our old Trinity.
CHORUS.

'Neath the elms of our old Trinity,
'Neath the elms of our dear old Trinity,
Oh, its sel-dom we'll meet in the moon-light so sweet,
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity.

3. College days are from care and sorrow free,
And oft will we seek in memory,
Those days that are passed,
Far too joyous to last,
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity.

Then we'll sing to our old Trinity,
To our dear old Alma Mater, Trinity,
We're together to-day —
And to-morrow away,
Far away from our old Trinity.
In Memoriam.

Pyre Dreams
Senior Class History, 1905.

In the estimation of the world at large, the value of our struggles and attempts has as yet been but meagre. One may even doubt whether we have been responsible for any decisive influence which shall work for weal or for woe on the character and reputation of our Alma Mater. But to us our undergraduate efforts and ambitions have seemed not only to have been of surpassing importance in themselves, but to have been rewarded with some measure of final, definite accomplishment. Our attempts to make the best use of the advantages placed in our hands, and to forward in the loftiest, most ideal way possible the interests of our college commonwealth have not seemed to us a mere ineffective side current in the stream of progressive history, but to some degree an estimable contributor to its reward movement. Through such a belief and the strong, earnest exertion engendered by it, our struggles have benefited us. And in some slight measure the world through us. College accomplishments are not important in themselves, but in their influence on those who are enthusiastically and with full powers responsible for them. The important residuum of our collegiate life is its effect on our life to come, its incentive to future unselfishness and philanthropy through that which is past, or, in other words, its memory.

Ah! what associations, classmates, shall we carry away with us in our memories. How we shall love to rehearse our college triumphs to our friends in years to come! May we not always remember that we were unflinchingly loyal to the traditions and customs of our Alma Mater? We can say that we are zealous in our freshman duties, submitting to the discipline which we later administered. We shall always look back to our success on that St. Patrick's Day—a success so signal, that the faculty devoted considerable attention to us—and to our efforts the next year to prevent our rivals from receiving like consideration at their hands. We can also recall those days when we were upper classmen, when for two years we were so largely responsible for the management of undergraduate affairs, when we successfully collected and trained our college's athletic ability, and led it to repeated victory, when we had our measure of approbation at the "Old Trinity" elegance and social distinction of our Junior Prom, and the Germans, when our unfeigned college spirit won for us the respect of our college mates.

But as time rolls on, will it not become more and more plain to us, that it is really in our characters that our college history has most especially writ itself, producing a change, hard indeed to describe, but noticeable and important. We shall realize, I think, that this change has risen from three causes: from our contact with one another; from the influences which our undergraduate responsibilities and activities have wielded on us, and from our large leisure during our college course. The intermingling of men reared in different horizons has effected in us a more cosmopolitan and worldly point of view. Many of the old limbs have been lost, but only that those left might grow and flourish more sanely. Our responsibilities have given us a poise and self-reliance not in us when we came to college. And we have had ample leisure either for dissipation or self-culture. Each of these tendencies is of a kind to promote in us some measure of reflection about ourselves. Thus we have come to "know ourselves" more thoroughly, and to develop what is peculiarly individual in us more consciously, gaining that indescribable atmosphere with which people of culture are surrounded. We shall realize that thus Trinity has given us a priceless heritage, an acquisition which cannot be gained from books. May we bring to a full and perfect fruition what she has thus prodigally sown in us, for our own advancement, and the glory of our class and college!

Junior Class History.

To anyone who thinks it is the easiest thing in the world to write a Class History, I would recommend that he sit down and try it. If he succeeds in writing a good one, he is to be congratulated on being a rara avis. The ground has been so thoroughly covered by the host of bygone historians that the present-day scribe finds himself surrounded by a swarm of apt but hackneyed phrases which he would gladly avoid if he could.

To these difficulties the Junior Historian adds another. In his Freshman and Sophomore years he was mixed in an endless round of class contests and could write a volume on the why or the wherefore of this or that defeat or victory. On the other hand the Senior is secure and self-sufficient in his dignity. He can smoke his pipe while he reminisces gently and dreams of future greatness.

But the Junior is too mature for the former state and too immature for the latter. His year is one of cooling off the fiery ardor of preparation to entering into the world of men. He hasn't much to say about himself except that he "will be a Senior soon."

And now to a short summary of the year's events. In June the Class of 1904 awarded us the "Lemon Squeezer," the pride or envy of every class since 1857. That alone is enough to show that we are not of ordinary clay. Then we gave a remarkably fine Prom., and came out of it with a good balance of hard cash in the treasury, a thing of which few classes can boast. We are represented by star men on all the teams, but the Historian prefers to refer you to other pages of this work for details.

Although we have lost some of our best men we still have enough to uphold our banner, and whenever our Alma Mater calls she will find us all there to the last man ready to do our duty.

Sophomore Class History.

Long indeed has it been known that the Sophomore Class is no good. In fact to be despised and to be a sophomore are about synonymous. It is the cussedness of humanity that causes the college to leave the disagreeable job of handling green, gawky freshmen to the sophomores and then instills a spirit of disdain for any success the sophomores may attain.

With a full knowledge of all these things the class of 1907 entered upon its second year. Less than half the number of our arch-enemies, the freshmen, we marched boldly up the college walk without being hazed, although vague rumors of such a thing had reached our ears. We even had the impudence to attend the opening chapel service.

Of course, 1908 won the Bulletin-board rush. The freshmen always do. Then the surprise came when 1907 forced back 1908 in the push rush, leaving the score two to one. Twenty men had pushed fifty men back. Cause No. 1 why the Sophomores should be despised.

The next surprise was the class baseball game. Score, 1907, 1; 1908, 0. Cause of disdain No. 2.

About this time the freshmen thought it necessary to adopt a class motto, so they held a class meeting. Some one suggested, "Venimus, vidimus, vicimus." No one knew what it meant, but it had a poetical sound, so they adopted it, happy in their unsophistication. Those few who still survived after the coming, seeing and conquering of the freshmen, smiled and said nothing. The sweat of death covered their whole body and the joints of their limbs were unloosed. And up rose Chamberlain, built like unto the gods and spake, saying, "Let us haze the ! ? ! * ? ! freshmen. Among those present were—but stay—perhaps they were sufficiently humiliated without making public their names.

Further surprise was manifested when one bright morning the daily paper contained an article headed "Sophomore Champions." Indeed, a further perusal made it evident that the despised sophomores had defeated the college in basketball in the interclass games. Cause of disdain No. 3.

The freshmen held their banquet. Like all previous banquets it was the greatest success. It is significant, however, that up to this time 1908 had had no other success. We wonder, therefore, with what they compared it.

The greatest event of the year was March 17th, when the sophomores quickly overcome by superior numbers, 50 to 20, demonstrated that they could carry on such a festival without exhibition of that ill-feeling so common hitherto.

It is commonly conceded that the freshmen were victorious, but that in every play which required strategy the Sophomores had the advantage.

One more cause why 1907 is despised.

Now the year has come to an end. 1907 is probably still despised. It is equally probable that with the name junior all despicableness will disappear in favor of tall hats and frock coats.

Returning good for evil we despise none; wish you all good luck; and ask your acquiescence when we say:

"Here's to 1907—
May her glory never fade."

Words and Music by M. H. Buffington, '04.

I.
There are classes galore that have stood here before,
And each of them thought themselves best,
But although we may give them of credit a mite,
Their day has long passed like the rest;
So before we go hence to take hold of life's tense,
We'll sing of our class good and true
Of our dear college life
Without care or with strife,
That has passed 'neath the Old Gold and Blue.

CHORUS:
So its old Gold and Blue, lads,
Old Gold and Blue,
Forever we'll sing to our
One-nine-naught-four and old Trinity.
In sunshine or rain, lads,
Defeat or victory,
Forever we'll be true to old Trinity,
And to nineteen four.

II.
But our days soon are o'er and there'll soon be no more,
Of comradeship tempered as steel,
So while we will keep nineteen four in our hearts,
We'll to Alma Mater be true.
And when after years we are wrinkled and scared,
Our thoughts will revert back to thee
And ye'll think of the elm,
That keeps guard o'er your realm,
And your colors of old Gold and Blue.

CHORUS:
So its old Gold and Blue, lads,
Old Gold and Blue,
Forever we'll sing to our
Old Trinity, the old Gold and Blue,
In sunshine or rain, lads,
Defeat or victory,
Forever we'll be true to old Trinity,
And the old Gold and Blue.

THE INAUGURATION OF
FLAVEL SWEETEN LUTHER, LL.D.,

TO THE
PRESIDENCY OF TRINITY COLLEGE,
HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT.
The Inauguration of President Luther

October 26th, the day towards which each undergraduate Alumnus, and friend of Trinity had looked forward to ever since the Trustees of the College, on April 13, 1904, elected Dr. Flavel Sweeten Luther the eleventh president of our College, became at least a reality. Although the sky was overcast and the clouds threatened a rainfall, yet a good-sized congregation gathered in the Chapel at 8:30 for the celebration of the Holy Communion. The celebrant was the Rt. Rev. William F. Nichols, D.D. He was assisted by the Rev. George McC. Fiske, D.D., and the Rev. George B. Morgan, D.D.

At about 10 o'clock the Academic Procession began its formation, prior to marching to Parsons' Theater, where the inaugural exercises were held. Following is the order of the procession:

Chief Marshal, Colonel Jacob L. Greene.
Division I, under Professor J. J. McCook and Frederick E. Haight as marshals: State officers, presidents, and delegates of colleges and universities; representatives of schools and academies; bishops; Trustees of Trinity College; the Board of Fellows and the Trinity Faculty.
Division II, under Hon. F. L. Wilcox as marshal: United States senators, congressmen, supreme and superior court judges; clergy, city officers.
Division III, under W. S. Schutz as marshal. Trinity Alumni, formed in order of classes.
Division IV, under Cornelius W. Remsen as marshal: The Undergraduates, formed in order of classes.

Division I met in Room 1 in the Hunt Memorial on Prospect street, and Division II in Room 2 in the same building. Division III assembled at the Hartford Club. Division IV formed on the east side of Prospect Street, south of the Hunt Memorial.

At about 10:30 o'clock this dignified procession—a sight unusual to the streets of Hartford—took up the line of march to the theater.

*By permission, from the Tablet.
The procession entered the theater, the students and Alumni and others taking seats reserved for them on the main floor, and the delegates and guests taking their seats on the stage.

Just a word in passing about the decorations of the interior of the theater. They were simple, but the colors of the Old Gold and Blue predominated in such a manner as to quicken the pulse of each Alumnus and Undergraduate as he felt the Trinity spirit throb through his being. Festoons about the stage and boxes had the tendrils of the College ivy intertwined among their folds. Over the center aisle at the rear of the house was a banner of blue upon which "Trinity" stood forth in letters of gold. Above it on the second gallery was the seal of the United States, which also decorated the boxes. Flowers, ferns and palms formed a prominent part of the decorations. Over the stage hung an electric illumination bearing the inscription "Trinity, 1823-1904," beneath which was the College seal.

The exercises opened with a selection by an orchestra, which was followed by an invocation by Rt. Rev. W. W. Niles, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of New Hampshire.

The Hon. William Hamersley, LL.D., '58, Judge of the Connecticut Supreme Court, presided, and introduced the Secretary of the Trinity Board of Trustees, Hon. Jacob L. Greene, LL.D., who presented the certificate of the election of Dr. Luther.

President Luther responded briefly by renewing the promise which he made thirty-seven years ago to defend the interests of Trinity College.

Judge Hamersley was greeted with applause as he rose to give his address of welcome. The speech was a clear and logical setting forth of the work of the university and the college of today, coupled closely to which is the task of him who is at the head of the institution. "To the president of a college comes an honor that is unrivaled, a responsibility that is most heavy, and an opportunity that is full of possibilities. And so the custom has of late grown of making the advent of a new president an occasion for a demonstration of the interest felt by all in the mission he has undertaken in behalf of all. Pursuant to this most fitting custom we have come together to welcome a new leader in university life, and to wish him God speed in his noble and patriotic work."

The orchestra rendered a classical selection, and then the Rev. Henry Ferguson, LL.D., gave the address of welcome in behalf of the Faculty. It was replete with a warm feeling of friendship that each member of the Faculty has for Dr. Luther. It welcomed the new president to his work in these words: "You value the young man for what he is, no longer the child, simply to be taught 'jurare in verbis magistri'; not yet the mature man, ripe for the steady routine of life, that all must come to; in that period of life, at once so fascinating and so dangerous, when dreams and realities are more identical than ever afterward — when the fresh, hot blood is beating in the veins, and earth and heaven both seem well within the grasp. We trust to you to guide, restrain, and direct this mightiest of all creative forces into the channels of the highest service for God and man."

The address of welcome from the Undergraduates was delivered by Charles Edward Gostenhofer, '05, who said in part: "Dr. Luther understands, as no one else understands, the undergraduate temperament, peculiarities, and ambitions. The friend of the students, he has always been the one who has sympathized most with the things that are dear to College life and associations. The undergraduates are worthy of the College in his eyes. Their happiness and interests have been his. Such affection, forbearance, and comprehension is appreciated by those upon whom it is bestowed. What Dr. Luther has given is returned in whole-souled admiration and confidence."

Hon. Joseph Buffington, LL.D., of Pittsburgh, Pa., spoke the welcome of the Alumni. His speech, filled with eloquence, was interrupted again and again by bursts of applause. When he had finished, the students broke forth with that slogan: "Trin-Trin-Trin-I-T-Y, T-R-I-N-I-T-Y." Space forbids but a slight quotation from Judge Buffington’s address, which, however, will reveal the theme of his speech: "When Flavel Luther nailed his nameplate on the oaken door of a Trinity Professor’s quiet study, it was with the inherited spirit of steadfast stay that marked that other of his name and blood, even old Martin Luther himself, when nailing his thesis to the door of Wittenberg Church, he later said to the Diet of Worms in words what Dr. Flavel Luther has done for his College in act and life: ‘I can do naught else. Here stand I. God help me. Amen.’ And here he has stood and stayed, and, more than any other of her sons, has drunk rich draughts of the underflow of her College life, its deeper significance and purpose. Here in the long-sustained ‘Trin-Trin-Trin’ of her cry his ear caught that rumbling undertone of manhood and purpose that has found vent in that slogan of onset and action which he first voiced, and burned for all time into this College and her sons. ‘Now, then, Trinity.’ And so, Mr. President, you came to your own and we Alumni stand here to welcome, to wish you God-speed, to pledge you our loyal support. The fleeting work of the rest of us, the mart, the counting-house, the factory, and the forum, will have ended before many years, and with the end of the worker oft times comes the end of the work. But the fruition of your work but begins when your life ends. He who makes the men of mature life has sown the seed years before in College days, and long after life’s fitful fever is ended for you, will strong men be fighting brave battles and living manlier lives because you have been a person and not a name to them. Leaving you here, sir, to your work, and each of us going back to his, let it be with braver hearts because of this day spent by our College mother’s side, and, as you and we go, each take with him, as our College mother’s God-speed, the words of England’s uncrowned laureate, changing his closing words to suit this day:

“Go to your work and be strong, halting not in your ways,
Balking the end half won for an instant dole of praise.
Stand to your work and be wise, certain of sword and pen,
Who are neither children nor gods, but my own loved Trinity men.’”

President Arthur Twining Hadley, LL.D., of Yale University, fol­ owed with his address of welcome. He said in part: “When we in New Haven take the train for the northward and come in sight of Trinity College standing sentinel upon its ridge, we no longer regard it in the light of a tower set to defend the Episcopal Church of Hartford against the inroads of New Haven heresy, but as an abode of science and scholarship and religion, where our men and our thoughts are ever sure of hospitable welcome, on whose sympathy we may rely, and in whose successes we may rejoice. Mr. President, ours it is today to join in doing you honor.
Ours shall it be tomorrow, and through the successive years of your administration, to stand shoulder to shoulder with you in the work, that through our joint action the hardness of the task may but render the glory of the triumph more complete.”

At the close of President Hadley’s address the students broke out in singing “Here’s to Good Old Yale,” and followed it up with “Mr.
Luther,” to the tune of “Mr. Dooley.”

Amid tumultuous cheering and applause Dr. Luther arose and, after the demonstration of good-will had subsided, began his inaugural address.

*President Luther’s inaugural address has been printed in several publications, and may be obtained, upon request, from the Treasurer of the College.
The inaugural address finished, the audience sang two verses of "America," and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Chauncey Bunce Brewster. Then the Alumni and invited guests left for the College, where luncheon was served in the Gymnasium at 2 o'clock.

THE INAUGURATION LUNCHEON.

At 2 o'clock the inauguration luncheon was served in the Gymnasium in Alumni Hall, which had been beautifully decorated in old gold and blue. Old gold streamers radiated from the center of the ceiling; southern smilax was placed in sprays along the front of the running track; the pillars were wound with laurel and flags, and the tables were decorated with yellow chrysanthemums. At the speakers' table were the following:

Bishop Brewster, who presided; Professor Lorenzo Sears, representing Brown University in the absence of President Faunce; President Hopkins of Williams College; Bishop Wells of Spokane, Wash.; Bishop Lines of Newark; Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington, rector of Grace Church, New York; Professor C. T. Winchester of Wesleyan University; Bishop Niles of New Hampshire; Governor Chamberlain; President Flavel S. Luther of Trinity; Mayor Henney; Bishop Henry C. Potter of New York; Bishop Brooke of Oklahoma; Bishop Sessums of Louisiana; President William Douglas Mackenzie of the Hartford Theological Seminary; J. Pierpont Morgan of New York; F. A. Haight of New York, ex-president of the Alumni Association; Bishop Greer of New York; Bishop Graves of Laramie; Dr. Vibbert, rector of Trinity chapel, New York; Dr. Harris, president of Stephens' College; President Shayles of Haverford College; Miss Hillver of St. Mary's Seminary, Waterbury; Canon Markland of St. Andrew's church, Honolulu; Dr. C. L. Stewardson, president of Hobart College; President Taylor of Vassar College; President Raymond of
It was nearly 4 o'clock when Bishop Brewster rapped for order, and, while welcoming "not Martin Luther but Flavel Luther," spoke of the necessity of being up-to-date in everything in regard to Trinity College. He indorsed Luther's wit and sturdy common sense and spoke earnestly for the factor of personality in the so-called smaller colleges.

Bishop Brewster called for speeches from Bishop Henry C. Potter of New York, who spoke on "Higher Education"; Governor Chamberlain, "Connecticut"; Mayor Henney, who responded for "The City of Hartford"; Rev. Dr. William Douglas Mackenzie, president of Hartford Theological Seminary, who had the toast, "Other Christian Bodies"; Professor C. F. Johnson, who answered for "The Faculty." The last speaker was Professor Charles M. Andrews of Bryn Mawr University, whose topic was "The Alumni." Professor Andrews' speech called attention to a few things which are of particular interest to Trinity men. He said: "Fellow Alumni, the best a college has to offer is the spirit which animates the men who compose the various parts of the larger college world. There is a little Trinity on the hill, but there is a greater Trinity in the wide world, wherever a Trinity graduate has staked a claim or built a house. . . . What the college should bring forth is not the scholar, the lawyer, the minister, the engineer, or anyone else ready trained for the duties of any profession or business. It should take the boy as nature and his parents have made him and in three years or four, by classes or by groups, by compulsory courses or by electives, by classroom recitations or by lectures, should make him a better member of his family, a more useful member of society, a stronger citizen of the state to which he owes his allegiance; it should lay foundations and develop resources that will serve him later, whatever superstructure he may decide to build. President Luther, to you we look to carry forward the work of your predecessors; and we assure you that in the great task of attaining the highest educational ideals you will find the Alumni class at your shoulder, prepared to lend you its support in every emergency that may confront the College during the years, and may they be many, of your presidency."
At 5:35 o'clock the exercises closed with three cheers for Trinity College and President Luther, led by Bishop Brewster.

While the luncheon had been in progress in the Gymnasium, outside, on Trinity field, the 'varsity football team had been engaged in defeating the visiting team from Stevens' Institute of Technology. At about 4 o'clock the game started. The bleachers were filled with the largest crowd of the season, composed mainly of Alumni, students, friends of the students, members of the Corporation, and invited guests. Colt's Band was present and furnished music to inspire both players and spectators. A pleasing feature of the intermission between halves was the serpentine dance executed by the Undergraduates, the entire student body in rows of eight or ten men, with arms interlocked and headed by Colt's Band, waving in and out in its march of triumph around the gridiron.

From 5 until 9 o'clock President and Mrs. Luther gave a reception at their home on Vernon Street. The occasion was one of brilliancy and was graced by the presence of many who are prominent in all the walks of life.

From a spectacular point of view the great event of the day was the illumination of the College buildings and Campus from 7 until 10 in the evening. All of the fraternity houses on Vernon Street were illuminated in honor of the event, but when the visitor entered the College grounds he felt as if a new world was opened to his vision. On both sides of the walk leading from the President's house to College hung Japanese lanterns. The Campus itself was lighted with the lanterns, while others hung from each window in the front of Jarvis Hall, Northam Towers, and Middle Seabury Hall. The Library, Boardman Hall of Natural History, and the Jarvis Laboratories were ablaze with light, and from the top of the Hall of Natural History a searchlight shot its rays from one part of the Campus to the other, bringing the College buildings into a light almost rivaling that of day in its brilliancy. From the flagpole hung a long string of lanterns in old gold and blue, beneath whose light Colt's Band sat and rendered airs dear to the heart of every College man, whether Alumni or Undergraduate. During the evening balloons and other fireworks were set off from the eastern side of the Campus. At 10 o'clock the College body, joined by many Alumni and headed by the band, marched to the President's house, where songs were sung and cheers given for Dr. Luther, who responded with a short speech. From thence the procession wended its way to the residence of Professor Ferguson and by cheer and song, induced him to speak a few words, which were full of enthusiasm. The line of march was resumed, by way of Summit Street, back to the Campus, where, after more cheers, the band bade one and all good-night. Later in the evening, a bonfire near the Bishop's statue ended the day's festivities.

Trinity Song.

[Air, "America."]

Back to their ancient home,
Gladly her children come
   To Trinity.
Though many years are fled,
Old memories are not dead
Which from the past are fed
   At Trinity.

For "Church and Country" still
Our hearts with fervor fill
   At Trinity.
Therefore your voices raise,
Recalling student days,
And our old college ways
   At Trinity.

Join in the loud acclaim
To Alma Mater’s fame;
   Cheer Trinity.
Long may her towers stand
Long may a loyal band
Welcome with heart and hand
   Old Trinity.

Olmsted, a freshman, also did well; taking first in the high hurdles, third in the low, and second in the high jump. Pond took first in both broad jump and low hurdles, and third in the high hurdles.

Basket Ball.

A Short History of the Game and a Review of the Past Season.

The invention of the game of basketball is generally conceded to Dr. James Naismith, who, following certain conditions laid down by Luther H. Gulick, brought the game into existence in 1891. For several years of its early life, the game was played by fourteen men, seven on a side, the positions then being two forwards, two guards, a center and two side-centers. Owing to the fact that many surfaces upon which the game was played were insufficiently large to allow fourteen men to maneuver according to the tactics of the contest and retain the members of the body intact, the number was reduced to five on a side, merely by dropping the side-centers.

The game has been termed a "girls' game" or a "children's game" by people who know nothing about it or who are prejudiced against it. True, girls and children play it, but this merely adds to the generality of the sport. As played by men, the game of basketball is such that for forty minutes—the playing time—it requires, on the part of the participants, more endurance and staying power than most any other sport. Players must be well developed physically and must possess nerve and ability to withstand severe collisions with both opponents and the playing surface.

Trinity was among the first of the colleges to form a basketball team, for as early as 1894-'95 she had a team which, though it did not represent the college, played a number of games with fair success. At first it was really an organization formed by a few students who had played the game and who had the perseverance to stick to it against odds and criticisms. The following year found the team greatly benefited and strengthened by its experiences and "rubs" of the preceding year. It took much energy of purpose on the part of the individuals constituting the team to maintain its existence at all. However, after a victory or two the college body began to take interest in basketball successes and reverses. This interest was a great incentive to the players, and they worked very hard to do better things. Their pay was the development of a team which in 1896-'97 will be remembered as Trinity's first successful basketball team. In 1896-'97—with the accent on the seven—her schedule consisted of games with some of the best teams in New England, of which games she won the majority, including a victory over Wesleyan and a decisive victory over Yale on a neutral surface. A tie game was also played with Yale on her own gymnasium, which she won on the play-off. Since that year, Trinity has maintained her position in the basketball world by possessing a good team—some years being remarkably strong in this department of athletics.

During the past season Trinity has been represented by an unusually strong team, ably captained by Powell. The schedule arranged by Manager Bulkley consisted of nine games, of which five resulted in victories and four in defeats. Of the latter it should be said that the first two were received at the hands of the well-known Middletown Y. M. C. A. and Central Branch Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. teams early in the season, before our men really had gotten into good form. The third game of the season, with Brown at Providence, although resulting in a victory for the opponents by a small margin, showed what the men could do and gave promise of better things. Promises materialized shortly afterwards, as is shown by the fact that the boys “trimmed” Wesleyan on her own surface to the tune of 19 to 16—a creditable performance indeed. After the “trimming operation” above mentioned, Trinity won every game of her schedule with but one exception—that being a defeat after an excellent effort against a remarkably strong aggregation from Syracuse University. The next game and victory to follow that over Wesleyan was the defeat of the well-known Adelphi team of Hartford by a score of 34 to 20. “Next” came Wesleyan again, this time in the Trinity gymnasium. Result, Trinity 35, Wesleyan 19—very easy. There was an element of strenuousness in this game that seemed to lead the spectators to realize that there was no “girls’ game” in progress.

Trinity’s final game of the year resulted in a victory over the Yale “College” five. The men sent up by our New Haven neighbors were the best they had outside of the ‘varsity. They returned with a score of 36 to 14 against them.

The line-up of the ‘varsity five for the past season was: Forwards, Powell (Capt.) and Duffee; center, Landefeld; guards, Madden and Marlor; substitutes—all of whom played in at least one game—Bulkley, Bowne, Chamberlain, Pond and Stevens. The team play of the above aggregation, while somewhat variable, was on the whole very good and showed great improvement as the season progressed. The conspicuous and commendable features were their ingenious formations in advancing the ball, their quick and accurate passing and the apparent lack of “grand stand playing.”

Individually, the “regulars” are strong players. The work of Powell and Duffee as forwards may be characterized as heady, combined with admirable ability at throwing baskets. They were a continuous source of worry to opposing guards. To Powell also must be given the credit of developing the team into the excellent form which it showed in the latter part of the season. His thorough knowledge of the game, coupled with his ability as leader, were a combination which was a great factor in the development of the team. Landefeld at center, the aggressive man of the quintet, was always in the game and always playing hard — for which I dare say I might get corroboration from some of the men who played against him. He seemed never to tire and possessed marked ability at "shooting" baskets. Madden and Marlor, the guards, certainly did their share towards winning victories. By their excellent blocking tactics they held the scores of opponents down, while their co-workers at the other end of the floor were making points for Trinity. Besides being very clever guards they, too, were good at "shooting" and many times would dash down the floor and score before the opposing forwards could prevent it.

At a meeting of the members of the team held shortly after the close of the season, Powell resigned the captaincy and Marlor was elected to act in that capacity next year. What a wealth of material he will have to select from! Every one of the team and substitutes, with the exception of Bulkley, who graduates in June, is to return. Donnelly, who on account of an unfortunate injury to his knee while playing football, was unable to play this year, will be on hand also. His record as a basketball player before entering college was excellent and he will be a strong addition to the squad of candidates. Add to the men who have been mentioned the possible or rather probable players in the entering class next fall, and there is no doubt, I believe, that from this combination of candidates, Marlor will have no difficulty in picking a 'varsity team that will be second to none in New England.

She stands for broad humanity,
For Church & State;
and all good things
That Science, Learning, Wisdom, brings
Shall find their home at Trinity.
Sonnet.

My careless, wandering soul once dreamed three dreams.
   A jest, they were, a song and then a prayer.
The jest and then the song shone brightest there,
O'ershadowing the prayer beneath their beams.
When joy alone was king I dreamed these dreams,
   And, mirthful, spoke the jest, a sword for care.
Each time I hummed the song it seemed more fair;
The prayer seemed hard. A prayer thus always seems.

Then came the trouble and the bitter night.
   I threw the pale jest from me in disgust;
The song drooped slowly off, as such songs must.
But then I saw the prayer grown quickly bright.
And through the fearful darkness, 'till the morn,
It was the prayer that cheered my soul forlorn.

Trinity Ivy.

Election Number.

Extra! Extra! Extra!

ARTFORD, June 7, 1905.—The Junior Class elections at Trinity College were held today in all wards of the college and in the contagious, insane and inebriate wards of the hospital. The scene at headquarters was a most exciting one. At seven-thirty the results began to come from the nearest districts, there was a rush of news at eleven-thirty, while at half past one the results were all returned and the office was closed.

A large, but good-natured crowd had gathered in front of the Ivy office, completely blocking traffic on Summit street, to watch the results as they were flashed instantaneously with their arrival on the Ivy's huge curtain. Special announcements were made through a gigantic megaphone, from time to time, by Hartford's genial auctioneer, H. G. Hart, while popular songs were rendered on a calliope during the long waits, by E. L. Baker. Inside the office candidates walked back and forth nervously twisting their hands or chewing cigar stumps, then as the results became more certain, either smiling under the congratulations of their friends or stealing silently out into the darkness. At one-thirty, the stereopticon flashed "good night," and the crowd dispersed to form a torch light parade and to draw the successful candidates to their homes.

The first election to be announced was merely a question of municipal policy and occasioned little interest. The question on the ticket was, "What is your retiring hour?" The earliest hour given was sundown. The latest was 2 a.m. One voter of apparently unsteady habits didn't know, and another answered gayly with "Any old time." Two indefinite answers of 12 to 6 and 12 to 3 were given, but were cast out by the polls committee. The average hour was 11:30, showing the good sense and steady habits of our little community.

The next question was a vital one and was to decide who was the most popular man in the class. The first vote opened was for Fiske. The next was for Bowne. One for Gateson soon followed. Then a little ripple of excitement was caused by a believer in woman suffrage who voted for Mother Stickney. About 10 o'clock a vote came in for Powell from the Pennsylvania district. From ten to twelve everything was for Fiske. Then the late diners cast a scattering vote for Powell. Then Fiske came to the front again. The last three votes, cast by the conservative element, were all for Bowne. The final result was Fiske 10, Bowne 5, Powell 4, Gateson 3, scattering (Stickney) 1.

After this serious question came quite properly a more frivolous one, namely, as to who thinks he is the most popular man in the class. Marl- lor opened the fight. Gateson and Pierce soon followed. Then the Naylor element came to the polls in a body and after that the result was at no time in doubt. Pond surprised the wise ones by beating out Hunt, whose unexplained absence evidently counted against him. One citizen cast a joint vote for Pierce and Curtiss. The results were: Naylor 6, Gateson 3, Curtiss 3, Marlor 2, Pond 2, Hunt 1, Pierce 1. Split vote (each paid 50 cents), Pierce and Curtiss.

The next question concerned the choice of the best-looking man. Fackler, the German Club's candidate, received the first vote. Then the Bollerites came to the front. Burwell's type of beauty pleased one voter, while Bowne, Curtiss, Hinkel and Morgan were all admired. The year ago departure of Grange made no difference, for his influence seemed to linger and to influence one vote. Gateson finally won with eight followers.

The vote for the noisiest man was a beautiful example of a solid vote. Party feelings and petty jealousies were cast aside and all men voted hand in hand. At a very early hour it was clearly seen that the whole vote from all counties was solid for Marlor. The favorite received every vote except four. Two of these went to the humorist Barbour, and one to soloist Gateson. The midnight slumbers of some stray voter had also evidently been disturbed by Naylor. Pond was stated on one ballot as a close second to Marlor. But he wasn't.

A vote almost as united was cast for the quietest man. There was never any doubt during the reception of the returns that Winston was the people's friend. Hinkel, Sutcliffe, Graham, Kellam, and the ever-popular Naylor also ran.

The vote for the best athlete was a pretty fight between Morgan and Bowne, won by the former with eleven votes to seven. Powell's long drives had evidently appealed to more than one spectator; for he had two votes. Gateson ran away with one, while an old soldier who had voted the straight Reed ticket since 1847 was true to his colors.

The candidates for the position of brightest man were many. By strenuous efforts and the liberal use of baseball money Hinkel won from Cowper, 5 to 4. Barbour had three votes and Maercklein 2. Powell and Rehr each had a single vote. There were two combination tickets, Pierce and Burgwin and Cowper and Fiske, but neither of them were successful, as they obtained only one vote apiece. The contest developed a humorist who declared that concerning the desired brilliant man, "He didn't come to college." The vote also showed how corruption has crept into politics, for Burgwin and Curtiss each received a vote.

There was considerable guessing as to what man would be the most likely to succeed in life. Four voters thought that Hine would, because he is working for Success Publishing Company, but Hinkel's successful baseball season and prom. committee counted for more and he received six votes. Huet had two votes, while Boilier, Fackler, Marlor (see under noisiest man), Morgan, Haight (Vid. Sub. Most pop. drink), Cameron, Maercklein, and Powell each had one. One optimist thought that every man in the class would succeed.

The typical freshman attracted little interest and several blank votes were received. This vote was the first tie of the election. Marlor and Naylor each received four votes. Barbour ran a beautiful race, but could pull no more than three votes. Pierce, Lingle, Hunt and Morgan had each displeased somebody. One man coyly voted for himself, and one advanced the theory that the typical freshman had failed to get in.

The vote for the greasiest grind was listless, as neither Marlor nor Naylor were eligible. Cowper had the money and won with seven votes, but a dark horse, Fackler, showed unexpected strength, and missed a tie for first place by a single vote. North had two men, who were still true to him, and Graham and George each had one, while Burwell had fooled somebody.

Few voters seemed to have had an opinion on the question as to who had done the most for Trinity, but Huet, Morgan, and the dashing Hodiermus were tied with four votes each. Bowne tried to make things interesting, but could get no farther than three votes. Brainerd had two votes from the musical element, and somebody else owed Reed some money. The humorist came out again and declared that "President Luther had dun the most for Trinity," but the vote was cast out.

In the election of the most popular professor, Drs. Genthe, Kleene and Babbit were either absent or honest, for they were the only members of the faculty who didn't receive a vote. Professor Ferguson finally beat Professors Johnson and Flynn by seven votes to four. Dr. Martin deserves honorable mention with two votes. None of the others received more than one.

The election of the most popular lecturer was also very close, but Dr. Edwards proved to be too fast for the field, and won with seven votes. Professor Ferguson had four, and Drs. Urban and Genthe three each. The names of Perkins, Johnson, Babbit, Martin, Luther and McCook appeared on several tickets.
From this time, the elections concerned only points of personal characteristics, and were accordingly of less interest except to the statistician.

First the voters were asked whether they had ever used a pawn ticket. Eighteen never had or else lied. Four owned up and one "Hated to say."

There were only four confessed fussers in the class. Several dodged the issue with question marks or such phrases as "Un peu" and "somewhat," while a large number seemed to consider the mystic letters, "A. F. L.," a sufficient answer.

When the question of complexion was broached nine decided blondes answered the roll call. Several men of dark attributes cast a ballot, while three claimed to be "medium." One man is very gray and one more "half and half." One thoughtless chap had "never looked."

The material question of "Dinners at Heub's" was variously answered. One man answered 7,462; but the vote was doubted. Several ballots were indefinite with such answers as "Impossible to say," "Very few," "Innumerable," or "Too." One man told the truth and said "None." The conclusion seemed to be that about two-thirds of the class dined at Heub's occasionally.

Thirteen men go to church and six don't. Two go sometimes. One refused to answer, and one goes "always." The popular place of worship seemed to be the chapel, but four go to Trinity church. One goes to "the nearest," and one to the synagogue. This last fellow was trying to be funny.

As to the hours of exercise, eleven had none. One exercised at meal time and one from 8:25 to 8:30 a.m. According to the figures the average hours of exercise seemed to be eight per day, but statistics cannot be taken to mean anything.

The next question was, "Do you drink, smoke or chew?" This question was a serious one and for once the jokers were almost silent, although one man said that he "drank when asked." Ten men owned up to all three vices. Five drink and smoke. The rest of the class is pure. One man said "Yes, and swear terribly."

In political parties the class has two anarchists, fourteen Republicans, one gold Democrat, one plain Democrat, and one Prohibitionist (who chose champagne as his favorite drink).

As to drinks, beer had four voters, of whom three were expressly for Piel. Haight's cider and water had also four votes each. The rest of the votes were scattered from milk to hot sloe gin.

There are six frock coats in the class. One man said that he had sold his to Haight for 50 cents, but it stayed in the family, so it was all right.
Opera hats are more common, as ten members of the class own them, or say they do.

Of the votes for the most popular magazine the Ladies' Home Journal, McClure's and the Tripod each had two. Some excitement was caused in literary circles when it was discovered that the Atlantic Monthly and the Century also had two. But hope in that quarter was dashed to the ground, when it was discovered that the Tablet had only one supporter.

There is only one man in the class who still denies the existence of pajamas absolutely. All the other members of the class wear them at least "some of the time." A large number of the voters insisted that they wore pink ones. One wears pajamas every other week.

Eleven members of the class work at least a little during the summer. This question was too pointed to allow the perpetration of any jokes worth repeating, so we will proceed at once.

The question "How soon do you expect to marry?" could be answered in countless ways, and so we have no statistics to offer. We can only say that the answers range from "Sometime during the summer" to "One hundred years." Most of the voters showed remarkable good sense and answered in some such fashion as, "Depends on the girl and the pot of gold," or, "When I can afford it." One man will be married when he falls in love.

The question "Are you glad that you came to Trinity?" needs no report. Everyone was conventional enough to say yes. Three members of the class would not send younger brothers to Trinity, while one would send a younger brother when he himself gets out.

The members of the class average five and a half times a month at the theater. By this time the funny answers were getting fearfully tiresome, and one of the spectators threw a brick through the IVY office window.

The musical comedy was the most popular kind of play by a large majority. Grand opera had four votes and a man named Shakespeare had two. One voter (probably Lauderburn) liked "Thud and Blunder," and two confessed a weakness for melodrama. One man was undecided between a fair and grand opera.

As to play houses, legitimate drama triumphed and Parsons' won the thirteen votes. Poli's had six, most of which were cast with statement, "because cheap." The Hartford made a strong showing at first, but public sentiment was too much against it.

The vote was 15 to 8 in favor of compulsory chapel.

The personal size of the members of the class may be determined by the following averages: Age, 21 years; weight, 146 pounds; height, 5 feet 7 1/2 inches; size of shoe, 7 1/2; size of hat, 7.

HAALMVOND, his sister

PASTOR VOYUR

Act I.

(Scene: A sitting room neatly furnished with a piano, six chairs and a table. On the piano is a copy of Wagner's "Parsifal." There is a dead fly on the open page. A small student lamp is on the table. A book, "Vazvanor Xasдетtio," lies by the lamp. Under the book is a blank postal card. Gorkoi is seen sitting in an arm chair by the table. Sphora enters from the side.)

GORKOI (rising) — Is it you, Sphora?
Sphora (sadly) — It is I.
Gorkoi (to himself) — It is really Sphora.
Sphora (wildly) — It is the Doom.

(Curtain)

Act II.

(Scene: Same as in Act I, except that the postal card is no longer on the table. Pastor Voyur and Haalmvond enter conversing.)

PASTOR VOYUR — What is the matter, Haalmvond? You are not yourself.
HAALMVOND (absently) — What? Oh, I am all right. Have you seen Sphora? There is something wrong with her. She hasn't noticed my new book, and I meant it to surprise her.

PASTOR VOYUR — Hush, child, she is coming.

(Sphora enters. She does not notice Pastor Voyur’s salutation, but goes to Haalmvond and takes her hand.)
Sphora — Have you seen him, Haalmvond?

Haalmvond (bewilderedly) — Who? Gorkoi? No; he has gone out in the boat.

Out in the boat. Today!

Pastor Voyur — Be calm, child; Gorkoi is safe.

Sphora (slowly) — I did not mean Gorkoi. (wildly) Out in the boat! Today!

Haalmvond — What is the matter, Sphora? Who is it you mean? Don’t you see my new book?

Sphora (shuddering) — Today! Today! It is the Doom! Out in the boat! Today!

(Curtain)

Act III.

(Scene: Same as in Acts I and II, except that the dead fly has been brushed from the open page of Wagner’s “Parsifal.” Sphora is seen standing by the table slowly turning the leaves of “VazVanor Xasdetuio.” Someone is heard approaching.)

Sphora — It is his step.

(She closes the book. Zostpoqp enters and stands silently by the door. He looks steadily at Sphora.)

Sphora — What makes you so white, Zostpoqp? Are you ill?

Zostpoqp (softly) — I have eaten rat poison.

Sphora (despairingly) — Ugh! Why could you not have drunk laudanum?

(Zostpoqp starts forward and falls dead by the piano. Gorkoi enters hurriedly and does not see the body. He hastens towards Sphora.)

Gorkoi — Here I am, safe again. How you must have worried, Sphora.

Sphora (pointing to the body) — Why did you go today?

Gorkoi (starting) — What does this mean, Sphora?

(Sphora takes a pistol from the front of her waist and aims at her temple. She misses, but shoots out her left eye.)

Sphora (faintly) — It is the Doom! (She falls dead.)

(Curtain) Wolfe
“Who’s What” in the Junior Class.

HENRY GRAY BARBOUR.

“Harry.”

A youth, smart in his studies, and also,—strange to say,—fairly presentable. Hails from Hartford, and has performed in the two-mile run.

“Jack,” “Bowler.”

Former room-mate of above (q. vid.), but with relationship ending at that point. Comes from Canajoharie, N. Y., a town chiefly noted as the home of the “Hay Trade Journal” —and of Boller. Has a talent for art—especially as applied to overcoats.

GARRETT DENISE BOWNE.

“Boone,” “Dan’t.”

A good-natured giant who looks like a bookworm and acts like a boa-constrictor. Has performed in track athletics, basketball and football. Hartford is to blame for him.
CLIFTON CULVERHOUSE BRAINERD.

"St. Cecilia."

"Can Rollo see the man with the mortar-board?" "Rollo can see the man with the mortar-board." "Is this man on the glee club?" "This man is on the glee club." "Does the man sing?" "Oh, Rollo, Darling, don't be such an ass. This man does not sing. He plays the piano." "What was that that the naughty man did to the organ in chapel?" "I cannot tell you, Rollo. The organ never lived to say." P. S. Hartford's the answer.

HILL BURGWIN, JR.

"Bug," "Bugwin."

No, the college did not let down its age limit to admit this man. True, the picture looks infantile, but the original is a strong, husky brute from Pittsburg, who has steered the finances of the German Club through a season. He intends to be a lawyer some day, as that profession requires the longest preparation.

WILLIAM CLINTON BURWELL.

"Billy."

A sunny little chap whom Winsted, Conn., taught to hold down second base on the Varsity team.
RALPH EVELYN CAMERON.

"Raphael."

A man of sound common sense from Fishkill, N. Y. Plays basketball and makes puns; the former better than the latter, for the reason that the reverse would be impossible. See under Fackler.

FREDERICK AUGUSTUS GRANT COWPER.

"Cowp."

A man who has outlived his plural names and the fact that he comes from New Hampshire so successfully that he leads the class in scholastic lines. His name is pronounced in both the American and English ways.

PHILIP EVERETT CURTISS.

A man of great brilliancy in all lines and unlimited powers, but unfortunately not unlimited ink, a fact which compells him to hasten to the biography of —
DAVID MORRIS FACKLER.

"Dave."

Inquiries in his home village, the largest town in New York state, reveal the fact that this man has always had the mulish stubbornness, but withal the solid working power, that he now possesses. Was secretary-treasurer of the Junior Prom. committee, a position for which both qualities eminently fitted him. Shares with Cameron the possession of a defunct alma mater.

WILLIAM SYDNEY WALKER FISKE.

"Syd," "Mooney."

The picture on our right, ladies and gentlemen, is not of a bull frog, but of one of the oddest yet best fellows that ever rolled around on two fat little legs. Providence (R. I.) sent him here to manage the football team. Probably Providence (state unknown) will care for him in the future. He's just that kind of a boy.

DANIEL WILMOT GATESON.

"Billy," "Gates."

The Brooklyn man whom Dr. Luther couldn't flunk on account of his smile. Famous as a sprinter and captain of the track team. The portrait, by the way, is a hideous caricature.
DWIGHT WORDEN GRAHAME.

"Dwight."

Left most of his sunny locks in Woodbury, Conn. Since being in college he has concerned himself with the Tablet and the library.

AUSTIN DUNHAM HAIGHT.

"Mother."

Another off-scouring of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has tried to introduce trap shooting at Trinity. Wears a shooting jacket all winter and talks in scientific terms about bird dogs. As a side line he manages the track team.

FREDERICK CHARLES HINKEL.

"Perrywinkle," "Freddie."

The smallest and youngest looking of the class when we entered, but probably the most successful of the lot. Popular with everybody. Managed the Ivy (he didn't write this) and baseball team. Made the senior honorary society and Phi Beta Kappa; was chairman of the Junior Prom. committee, and stood third in his class. Is on the Tablet board and plays class baseball. In fact the only talent that this versatile little man seems to lack is a Christian taste in neckties. New York did it.
HARRY HUET.

"Harry."

An honest, hard-working man, as reliable as the drooghts of his native North Dakota. The kind of a fellow that one's father likes to talk to when he visits college and calls "manly" when he leaves. But withal neither a grind nor a prig, but very companionable in a pinch. P. S. The writer owes him four dollars.

RICHARD PRESCOTT KELLAM.

A rare specimen of a kind sometimes found in South Glastonbury, Conn. Our searchers could discover no facts about him except that he is still extant and may sometimes be seen in the library by patient waiting on a dark night. The original is not at all the buxom specimen that the photographer's art makes him appear.

DONALD ELY LAUDERBURN.

"Don," "Douderbum."

A football man from Wellesley, Mass., where he evidently acquired from the atmosphere that smile that no sophomore could make him quite wipe off. No distinguishing features, except the aforesaid smile.
FREDERICK WILLIAM LYCETT.

"Fred."

Whose picture it was not necessary to print because it can be seen any day in the rogues' gallery. Distinguished himself as a bicycle rider in the old days and now flashes around in a big automobile to the great edification of the bystanders.

THOMAS SMITH MARLOR.

"Tommy."

Grew during three years in college from size shown in Fig. 1 to that shown in Fig. 2. In actions still retains characteristics of Fig. 1. Noisiest man in college. Was thrown out of Brooklyn, Conn.
BURDETT CRANE MAERCKLEIN.

"Derby."

OWEN MORGAN.

"Sugar," "Black Stal."

A football and baseball man with a Richard Harding Davis jaw and of few words. Runs things when he pleases and plays mighty good football all the time. The kind of a man to have ahead of you in a push rush and behind you in a fight.

JOHN HYATT NAYLOR, New York.

"Jack."

Really much older-looking than the picture would make one believe. About six feet two in height and dresses well. Fusses — some. Plays football — some. Studies — some. We like him — some.
GEORGE PREBLE PIERCE.

"Freddy," "The Owl."

Son of the mayor of Red Wing, Minnesota (or is it Arkansas?). "Also ran" on the track team. Alternately sour and merry. Never forgets that he is a son of old Shattuck. (This has nothing to do with the mayor of Red Wing.)

LESTER MONROE POND.

No particular nickname, so we won't make one up, as some annuals seem to. Makes Wilder, Minn., happy. Has a room fixed up with gorgeous mission furniture and owns a bull pup. That's him. Boller uses the same room, but the furniture is Pond's. Draws for the Ivy. Also the discard.

JOHN FRANKLIN POWELL.

Allentown, Pa.

You would never call him Jack, but just John, and then Johnny. Tends strictly to his own affairs and plays the best, snappiest short-stop in New England. Has a good ear for campus harmony.
VICTOR EUGENE REHR.
"Curly."
Gained the sand that he shows in football in the lubricative town of Oil City, Pa. Thick set and a shark in chemistry.

ALLEN SUTCLIFFE.
"Frou Frou," "Seacliff."
Was formed at St. Stephen's. Sent here from Kenyon. Is already boxed to be sent to Hobart. Innocent in looks, but of unknown antecedents.

THOMAS THEODORE WEEKS.
"Tommy."
Dapper and swagger. Carries a cane. Can't remember that he ever did anything else except leave Lakeport, New Hampshire.
ERNEST F. WINSTON.

"Winny."

A cursing, swearing, shouting, shooting, thoroughly bad man. If he ever spoke above a whisper we never heard him. Used to pole vault but stopped because of the notoriety that it gave him.
Leaves from a Freshman's Rubaiyat.

(To upper class-men.)

I.
And if the beers you drink; the things you burn,
End in our paying all, soon shall we turn.
Think then we are Today what Yesterday
You were — Tomorrow we shall not be less.

II.
Some for the money they have lent, and some
Sigh for the dough they hope from home may come.
Ah, take the cash and let the credit go,
Nor heed the rumble of the weekly dun.

III.
A book of verses,— let them go unread.
A jug of wine,— I do not care for bread.
And thou beside me,— sing some other time.
Another jug,— I'd Paradise resign.

IV.
Ah, love, could you and I somehow conspire
To cut out Chapel and the mid-years dire,
Would we not shatter them to bits and then
Remould the finals to our heart's desire?

V.
The learned teacher writes, and having writ,
Writes on; nor all your copying nor wit
Shall bluff him when he reads your paper through;
Nor all your cribbing raise your mark on it.

VI.
Wake, for the SOPHS, who scatter into flight
Freshmen before them from their beds at night,
Drive us along with them and harshly strike

A Corner in Mammoths.

I boarded the train for Cincinnati and entered the smoking car, but at first glance saw that every seat contained at least one occupant. Now, when I am deprived of the luxury of an entire car seat and am forced to the necessity of a companion, I generally select a seat-mate with great care, looking first for general cleanliness, and second for an interesting presence. In this car for Cincinnati there was a wealth of fulfillment of the first requirement, but a poverty of the second, and after a short scrutiny I took my seat beside a tall, well-dressed young German, with a smooth face, curly yellow hair, a general air of good breeding and refinement.

As the train pulled out of the station I exchanged several commonplaces with my companion and found him interesting, well educated and thoroughly Americanized both in his accent and his views of things in general.

As we reached those dull, low, brown plains which so often divide the large city from the real country our gaze found nothing more interesting upon which to rest than a long succession of huge signs, advertising every possible commodity from a country home to a dollar watch, and from a can of cold cream to a comic opera, but at last there appeared an advertisement which was extraordinarily striking. It consisted of a whole herd of wooden but very life-like cattle, driven by a dashing wooden figure on horseback with a whirling lasso, and surmounted by a huge sign announcing that the animals were on their way to conversion into "Gaynor's Beef."

The simultaneous notice of this monstrosity brought from my companion a smile and from me the worldly-wise query as to why it was necessary for the well-known Gaynor to advertise so extensively when he held, anyway, a control of the entire beef market. At this apparently harmless remark my companion straightened up and began a sudden tirade against the beef trust in particular and Gaynor in general, his remarks being tinged with apparently such personal feeling that I regretted my hasty remarks and began to wonder what sort of a storm I had called forth. But after a minute the stranger composed himself and with a cynical laugh remarked.

"But you are not the beef trust or Gaynor, and so I beg your pardon, yet I have particular cause for hatred of them both and perhaps you would like to hear why."
We were now some hours from Cincinnati and the view was most uninteresting, so I begged the stranger to tell his story, and after a few hesitations and preliminary remarks he began the tale, which was substantially like this:

"You have probably guessed that I am a foreigner, and as a matter of fact, I am a German, although I came to this country fifteen years ago, when I was only twenty years old. I was born in a little town near Munich and immediately after landing in New York I headed for Cincinnati, where there lived a friend of my father who happened to be this Gaynor."

The very mention of this name seemed to excite the man again and I could see him clinch his fist as his conversation started off on a tangent and he exclaimed, "But damn him and his trust. I've got 'em now. There won't be any beef trust in six months unless it's mine."

The vehemence of my companion's remarks again startled me and much as I wished to say something which might calm him, after my former experience I was cautious about the even most harmless remarks, and so I waited for the stranger to burn out his fury and continue, which after a minute he did, saying:

"Well, I went at once to Gaynor, told him who I was and asked for work. At that time Gaynor was a butcher with three stores and half a dozen peddling carts, and although he was well off, he was only laying the foundations of his fortunes. But when I applied for a position, he put me on to one of the carts with a chance to learn a trade and to rise later on. This I was glad to do and worked steadily for eight years. By that time I was a cutter, was getting higher and higher wages and began to slack up a bit in my first mad rush for advance.

"One of the first things that I did when I decreased the intensity of my work was to look around for evening amusement, and this quest led me, naturally enough, to Gaynor's own house. Our acquaintance in the old country was a great help and after I was once acquainted with Gaynor's wife and daughter, my visits were more and more frequent, especially as I continually received letters from home containing news which was of great interest to the Gayners.

"Then came the trouble. Of course, I fell in love with the daughter. She was not a pretty girl, but she was typical of my old German home, and the more I saw of her the more she meant to me, so finally we were engaged. But when I came to tell Gaynor of the engagement the storm broke. By this time, Gaynor had a large wholesale business and even had his eyes on the formation of the trust, while with his prosperity had come bigger ideas. As a result, I soon found out that although the neighbor from home was welcome as a visitor, he could never become a member of the family, as Gaynor, carried away by his business success, was blossoming out with a fine house, a large stable, and was even planning a brilliant match for his daughter. And that was all there was to it. The daughter Gretchen was too well brought up in the old German ideas of modesty even to think of a runaway marriage, and so after a month or two of hope I gave up the idea—for the present—although I kept giving the old man so much trouble that finally we had an open quarrel and he discharged me.

"Then you can see how I was placed. Gaynor had a big influence with meat packers all over the country and he had me blacklisted with every one. I couldn't get a job even in a little country meat stall because I wasn't a butcher, but merely a cutter, skilled in only one operation. Then I was twenty-eight years old, had already learned one trade, and was really too old to learn another. So I did odd jobs all over Ohio, swearing vengeance on Gaynor and earning just enough money to live.

"About this time the first rumors of the Alaska gold finds began to run through the country, and at about a month's notice I started for Seattle. I got as far as Dawson, which then consisted of seven houses and a few tents, in the early spring, and started right north with an Indian guide.

"We must have gone three hundred miles without finding anything but ice and snow. Every now and then we would come to a place where we could turn down to a river bank and do a little washing, but we never saw a grain of gold. At last we reached a point where even the guide had never been before—a long, high mountain, steep on the east side and gradual on the west.

"The days were getting fairly long when we reached the mountain, the arctic sun began to melt the snow on the slopes and we heard the rumble of several landslides when we were still some distance away from the mountain; when we reached it we camped near the top so as not to be in the way of any avalanches. But it was very cold up there on the west slope and in spite of the roaring fires that we kept going, day and night, we suffered a good deal, although we dared not move around on to the more protected slopes because that was where most of the avalanches were starting.

"After we had camped up there on the slope for three days we woke up one morning to hear a little sputtering and cracking, then a hissing, and finally a deep rumble that seemed to come from under our very feet. Then the rumble grew to a roar, louder and louder, then began slowly to rattle and die away in the distance. The Indian and I had leaped to our feet at the first noise, but before we had time to do or say anything it was all over except the rattling and hissing in the distance. But such a sight as met our eyes. Our great fire had started the snow and an enormous avalanche had slid away, almost from under our feet. The fire was gone and only the fact that the tent was above it had kept that, too, from sliding down with the rest. But the wonder of wonders was the course of the snow slide. Instead of plowing down to the bare earth the avalanche had merely taken off the surface snow and now a great field of glare ice was exposed to view — acres and acres of it gleaming and flashing in the noonday sun. Near us the ice was dark and black, then farther away it would shade off through a dozen tints of blue of a creamy white, while here and there were jagged irregular pinnacles, where stood pointed prisms of crystal flashing forth a dozen colors. And everywhere the sun lit up the whole field causing little jets of fire to leap from one little hummock to another or to stay in a broad flashing path over the smoother surfaces of the ice.

"But the Indian was less poetic than I and I saw him standing down on the ice below, gazing intently at something by his feet. Then he beckoned excitedly and I worked my way down to him as quickly as possible. When I reached him he pointed down into the ice itself and there I saw a long black shape frozen in, perhaps two feet below the surface. The two feet of ice, clear as it was, made the object very indistinct, and I thought it was a rock and told the Indian so, but he answered merely 'Musk-ox.'"

"At that word an idea occurred to me and I went up to the tent for my ax and an armful of wood. You see, we had been out of bacon for two days, and although we had plenty of biscuit and other things, in that cold climate one needs a lot of meat. So my idea was to get out the frozen musk-ox and renew our larder. The Indian grunted but went to work and after we had burned a fire over the musk-ox for two or three hours, we were able to chip away great cakes of the ice.

"When we got down to the animal, we began to clear away the ice with the idea of getting out a whole side if possible. But when the first bit of the shaggy hide was exposed the Indian looked at it curiously and said:"

"'Him no musk-ox.'"

"When I asked him what it was he made no reply, Indian fashion, but kept on chipping at the ice. Then I, too, began to be mystified, for when we had exposed enough of the back to make an enormous musk-ox the flat surface kept right on. Then I began to suspect the solution. The creature must be a prehistoric mammoth, frozen in the ice. And so it was. Further chipping and thawing revealed the huge outlines of the beast and finally we unearthed the head and the enormous tusks."
"Then came the question of what to do with our discovery. We were not in the show business, but we were out after meat, and so we hacked out several great pieces of the frozen meat and built a fire near the tent to thaw them. At first I feared that the Indian might be superstitious, but if he was his hunger overcame his scruples and he readily joined me in the thawing of the prehistoric cold storage meat. And well, sir, do you know that that meat was the best I ever tasted? There was a thick hide on the outside, but under that there was a good, firm but tender meat with a taste exactly like beef.

"After we had satisfied our hunger we started out to satisfy also our curiosity and before we had gone ten steps from the first animal we found a second at the same distance below the ice. Then we found a third, and a fourth, and a fifth. It was as if a whole herd of the monsters had been driven into a stock yard to be frozen up in this wholesale manner, for everywhere we went, all over the great ice fields we found the frozen animals just below the surface and how much farther they extended under the snow which had not been removed by the avalanche we could only imagine."

By this time the low brown marshes and the sign boards which marked the outskirts of the last city began to give warning of the fact that we were approaching Cincinnati, so my companion hurried his words with the speeding of the train.

"Well, we packed as much of the meat as we could carry and it lasted us until we got back to Dawson. Then I put out for the States. No more gold seeking for me. I had found my gold mine.

"Now, you see my plan. All I have to do is to get enough capital to get that meat out of there and down to the river. It is already frozen in cold storage, so it will not have to be touched, except to cut it up enough to disguise its shape. We can put it on steamers, carry it down to Seattle, and make that place a shipping point for sending it all over the country. Then good-bye to Gaynor and his beef trust. There's enough beef there to break a dozen trusts — while the cost of getting it into cold storage and on the market will be about half of anything that Gaynor can do. Then, besides that, the ivory as a by-product will pay all the costs of production and leave the price of the meat as a clear profit. That's what I am going on to Cincinnati for now — to raise capital for the enterprise."

I turned and looked at my companion. The houses and city blocks of the town were flying past, outside the window and in the dusty gloom of the car the story teller looked perfectly serious. But a break in the tall buildings let in a sudden gleam of light and I saw a humorous twinkle in the eye of the mammoth magnate, so I replied,
"You know this story will work in splendidly in one of my books of travel."

"Books of travel?" said my friend, straightening up in his seat.

"Do you write?"

"I do," I replied. "My name is Baron Munchausen."

"Oh," said my companion, with an air of relief, adding, "But I must doubt your statement, sir, because I am Baron Munchausen, myself!"

Then the brakeman slammed open the door, shouted "Cin-cinnati, Cin-cinnati," and as a mere title was too small a thing to quarrel about we both laughed, shook hands and left the car.

Class Room History.

Enter class with a grand rush singing the "Days of '61." Amid tumultuous noise the members pretend to take their seats. Professor S—silently takes the roll. George and Haight indulge in a rough and tumble fight. Marlor pushes them over onto Cunningham. Four hats start for the chandelier; only one retains its elevated position. In the midst of the melee, a plaintive voice interrupts Gateson's discourse on the Freshman Prom.

"Gentlemen, we will start with a short review upon yesterday's lecture. Mr. Tinfoil, what was the Estates General?"

"Why, he was the man that led the attack on the Bastile." (Great applause and stamping of feet.)

"Mr. Page, can you tell what the Estates General did?"

(Loud outcries from the back of the room: "Freshman stand up.") Page slowly rises. He tries to recite, when a volley of exclamations commands him to gesticulate. Estates General massacred the Swiss Guards, and resumes his seat. After a windmill effect, he manages to inform the gathering that looking like a Democratic speaker in a Socialist meeting.

"Gentlemen, the Estates General was the population of France minus the 30,000 nobility, clergy and higher orders, according to a pamphlet written by Abbe Sieyes.” The pronunciation of the last two words provokes a general applause from the students of French, which, when the joke became circulated, occasioned a riot. Gostenhofer and Harriman break into an open fight and knock over a chair. Clement is awakened from a sound sleep and exclaims, "I didn't quite catch the question."

"Gentlemen, that seems to cover yesterday's lecture and we will proceed to the Reign of Terror. (Applause from back row.) The revolution was caused by the high tax upon salt in Paris. On the 32nd of February the commune gathered and drew up its artillery in front of the palace."

A slight splutter is heard at the back of the room. To add color to the lecture a pack of giant firecrackers suddenly starts the assault. The sleeping ones awake with a jump, and thinking the rabble of Paris is upon them, make a stampede for the door. When the smoke has cleared the enemy has vanished.

Comprehensive Library at all times open to students for study in Languages, Literature, History, Economics, Philosophy, Mathematics, and the Sciences.

Thoroughly equipped Laboratories for work in Chemistry, Natural History, Physics, and Electrical Engineering.

Elementary and Advanced Courses in Civil Engineering.

The principal building of Trinity College is 653 feet long, in the English secular Gothic style. At right angles with it, on the south, are the Observatory, the new Hall of Natural History, and the Jarvis Laboratories for Chemistry and for Physics. To the north of it are the Gymnasium, houses of the President and Professors, and Chapter Houses of the Fraternities.

Below the College Campus to the east, and within three minutes' walk, an Athletic Field has recently been completed, including football fields, a baseball diamond, and a quarter-mile running track.

In beauty of situation, healthful conditions of life, and equipment for its work, the College is not surpassed.

The College has separate courses in Arts, in Science, in Letters and Science, and in Letters.

The Faculty includes seventeen professors, five instructors, a librarian, and a medical director. Among the elective studies within the respective courses there is no important subject for which adequate provision is not made. Properly qualified candidates not desiring to pursue all the studies of any course are allowed as Special Students to pursue selected subjects, receiving certificates of satisfactory work.

The Library contains 50,000 volumes and over 29,000 pamphlets. Generous contributions of the Alumni and others are making possible a rapid addition to its resources.

A Reference Reading Room is open during the day and the evening.

There are about fifty scholarships for the aid of necessitous students. The three Holland Scholarships, yielding each $600 per annum, are awarded to the three best students in the three lower classes respectively. The Russell Graduate Fellowship of $400 is awarded biennially. The Mary A. Terry Graduate Fellowship of $400 is awarded annually. Prizes to the amount of $500 are also awarded to undergraduates for success in the work of the various departments.

Two examinations for admission are held at the College in each year, the first during the week of the Annual Commencement, June 28-30, and the second in September, immediately before the beginning of the Christmas Term, September 24-27.

Candidates from accredited schools are admitted by certificate in most of the departments included in the requirements for entrance.

For Catalogue, Examination Papers, or information apply to the President or to the Secretary of the Faculty.
