To The Reader

By Way of Editorial

It has been said, and truly, that college days are the happiest days of a man's life. They embrace the period when the capacity of enjoyment has developed, and when irresponsibility is strong enough to drive away the care that would otherwise impair pleasure. The longer a man lives, and the more insistent his duties become, the greater is the enjoyment he feels in recalling the events of those almost care-free days. Unfortunately, memory is fickle; it often obscures from us that which we would recollect, and to trust the reminiscences of youth to its keeping alone, is to take the risk of losing them forever.

For this reason, to recall those college days, this book is issued. We trust that it is such that an outsider can readily discern the elements that have been mixed to make Trinity what she is, and we hope that it will afford the members of the class of 1910 many happy reminiscences of their days here.

The editors wish to express their thanks to Mr. William N. Carlton, for his assistance in proof reading, to Mr. Woodforde H. Plant '09, for his kindly advice, and to Mr. Bion H. Barnett Jr., '12, for his drawings in this book.
Raymond Darfield Betts.

1909 History

And because we know we have breath in our mouth,
And think we have thought in our head.—The Old Men.

This is the last chance the Class of 1909 has to give an official account of itself. (No, it should not be an occasion for rejoicing on your part.) In our first tale, we showed the college how we could walk on our new feet; we swelled with self-importance during the Sophomore year; we struggled and scrambled through the manifold duties and pleasures of the Junior stage; and now we have arrived at that much yodelled but really joyful period of the collegiate course—the end. And so we wind up our days as a tale that is told—we hope to live happy and wealthy ever afterwards.

Why cry to us to tell you tales of wonder and of nerve-thrilling class achievement? We can take down a copy of the yellow bound book, and show in the pages of the 1909 Ivy all that has brought us to our present felicitous state. These are the passionate stories that have blistered our mouths with their white hot enthusiasm. We boasted of them, we puffed them,—and then they appeared in cold print without the red fire and the brass band accompaniment. Our history up till September 1908 can be found in the pages of the former Ivy,—why attempt to gild our old idols?

The tales we have to add to this already long list are only two. Some one conceived the idea that we were missing a great opportunity,—we had gathered together at class meetings, we had, in part, attended the banquets of our Freshmen and Junior years, we had posed en masse for the photographer, and we had yelled ourselves hoarse at our own little victories, but we never had tried to gather around one big table and feed our respective faces without the intervention of the Sophomore Class, or the kindly presence of the Freshmen. That is why we held a Senior Smoker. There was nothing exceptional about it, each man brought along his pipe, and each one paid for his feed and his stein of beer. No class assessment resulted, and no one was run into debt by extravagance. The smoker brought us together, it gave a sense of solidarity to the class, and it proved to interested outsiders that the Class of 1909 was capable of gathering for a quiet common meal without trying to wreck the place, or make the air blue with acrimonious epithets about the three other classes. We commend this custom to coming Seniors—it is nothing more than the realizing of Richard Hovey’s idea of “a stein on the table, and a good song ringing clear.”

The second plan adopted by 1909 was the appointing of a nominating committee. This may seem too trivial to be recognized in this book, but it really had a value. All the hair pulling, to say nothing of the wire pulling that used to give a vile repute to Senior class elections was done away. Seniors should have attained a dignity that does not descend to the level of rank politics. If we have preached clean athletics, we might as well begin to practice an equivalent probity in class elections. 1909 has tried to do this. And moreover, if Seniors have attained this reputed dignity, the rest of the college body should not look to them for judgment on trivial affairs. Why should a Senior decide the shape of the button on a Freshman cap? We do not mention this matter simply to revive the hackneyed subject of the position of the Senior, but because 1909 has quietly laid all matters of such small import to those classes to which they belong.

There is not much time left, our college days are numbered, but the associations that we have had will grow deeper with the years, and the peculiarities which we think are indelible weaknesses in our alma mater will be softened as time goes on. For who does not, in memory, erase the wrinkles of work and worry from the loved face of his mother? So we who are passing out will look back upon Trinity with pleasant recollections, with renewed thanks, and with a growing affection for her walls, for her system, for her men.

CLASS OF 1910
ONE of the peculiar joys that comes to a class at the end of its Junior year is to take a retrospective view of its short life. The first two years are a sort of preparation for the third, they are like the easy jaunt before the snow line is reached. And in climbing, one usually rests before he takes the last stretch. It was, then, in our period of composure that we returned to college last Fall. The details of the first part of the climb have been recorded in a former history, and we can give no better evidence of our success than the fact that the Lemon Squeezer was awarded to the Class of 1910. So we are now ending what has been the hardest, the steepest, and, also, the most slippery part of our college journey. It is the hardest and steepest because the Junior is expected to have a large share of outside work, and because it is for most men the last period for satisfying degree requirements; it is the most slippery, because these demands for work give abundant opportunity for all sorts of mistakes and failures.

The first event of interest was the banquet tendered us by the Class of 1912 at the Worthy in Springfield. All thanks and commendation are due to the Freshmen for their bounty, and for their clever escape from Sophomoric clutches. The memories of this banquet are a great contribution to our store of college anecdote—a store that will be rehearsed in part, for the amusement, edification (though undoubtedly, the distress) of our friends and relatives. Then the second event whose memory will linger was the Prom. Like the fond Mother who claims superior beauty and intelligence for her child, each class can say with rightful pride that its Promenade was the best that Alumni Hall has seen. At least, the 1910 Prom was the grandest effort of the Class; on it we expended every energy; in short, all the functions of Junior Week were carried through with a surprising amount of support, and a merited share of pleasure. We can ask no better standard of judgment for the class than the success of its Junior festivities.

There is still another portion of Class History, and that is the production of this book. The scheme, as can be readily discerned, is not to laud any one class, but to praise and show forth the college as a whole. We may have put our own stamp upon what little we have done, but we find, after all our efforts, that little has been done through her. What this Lemon Squeezer Class has done for Trinity is nothing to compare with what Trinity has done for it, both as a body and as individuals.

And finally, if we, thus far, have assimilated any real Trinity spirit, or have re-echoed her song, it has been because we have tried to be useful rather than ornamental. We say this with a consciousness of our failures, for much power has been sacrificed, at times, to this one faculty. A consistent desire on the part of the Class of 1910 to be of service is what has brought it to its present state of prosperity. 'Tis true, some of our strongest men have gone, we have lost twenty-seven of our original number—a third of those who came to Trinity in the Fall of 1906. But from the start of our history the idea to do things, to be positive rather than negative, has been dominant in our minds. Yet it would be unjust to say that we were the suppliers of either this idea or this force; we were merely the concentrators. College spirit is wasted if one scatters it abroad through a megaphone. The originator of the spirit was Trinity, our task was to focus this intensity upon some collegiate achievement rather than to make it a means of display, so we have tried not to aspire either to greatness or fame, but just to do the stint that others have done, only do it better. It is true that in our attempt to "do" things, we have, on several occasions, collided with collegiate authorities. However lamentable these miscarriages of enthusiasm may have been, we feel well assured that none were committed with malice aforethought. We do not exhibit immaculate records, we have no desire to claim an immense superiority over the other eighty class that have preceded us, but we do hope that the spirit that has prompted us and the little we have accomplished may be an acceptable contribution to the class lore of our most just and gentle Mother—Trinity.

1911 History

HISTORY of the Sophomore Class can be little less than a blushing though candid confession of many sincere attempts, and few failures. We would blush, because we have not yet attained the dignity of upperclassmen,—a dignity that allows of boasting and somewhat of exaggeration; we would be candid because our attempts have met with unprecedented success, and we feel that they can claim a place among the best accomplishments of any class. It is, then, with the shyness of adolescence, that we would relate to you the deeds of the class of 1911.

In September, 1907, we kept drifting in, one by one, from all quarters of the country and all sorts of prep schools until our ranks for the first time were completely assembled in chapel on that memorable evening. The Freshmen pews were crowded to overflowing, as the enrollment of the entering class was larger than that of any preceding, there being seventy-three new men. We fumbled around the cathedral seats, knew that all eyes were fixed on us,—altogether, we were impressed by the solemnity of the occasion, and its seriousness rested heavily upon our young shoulders. But as we left this sanctified air, we saw for the first time in our lives, the actuality of college tradition. The sudden expulsion from the chapel door was a rude awakening, but we recovered sufficiently to show the Sophomore that we were a strong aggregation. On Bloody Monday the victory in the bulletin board rush was ours.

The principal events of our initial year were the winning of the championship of the college in basketball; the Freshman-Junior Banquet; and the St. Patrick's day episode. Shortly before the Christmas vacation of our first year we gave the Juniors a banquet, which they will long remember as one of the most enjoyable festivities of their college course. To some it may have been decidedly tame, for it was a quiet protest against the abuses that hitherto had attended such banquets. It was given in Hartford without any intervention whatsoever. Evidently, this plan was a failure to a few, for 1912 returned to the old scheme, yet no one would say that our efforts were in vain.
On St. Patrick's Day we gained a complete victory over the Sophomores. Our banner was hoisted on the Sage-Allen Building early in the morning. The setting was perfect for the act—the cold grey sky was streaked with the lemon yellow of the rising sun, the March air blew up in frapped gusts from the river, and several hundred feet above the pavement, the corners of our banners flapped in the breeze. The Sophomores below uttered groans of anguish, and acted like martyred heroes, when in reality they were only sorely disappointed and deeply stung underclassmen. So there it hung for several hours, despite the efforts of the Sophomores to get it down or burn it. Close upon the heels of this victory came another, for the vigilance of the night before had completely wornout the class of 1910, and we were able to overcome them in the campus scrap.

In September 1908, nearly all of our former number returned, though some who had contributed an inestimable amount of support could not be with us. But, undaunted, we continued our record by winning the push rush on Bloody Monday. The season of class athletics gave us victories in the Freshman-Sophomore baseball game, track meet, and football game. We also defeated the Freshmen in the first game for the college basketball championship. The spirit of the class for social events was well shown in the Sophomore Hop, the second in the history of the college. Nothing was spared that could contribute to the joy of the evening and all who attended said the dance was a complete success.

The final attempt of the class, and, by all means, its most ambitious, was the abolition of hazing. We obviated all uncomfortable and embarrassing circumstances by not using pyrotechnics in this movement. We did not employ a megaphone to tell all the college body that we would not haze; we simply tried to control our feelings. Our actions were based on the supposition that the man who could satisfy the entrance requirements for Trinity had enough grey matter to be convinced that he was not the consummation of all learning and experience, and that the college could get along without his candid self-expression, though it deeply appreciated and urgently solicited his support.

Two events, then, toward what we believe to be sane college spirit have been attempted by the class of 1911. We have tried to hold a Freshman-Junior banquet without any odious and depreciating scandal; we have foregone the opportunity of exhibiting the beast in our natures and have left off the paddle. In short we might say that our class ideal has been to be less like boors, and more like men.

Review of the Football Season

The football squad spent part of the month of September at Westbrook. At the opening of college it was learned that we would lose Coach Laufeld's valuable services. Professor Gettell, who was of inestimable assistance to the 1907 team, offered his services freely. The material was promising, but light. As usual, much interest was shown by the students, and we were disagreeably surprised when Worcester Tech beat Trinity 4-0, and West Point defeated us 33-0. But the team easily disposed of New York University, and faced Amherst with confidence, the twenty-fourth of October. When eleven little men wearing the "Blue and Gold" trotted on the field, Amherst smiled. The smile broadened when Amherst scored a touchdown and goal during the first ten minutes of play. But the smile faded when Trinity completed a like performance and kept Amherst at a desperate defence for the remainder of the game. The result was 6-6.

Holy Cross expected an easy victory, and it was easy—for Trinity. Wesleyan expected to plow a victory through Trinity's light line, but after vainly searching for that light place, Wesleyan found herself submerged, with a record of 42-0 against her.

The plucky Haverford team held us to a 27-0 score, while in the final game with Cornell, the score stood 18-6 against Trinity, and all the scoring was done in the first half. The latter fact may give some idea of the good condition of the men. The men made a very creditable showing against Cornell.

Great credit is due Coach Gettell for producing a team, from very light and inexperienced material, that could cope successfully with Amherst, make it interesting for Cornell, and overwhelm any of the smaller colleges. The only criticism that can be made of the team is its slowness in getting into form, and its nervousness during the first ten minutes of every game. But when one sees the score recorded after those first ten minutes, one almost invariably forgets to criticize.

The team sustained heavy losses the first of the season. However, the spirit remained strong.
The feature ground gainers were Ramsdell and Xanders. Captain Henshaw proved a marvel in every way, having a "happy faculty" of interference which gained many a yard for Trinity. He kept his men on the jump all the time, and his favorite amusement was pulling Xanders through center at the rate of ten yards a down. The ends were fast and strong, while the line made up in speed and aggressiveness what it lacked in weight.

A team cannot be a success without a good and willing scrub, and there were few afternoons that Trinity Field didn’t see a glorious scrimmage, often ending in favor of the scrubs.

So we may again say that Trinity has successfully held her accustomed position on the gridiron.

Review of the Baseball Season

On the fifteenth of March, Coach Murphy called out the baseball candidates for practice. Captain Xanders, however, had been watching the batteries during the two preceding weeks. Nine of the 1907 team reported for practice, with a number of promising freshmen. The coach was well liked, and the men worked hard and willingly. Cook, the 1907 pitcher, always good, was especially so during the whole season. Woodle, a freshman, having exceptional speed, lacked the first requisite, control, and the season was near its close before he was to be depended upon. It was apparent at the start that the men could not hit, although day after day they faced the pitchers in severe practice. The coach, meanwhile, developed a strong fielding team, drilling the men carefully in what is commonly called "inside" play. The result of this fielding proficiency was that Trinity pulled out ahead in many games when her opponents had all but won. No team can be a success (barring the White Sox) unless it has hitters of good quality, for the best it can hope for is a "no-score" game.

This can be illustrated by the Dartmouth-Trinity game. In three innings, with a man on second and another on third, Trinity failed to materialize the necessary single.

But what the team lacked in hitting, it made up in base running and "inside" play. In the feature game of the season, Holy Cross scored two runs on hits and an error during the first inning. Trinity came back with two in her half. Connor drove out a two-bagger. A single and a "pass" filled the bases, and a clever bunt netted two runs. By steadiness in fielding, Holy Cross failed to score again, and in the eighth inning Xanders sent the winning run across the plate with a clean single.

Captain Xanders and Connor, the captain-elect, proved the only creditable hitters on the team, but in speed, cleverness and fielding ability, Trinity ranked with the best.

ITH the first week of March, Coach O'Connor called the track candidates out for what seemed a very prosperous season. Most of the 1907 team were in good condition, and many new candidates promised to be of value. The team was a good team, but from the start it failed to produce good results. The meet with Rensselaer Polytechnical Institute at Troy taught our men a lesson in over-confidence and its certain results; and when Trinity faced Wesleyan, although it was conceded that Wesleyan had a number of "stars," Wesleyan faced a surprising confidence, yet no over-confidence. Wesleyan won the meet by five points, and it was a "never-to-be-forgotten" struggle to the end. The team did not fail from lack of "grit" or work, and in one way the season proved a success, for it taught the lesson of courage against odds.

Review of the Basketball Season

Here are various reasons for the poor showing of the basketball team last year. There is, and has been, a lack of interest in the "National Indoor Game" for a few years here at Trinity. But the greatest hindrance to success was the desire of the members of the team to play without training. The result was that most of the games saw Trinity ahead at the close of the first half, and behind her opponents at the end of the second half. Captain Donnelly again undertook sole charge of the team, and produced good individual players, but no team.

Review of Hockey Season

The past two winters have seen a growing popularity of hockey at Trinity. There is one drawback to the game, however, and that is, lack of ice and poor weather conditions. It is hoped to have a rink arranged by another year, which will doubtless make this vigorous outdoor game the leading winter sport.

HARTFORD,  -  HARTFORD,

CONN.
TRINITY COLLEGE, under the name of Washington College, received its Charter in 1823. The present name was adopted in 1845. Its chief founder was the Right Rev. Thomas Church Brownell, Bishop of Connecticut. Established by Episcopalians as a contribution to higher education, it is not a Church institution in the sense of being directed by the Church. Its advantages are placed at the service of those of every creed.

Formerly on the site of the present State Capitol, it was transferred in 1878 to the southwestern part of the city. The principal building, in the English Secular Gothic style, 653 feet long, including Jarvis and Seabury Halls and Northam Towers, is one of the most imposing and admirably fitted educational edifices in the United States. It was intended to form the west side of a great quadrangle. Outside of the lines of this quadrangle at the south are the Observatory, the Boardman Hall of Natural History, and the Jarvis Laboratories for Chemistry and for Physics. To the north of it are the Gymnasium, houses of the President and Professors, and Chapter Houses of the Fraternities. Below the College Campus to the east and within three minutes' walk is the spacious Athletic field. In beauty of situation, healthful conditions of life and equipment for its special work, the College is not surpassed.

The Faculty includes sixteen professors, four instructors, librarian, and medical director. Among the Elective studies within the respective courses there is no important subject for which adequate provision is not made.

The Library contains 56,000 volumes. Generous contributions of the Alumni are making possible a rapid addition to its resources. A reference Reading Room is open every day and five evenings of the week.

The Jarvis Chemical and Physical Laboratories have an excellent equipment for Elementary and Advanced work.

The Hall of Natural History contains the Museum, Biological Laboratories, and the Psychological Laboratory.

In the year 1903-1904 a full technical course in Civil Engineering was for the first time made available for all qualified applicants.

There are numerous scholarships providing pecuniary assistance for deserving students. The three Holland Scholarships yielding each $600 per annum, are awarded to the three best students in the three lower classes respectively. The Russell Graduate Fellowship of $500 is awarded biennially in the interest of higher graduate study. The Mary A. Terry Graduate Fellowship, of $550, is awarded annually. Prizes to the amount of $500 are also awarded to undergraduates for success in the work of the various departments.

Two examinations for admission are held at the College each year, the first during the days following the Annual Commencement, and the second in September, immediately before the beginning of the Christmas term.

For Catalogues, Examination papers, or information, apply to the President or Secretary of the Faculty.
