Students Assaulted In North Campus

Six Suspects Involved In Early Morning Altercation

by Sean Doherty and Chip Rhodes
Staff Editors

Four female Trinity students were sexually assaulted and one male student beaten in the second hall of the North Campus dormitory early Saturday morning, according to administration officials. The six assailants followed a student into the dorm sometime before 8:21 a.m., when the incident was reported to security.

Dean of Students David Winer said, “It was definitely a sexual assault, but fortunately nobody was raped or seriously hurt.”

Said Security Director Biagio Rucci: “The girls were okay, considering what happened. The male student was punched a few times, but didn’t need to go to the hospital.”

Although no arrests have been made, Rucci said that Hartford Police have several leads.

“I understand that they had a couple suspects picked up. They were brought in for identification but were positively identified by the victims,” said Rucci, adding that the Hartford Police are keeping him abreast of any developments in the case.

According to reports filed by the security guards, they received a call from the dispatcher while patrolling Vernon Street. They proceeded on foot to the North Campus dormitory where they encountered the five assailants leaving the building. They gave pursuit, but lost the suspects before they could reach the Old Plaza. Accounts obtained from victims describe the early morning events in the following sequence.

One female student, noticing someone trying to steel her bicycle, left the dorm to prevent the theft. After doing so she was followed by the dorm by five unidentified males.

The suspects entered her room and an altercation ensued between the student and the intruders. The male student was punched several times before fleeing for help.

The suspects then entered the room and pushed the female student onto her bed in an attempt to pull off her clothes. They also started to attack her roommate.

Two of the men went down to the ball and verbally assaulted two other female students. When the women attempted to call security, they were prevented by the small group of men who took them to another dorm. After being chased off, they were prevented by the assailants as “sixt males ages 10-20.” According to the report, five were Hispanic, one white, and one black. They ranged in height from 5’7” to 6’2” and were wearing casual clothing. One perpetrator wore a dark color jacket with “FBI” printed on the back in gold lettering. Another was nicknamed “Mahie.”

Rucci said that the male student was instrumental in keeping the female students from being seriously harmed.

“I’m sorry that thing happened was the confrontation with the male student,” said Rucci. “I hope that the perpetrators prevented anything worse from happening.”

As a consequence of the incident, Rucci reiterated the need to keep dormitories locked at all times and to report all suspicious individuals.

ConnPRG Organizes EarthDay

by Judy Rolnick

Earth Day, for the seventh year in a row, was observed last Saturday by the Environmental Committee of the Connecticut Public Interest Research Group. Its purpose, according to organizers, was to boost awareness of environmental problems.

The highlight of the day was a free afternoon concert on the Grove Patio by local bands Alchemy and Hidden Playground.

“The 60’s were a time of dirty air and black rivers,” said Ed Mierzwinski, Executive Director of ConnPRG and keynote speaker Saturday for the Trinity College celebration of Earth Day.

“Environmentalists of the 1960’s used to call New York City equivalent to smoking 38 cigarettes a day,” he said.

Today, he said, the nation’s rivers are clearer and fewer smokestacks belch black fumes, but pollution remains a serious problem.

“You may not be able to see them, but chemicals like dioxin, the toxic chemical formed under high temperatures when styro-plastic food containers are burned— are everywhere,” said Mierzwinski.

The first Earth Day was celebrated nationwide in 1970. The Rebirth of Political Activism.

The Office of Residential Services, the Dean of Students Office, the Chemistry Department, the Pre-Parish Office, the Women’s Center, Office, the Development Office, and the Progressive Student Alliance were among the groups sponsoring Earth Day.

Bands Announced For Spring Weekend

by David Rahtinger
Tripod Staff Writer

Over the last three years, Trinity’s Spring Weekend has summoned some of the strangest pairings in rock music. The Smithereens and John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band, two bands with about as much in common as Barbara Streisand and Mountain, will be this year’s odd couple.

The shows will begin at 1 p.m. this coming Sunday Life Science Center Quad, as the culmination of Spring Weekend, 1987-style, sponsored by the Trinity College Activities Council.

While their styles vary, both bands have to struggle for many years to gain the attention of the major record companies.

The Smithereens, from New Jersey, will be returning to Trinity after playing in Hartford Hall three years ago. Since that day, life for the band has changed. Their 1986 Enigma Records release, Especially For You, has resulted in two successful singles, “Blood and Roses” and “Behind the Wall of Sleep.” The album was produced by Don Dixon, producer of REM’s first two albums.

“After their first album in 1985,” says Enigma spokesman Chris Watts, “those guys were literally from door to door to find places to play. Many record companies are kicking themselves for not having recognized their talent.”

The Smithereens are survivors of the New York psychedelic 60’s rock revival. Their intelligent lyrics and catchy melodies turned their New York City area cult following into a national radio audience.

The Smithereens will appear first, as the bill, then they are off to Wallingford, CT for another show that evening.

Don’t miss the Smithereens this Sunday!

A Flawed Policy

"I just don’t think it’s a good idea for freshmen to be housed in High Rise."

"What you mean is that you don’t think they deserve those rooms. You think upperclassmen have some God-given right to the best rooms on campus."

"No way. My argument is not a rationalization based on self-interest. I don’t think it’s in freshmen’s best interests to live in a dorm like High Rise which has little or no hall life. When I was a freshman, I lived in North Campus and loved it."

"Yes, but I think integrating freshmen and upperclassmen into the same dorms is to the benefit of freshmen. Exclusively freshman dorms only serve to further sever them from the rest of the student body."

"I’m not challenging the integration policy. It works great in dorms like Jarvis which have a hall life, but High Rise doesn’t have one. They’re even more isolated there than they are in North Campus."

And that’s the final word on this debate, which was taken up with renewed vigor in the aftermath of the first session of the housing lottery last Tuesday. Should freshmen be housed in upperclassman dorms? Absolutely not. Should freshmen be housed in High Rise? Absolutely not.

The current housing policy is a good one—at least in spirit. It is based on a very sound supposition: that freshmen stand to gain from close contact with upperclassmen. And for the most part, it works. But in certain dorms, like High Rise, Boardwalk, Park Place—the policy is self-defeating.

Yes, freshmen benefit from close interaction with upperclassmen; but they also benefit from a support network of classmates in Jarvis, Jackson, Wheaton, etc., freshmen have both. In High Rise, they have neither.

Put frankly, the problem is that most upperclassmen choose High Rise to get away from the sense of community that characterizes other dormitories. They’ve already made plenty of friends and, as a result, they aren’t actively looking to cultivate close friendships the way freshmen are.

Many freshmen presently living in High Rise have discovered this the hard way. They have had a more difficult time socially than their counterparts in lively dorms. Sure, they love their rooms (Who wouldn’t?), but the blessing is most certainly a mixed one.

The school should reconsider allotting High Rise rooms for incoming freshmen. Not because it does a disservice to upperclassmen, but rather because it does a disservice to those who it is designed to serve.

Environmentalism Begins at Home

To the Editors:

Burt Week is upon us again and this year’s topic on campus will be toxic waste. That’s the stuff we all want dumped over there. However, small isolated (I) events on campus lead us to a version of an old admonition, “Environmentalism begins at home.” I write about the attitude of some Trinity students that center on selfish behavior which impacts on others.

Item: This week away of our beautiful shrubs were in bloom. It made me feel like an old soldier to be told a Trinity student should not pick the blooms. "That I was only..." Multiply each “but I was only” by 1500 students. Environmentalism begins at home.

Item: We’ve had a lot of rain. How much intelligence does it take to realize that if you play rugby on fields in their current condition they will be wrecked? Do you think Trinity students care that all the rain is hitting our field? Apparently it’s, let me have my say here, those need to care about the field. Environmentalism begins at home.

Item: Who do you think has to clean up after using the showers to remove all the mud? After tracking half the field through the locker room, who do you think cleans up? Hey, not my problem. Why not use your apartment shower and living room next time?

Toxic waste? Well no, but the attitude is exactly different. All of these incidents I leave out mud blasting from dorms, litter in Mother, boorish behavior at parties and sports events represent a self-centered, mindless, me-first attitude where concern for one’s colleagues, or for those who clean up after us is missing. Let us hope none of these students inherit a toxic waste dump.

Sincerely,

Professor Andrew J. Gold

On Xenophobia and Irrationality

To the Editors:

Recognizing a ready source of culture right here in Hartford, A.E.I.A. and the International Club sponsored a group of Latinx dancers as entertainment at last Saturday’s International Food Fest. The dancers were all girls and women, who, as a result, the presence of neighborhood children will not be regarded as so threatening.

I was very surprised when two Trinity Security guards came in response to a report of “suspicious persons” made by a dorm resident.

To The Editors:

I appreciated your front-page story of April 11 about the appointment of Jane Hurwitz Nadel to teach anthropology at the College. However, the piece contained several inaccurate or misleading statements that should be set right.

First, the headline read, “Anthropology Now a Major.” Not so. Trinity is about to institute a program of interdisciplinary minors, and Professor Nadel expects to contribute courses to one or more of these. But there will be no majors in a single discipline, whether anthropology, history, physics or what have you.

Secondly, the article erroneously reported that I had said that “the purpose of the program is to make anthropology more interdisciplinary.” What I actually said was that anthropology has important implications for a number of other disciplines and that we therefore anticipate that there will be fruitful collaborations between Professor Nadel and colleagues in a variety of humanities and social science fields.

Finally, the reporter quoted me as saying that after the initial four years of Professor Nadel’s appointment, we would have to decide whether “to dump the program.” I did not use that phrase, which is rhetorically inappropriate and misleading in its connotations, and your reporter was mistaken in attributing it to me in a direct quotation.

Sincerely,

J. Ronald Spencer Associate Academic Dean

To the Editors:

If you attended the International Food Festival held last Saturday night in the upper Dining Hall, then you probably remember the group of two or three beautiful women on Stage. These women were girls between the ages of 7 and 14. Personally, I think they were there to be used as an addres- sing the reactions of those in attend- ance. I do not agree with this, so I very much did not agree with me.

I was very glad to have seen the group of dancers practice three times during the week (each of them). I found them quite amusing, but the Jackson-Smith bridge.) As a group leader, I am quite certain that they are quite friendly and lovable. They are not "stupid-looking". Yes, the color of their skin was not white and they were not Trinity students, but I would never suspect that they could ever pose any threat to Trinity students or property.

In response to a sexual assault incident that occurred in North Campus, which took place early last Saturday morning around 3:00 A.M., there was a Se- curity Alert posted that recom- mended that we "report suspicious-looking individuals..." These young girls certainly were not committing crimes in their potraits and their size alone couldn't scare any- one who was over three feet tall. Fear is an emotion that may lead people to do some very irrational responses, and I believe the report of this group of girls to Secu- rity is beyond irrational. I feel ad- amant about this simply because we are led to believe that every person who enters Trinity grounds must look like the rest of us in order that we may feel safe. I don't have white skin and now and this is something that I should just understand.
Pool Will Be Ready for the Fall Semester

by Gina Lotellier
Tripod Staff Writer

The Trowbridge Pool in Ferry Athletic Center is currently undergoing a series of major renovations to upgrade the pool itself and the surrounding gallery area. The renovation also includes necessary pool upkeep and maintenance.

The construction has been slowed somewhat by delays in the electrical rewiring of the pool area. According to Sin-Chin Chan, Director of Buildings and Grounds, "the company taking care of the general construction claims that they will start working again in next week because they have to wait for the electricians to finish their work."

Chan added that the two day delay in construction will not impede plans to complete the work by late June of this year.

Rick Hazelton, Director of Athletics, referred to the scheduled work as "maintenance and sprucing up."

"You have to remember that the pool is 60 years old. It needs new filters every ten years and every 5 to 10 years the pool must be drained to great the blue and paint the inside lines," he said.

Perhaps the greatest amount of work will involve the replacement of pipes around the pool. According to Hazelton, "the pipes were pregnant." A malfunction in the controls of the water pipes allowed hot water to rush into the pipes.

The extreme temperature caused the pipes to expand to the point where, "they could blow at any time," remarked Hazelton.

Chan added that this problem will be less likely in the future because of the new, heavy duty pipes the College will be installing.

The false ceiling over the pool is being removed, returning the ceiling to its original vaulted state.

The side walls of the gallery will be acoustically treated to prevent an undue rise in volume that will result from the removal of the ceiling.

Another project involves the replacement of the lead windows currently in use. The new windows will be more workable, allowing natural light to enter the gallery, and will not leak when it rains.

To facilitate easier access to the gallery by the pool deck, new stairs will be put in behind the blacktop. This will allow spectators to go straight to the pool deck without having to walk outside and lose the standings. A security provision will be added to ensure that areas can be blocked off if necessary.

The "sprucing up" portion of the work includes painting the pool facade, painting the pool base, adding indirect lighting and emergency lights, and fixing the pool work on the radiators. "This will make the pool and gallery area brighter, sharper and more useable," said Hazelton.

At this point in the renovation, it appears that the scheduled work will be completed well before the Fall '87 Water Polo and Swimming seasons begins. Future plans include the construction of a new and larger pool to be completed with funds raised in Phase II of the Capital Campaign.

Auxiliary Advisory Program to Expand

by Christine Hertig
Tripod Staff Writer

The Auxiliary Advisory Program, set up five years ago to raise the percentages of retention for minority and transfer students, is currently headed up by Assistant Dean of Students Choong Siu-Chim Chan. "I'm trying to keep track of all campus activity," Chan said. "We are providing a computer system to the Security Office to aid in deployment of security officers to pinpoint high-risk areas."

"One of my philosophies is not to make changes immediately," Chan said. "I want to interact with the community first. I want to see how students and security work together so we can use our resources the best way. I just need to find out the best systems for protecting this campus," he explained.

The program will be written into the handbook next year and there is a good response from those faculty asked to join the program as advisors next year.

This year there are approximately twenty students, all of whom are freshmen or transfer students, who are provided with a sort of safety net for the students. The students in the program are called in by their advisors just to talk, to build up a relationship, and make sure they are adjusting to college life.

"Many of the students are the first in their families to go or ever have the chance to go to college," Chan said. "Therefore we try to give them a sense of security." Dr. Robert Lindsey, a professor of Natural Philosophy and Physics, is the only professor who is an advisor this year.

Lindsey feels it is "important to set the students up with someone knowledgeable in their interest. Students need to reach out to people who can give them advice that could strengthen their academic performance."

"This program is an ideal idea," Chan said. "It will definitely get more wide spread utilization."

How stresses the sentiment. "I've gotten such great feedback, I am happy with the results," he said.

The Mount Holyoke College community is mourning the death of Michelle I. Cook '88, who died April 17 in an early morning car accident involving three Mount Holyoke students.

At 12:30 a.m. on April 17, Cook was walking when she was struck from behind by a car allegedly driven by Colleen Manning '88. The car ran off the road hitting Cook.

The three students were returning from a local bar.

Cook died two hours later at Holyoke Hospital from injuries sustained in the accident.

Manning, a Student Assistant at Mount Holyoke, was arrested at Hampden County District Court on charges of vehicular homicide while under the influence, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident, and driving to endanger. Manning pleaded "not guilty" and returned home to await the pretrial hearing scheduled May 1.

Cook was a psychology education major who rode horses and was at the regional horse show at UCONN the following day.

Seven students and one administrator attended the funeral in Northampton, Massachusetts, April 20. A memorial service was held at the college on April 24.

Band have taken a different truck to form.

Beaver Brown formed thirteen years ago in Narragansett, RI, outside of Providence following a great out of public appeal throughout the New England bar scene.

"For a long time, we just went up and down the east coast playing night after night," said the singer Cafferty.

But the break for the band came in 1984, when they were chosen to appear in the movie, Eddie and the Cruisers, a cinematic biography that produced a hit for the band.

"On The Dark Side", a song whose similarities to Bruce Springsteen makes almost every Bruce fan cringe, eventually became a platinum record (one million albums sold). By the end of 1984, Cafferty and the band had a hit record and a major recording contract with Scotti Brothers records, distributed by CBS records. Beaver Brown's 1985 follow-up, "Tough All Over" is their current project.

Cafferty considers this album to be rooted in American rock and roll, and not a political statement.

"Each song, Cafferty decided, could be a different voice telling a story about people living in America today," said their press release.

"One has to wonder: Do you think Cafferty is trying to continue this in his record plot?"

Nonetheless, Beaver Brown's immense popularity in New England which keeps people dancing throughout their afternoons and sometimes into the night is now gone when Beaver Brown comes back for an encore.

Maybe next year Trinity will have the Grateful Dead and the Grateful Brown to continue this tradition of weird match-ups.

Beastie Boys to continue this tradition of weird match-ups when Beaver Brown comes back to Trinity.

In the past three weeks, three Trinity Students delivered their Thesis for Academic Fellowship (THAFF) reports to the college community in informal presentations.

THAFF is a "college-wide program which provides a select few students per year the opportunity to experience an extended living experience in foreign or domestic areas of the world. Within a year, participants must make a presentation of their research.

The purpose of THAFF is fourfold: to help recipients understand the different problems associated with hunger; to acquaint students with the relief organizations through participation; to give recipients an opportunity to study the culture of a people by encouraging them to live in the chosen country; and to give them the opportunity to share their experiences with the Trinity community.

A committee nominates candidates to receive the fellowship and submits its recommendations to the President of the college for final approval.

In exchange for the payment of transportation and living expenses, the college provides full tuition for the semester in which the research is being conducted.

The first speaker, Roshan K. Mathew '88, conducted a study in his home state of Kerala, the most massively populated in India. He presented in the focus group of about 100 families, "The deforestation problem is a mother-in-law, and they become more respected as more sons are born."

"Baby girls are seen to be evidence of sin. Michele are often unpaid when the child is a girl. There have been instances of female infanticide. When a family is impoverished, less money and food is reserved for the girls, and it is not unusual for several children to die. The parents will just have more babies born in a hospital. The study is entirely based upon that assumption."

Jeff Moffic '88 spoke on "Decrease in Nepal: A Socio-economic Problem" on April 16. He studied under the organization called United Mission to Nepal (UMN).

"The deforestation problem is growing to a critical level, although there is not as much cropland as there is thought there would be," said Mathew. "The population is growing at 2.6% each year. It now stands at 15 million, and

"People must feed their animals, and so they let them graze. The animals eat the plants because they taste the best. The people then chop the wood for fuel."

Moffic has proposed several solutions to this problem. Workers could collect fodder from older trees to feed the animals, but that would take hours of manual labor. Another possibility would be to plant nurseries on the hillsides in order to keep animals away. The problem, according to Moffic, is that the hillsides are far away and human labor is too expensive for the mountainous terrain.

"Another problem is that the farmers don't know the probability of burning their crops. It is to be used only, so it's free to go there style too motivated to do things."

Another government was not helpful.

Nepal is set up as a sort of medieval feudal society with a king as the lord. He is a very rich man.

Despite this, the Nepali people are receptive to America because the country has never been colonized like India."

Jody Rolnick '87 talked on "Women in India: Implications of Acquiescence" last Wednesday April 28 in the Faculty Lounge.

Her main observation was that women in India are forced to conform to the roles dictated to them by male society. 96% of the women marry and are responsible for being a housewife, washer, collector, cleaner, etcetera. They are expected to care for segments to children and to be angry at patients and calm, they are not allowed to

Washington Protests: A Change In The Wind

by Mark Semmoura
World Outlook Staff

Last weekend I had the opportunity to attend a rally of student protesters in Central Africa in support of a liberation movement and their own local electoral reform movement. The rally was held on the steps of the United States Capitol and was attended by thousands of protesters from throughout the United States. The protesters were calling for an end to the United States' involvement in Central Africa and demanding that the United States withdraw its military from the region.

Several prominent individuals, including Speaker of the House Tom Foley, were in attendance to show their support for the protesters. The rally was also attended by members of Congress, who were there to show their solidarity with the protesters and to call for an end to the United States' involvement in Central Africa.

The rally was a powerful demonstration of the growing movement for peace and justice in Central Africa. The protesters were united in their desire to see an end to the United States' involvement in the region and to support the movement for peace and justice in Central Africa.

Human Rights Abuses of Sandinistas

by John Sinkins
World Outlook Staff

Now that Trinity College has been lucky enough to have been granted by the presidency of an American college that has just been pressured into giving up control of its student body, it might be a good idea to write an article about human rights. So let's take a look at human rights in, well, how about in Nicaragua.

Most of the data for this article comes from a publication by the State Department, entitled "Human Rights in Nicaragua under the Sandinistas." The document was published in December of last year and is publication number 969 if anyone is interested in looking at the original source.

In 1979 the Sandinista-led revolution overthrew the Somoza regime in Nicaragua. The Sandinistas argued that any attempt to crush all groups that oppose the Marxist-Leninist system, to suppress political parties, the churches, labor unions, human rights organizations, the press, or to set up new governments was a violation of human rights.

The Sandinistas have been criticized for their human rights abuses, which include torture, arbitrary detention, mob violence, and censorship. The victims are the people of Nicaragua, those who in the past have organized, resisted, and demonstrated in defense of their human rights.

Since 1981 the government of Nicaragua has murdered thousands of political opponents through summary executions, renamed "special measures." Further, the government holds between 7,500 and 10,000 political prisoners, many of whom are subjected to physical and mental abuse while being held incommunicado in secret police prisons.

The Sandinista government has attempted to crush all groups that oppose the Marxist-Leninist system, including the church, democratic parties, the private sector, and independent labor organizations.

As far as freedom of the press goes, all television stations, most radio stations, and both newspapers are directly controlled by the government. The only opposition newspaper, "La Prensa," was temporarily ordered closed, after operating under strict censorship.

On October 10, 1986, the State of Emergency was expanded to include banning the Catholic news-letter, closing the Catholic radio, occupying the offices of the church's social service agency and human rights commission. The government went as far as to arrest and interrogate many Catholic and human rights leaders.

On this date, the Permanent Commission on Human Rights, which investigated many of the Sandinista abuses, was ordered to submit all its communications, letters, and special reports to prior government censorship.

The Sandinista argument that any abuse they commit are the result of mounting armed resistance. However, the facts speak for themselves: the pattern of Sandinista repression began long before any significant armed opposition arose. The record shows that Sandinista violations of human rights are a primary cause of, not a result of, the resistance to their regime, not a re-enforcement but a reason why the resistance continues.

On July 19, 1979 Nicaragua celebrated, for they believed they had lived to see an end to oppression in Nicaragua. Those Nicaraguans, the pattern of Sandinistas repression began long before any significant armed opposition arose. The record shows that Sandinista violations of human rights are a primary cause of, not a result of, the resistance to their regime, not a reinforcement but a reason why the resistance continues.

Firebugs and Fury of Philip Hotz
Take Goodwin Stage Spring Weekend

by Mary K. Bray
Arts Staff Writer

Start of Spring Weekend in Goodwin Theatre ... and then hit the party! The Theatre and Dance Department will present two comedies, The Great Fury of Philip Hotz and Firebugs, written by Swiss playwright Max Pinch in the 1890's. Productions are Thursday night, April 30 through Saturday, May 2. The three evening performances are at 8 p.m. and an additional Friday afternoon performance is at 4 p.m. Director Arthur Feinsod said of the plays, "There's lots to laugh at and have fun with, but they also convey serious things to think about."

Both plays were cast in December through the Theatre 306 courses on acting styles, taught by Feinsod. Students in Dance 106 are combined in the cast of Firebugs, playing the chorus of firemen. Avis Fletcher is the chorus leader. Nusha Martynuk of the department experiment of the theatre and all chorus parts in Firebugs. Feinsod leader. Nusha Martynuk of the department. 'Eisenring, but he is unable to get friends of Schmidtz and realizes the motives of Schmidtz and a maid, who live luxuriously in a house and the whole town on fire.'

The cast consists of Roberto Silvestres as Biedermann, Judi Mud- docks as his wife, Ethel, Ivanka McBrice as Anna, the maid; Doug McCabe and Tony Karanzay play the "firebugs." Production Stage Manager is Amy McPherson, who is of Firebugs, saying there is "lots of action, sound, light and set pieces."

Feinsod described Firebugs, as an "absurdist comedy with farcical elements." It is a "metaphor for the many kinds of invasions in our lives, political and psychological, that we choose to ignore on a daily basis." The play contains political overtones of fascism and communism, and suggests that invasions of politicians and the stockpiling of nuclear weapons cannot be ignored. Particular actions of Biedermann produce a psychological trauma within him which communicates the idea that ignoring guilt and responsibility will ultimately destroy the individual. It is important to see danger and act on it decisively, "before it insidiously slips in and takes you over," said Feinsod.

Feinsod said it has been "an exciting challenge to define the right way to combine comedy and anxiety. Stylistically, it is a very tricky play." Come to a Reading of Short Fiction
by J. C. Summeford

Last Wednesday evening, Paul Matisse lectured to a large audi- ence at McCook Auditorium on Marcel Duchamp, his stepfather. Paul Matisse, grandson of Henri Matisse, is an accomplished artist and writer who resides in a 19th century church in Covent, Massa- chusetts.

Paul Matisse's talk, entitled More Nonsense on Duchamp, sponsored by the Dance/Art and Fine Arts Departments, focused on the personal life and work of Marcel Duchamp rather than his career as an artist. Marcel Duchamp (1887-1968) was an important 20th century visual artist, most known for his painting "Nude Descending a Staircase," (1912) and his contribution to the movement called Dadaism.

Paul Matisse described Duchamp as always being light, cheerful, and not critical of any- one. Duchamp's life was filled with humorous and satirical episodes, "Anyway he always seems to be a bit of the others than die." Duchamp possessed the admirable trait of being non-judgemental. He was against beliefs of any kind and separated from judgement. He treasured freedom and was against the set of rules because it recorded taking sides. A large part of Du- champ's life was devoted to chess. He played the game "in a humorous and farcical manner." He appreciated its sensitivity of form, and loved the intellectual movement of the game.

His art has been described as being "subject to a thousand inter- pretations." Duchamp actually wanted this way, and he would defend it as not meaning anything, as nonsense. Duchamp argued, "Nonsense has a right to live. Nonsense and sense are two aspects of the same thing."

Paul Matisse's lecture was enjoyable and well received by the enthusiastic audience. He presented Duchamp in a personal and humorous way. His life's work was quite close to the artist could have done. Matisse said, "It's knowing that people like one, that makes life worth while."

A Case Of Cave Ennui

by Kasia Daly
Tripod Columnist

I have been sitting in front of a notebook writing awful Tripod columns for hours. I never get beyond the moderately funny sentence, "Religion is probably an inappropriate topic for this column, but what the hell." The point is that I can't figure out what to say.

I usually spend a considerable amount of time choosing the philosophic breeze of dealing with existential crises. I haven't done that this semester — I don't have any discussion classes, and I don't go to drunken parties. I spend most of my life in the Cave ceiling glasses and talking about current events. I spend enough time there to have a memorial plaque. I call it "Cave from hell." "Cave from hell." "Would you believe it!?" I've studied too much mysticism, so when anyone asks me what I really think, I mutter, "incredible."

I had planned to write this article on religion because I figured that if no one wanted to talk with me about religion (if I'm too much of an incoherent slob to speak) at least I could write my little heart out. No dice. It's near the Easter/Passover season and I didn't want to offend anyone. That's right, a cop-out. I haven't think or react. Some people say that if no one wanted to talk with me about religion (or if I'm too incoherent), I should get drunk more often and see what happens. Me? I've just sat there, not thinking, not believing, not even touch a topic that I'm really interested in. In the past few days I've just sat there, not thinking, throwing in appropriate phrases when absolutely necessary: "don't change." "Cave from hell." "I never dreamed," says Rutgers University student Gary Gordon, "when I signed on as waiter with a London caterer, that I would be serving wine to the Queen of England at the royal wedding of Andrew and Sarah."

While not every student in the Work Abroad Program of the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE), the largest student exchange organization in the U.S., can expect to work at Buckingham Palace, most participants discover that finding a job abroad is no more difficult than at home.

Now in its eighteenth year, the Work Abroad Program is the only one of its kind. By cutting through red tape it helps thousands of students obtain permission for temporary work in Britain, Ireland, France, Germany, New Zealand and Costa Rica.

Through services provided by the Council and its cooperating organizations in each country, most participants secure work within days of arrival, earning enough to cover room and board as well as a vacation trip once they stop working and traveling abroad. Me? I've got 53 cents and that old Cave ennui...
Now there's more than one way to get through college.

To get ahead in college, it helps if you choose a brilliant roommate. Like a Macintosh personal computer. And now there are two models to choose from.

The Macintosh Plus, which comes with one 800K disk drive and a full megabyte of memory (expandable to four).

And the new Macintosh SE, which comes with either two built-in 800K drives, or one drive and an internal 20-megabyte hard disk. As well as a choice of two new keyboards.

Inside, the SE also has an expansion slot, so you can add a card that lets you share information over a campus-wide network. Or another card that lets you run MS-DOS programs.

Whichever Macintosh you choose, you can use the latest, most advanced software. And that means you'll be able to work faster, better and smarter.

No two ways about it.

The power to be your best.

In My Opinion
by Steve Brauer

Well Today is Draft Day in the NFL, and teams all over the league are once again deciding their future. We already know the first pick - Vinny Testaverde has been signed, sealed, and delivered to Tampa Bay. In my mind, the best player this year's crop is the man who will be chosen most likely second. Cornelius Bennett will be an immediate impact player in the league - and we all know that that's the outsiderr nowadays. This guy will be everything that LT has been for the Giants.

And I think that the recent success of the Giants and the Bears has shown that it is defense which wins championships. The last two champions have been teams which are focused around their defense. They rely on the defense to produce turnovers, to give the offense good field position, and even to score points. And it is a pressure defense which is needed for this - hence we have the trend of running alot of men at the quarterback. Linebacks have become simply upright downlinemen. Players like Bennett fit right into this scheme - fast, agile, and strong linebackers.

And cornerbacks like Rod Woodson of Purdue, who can cover receivers man-to-man are especially valuable. The football season is still a couple of months away. Hope of course is going strong. Who will be the next Knick head coach and G.M? Well, my inside sources from Providence inform me that Rick Pitino will be moving on to the big leagues. Supposedly, all that was needed was for Scotty Stirling to be baggage from his job as G.M. I guess they didn't get along when Rick was assisting Hubie Brown a couple of years ago. But Rick will not be able to turn down the money that he'll be offered. I guess he's interested in staying with the Friars, but this is simply too good an opportunity. The Knicks will be tough next year if they can get a guard - a front line!

Enough of those cold weather sports. Let's talk baseball. You know, not even Tom Treblehorn thought the Brewers could do what they've done. He didn't think that their young players would produce this quickly, and he was a bit worried about his starting pitching. Unbelievable. But the Yankees are hanging tough. They look good. A Sox fan like myself doesn't like to see them get out to a good start because they're usually tough in the end. The Sox will be just fine if they can just get their starting pitching together.

I'd also be a Mets hater. St. Louis will be tough, and Philly will be there. I think Kansas City is the team to beat in the West in the A.L. It's a real good team for them to have Bret Saberhagen start out 3-0. He's back and he looks great. And San Francisco is my team out West in the N.L. I have always just kind of liked them, and now they have the pitching and experience to win. Hopefully the veterans will produce.

And yes, by the way, I am going to pick the Sox. I realize I'm disgustingly biased towards Boston teams - this is my second pick in two weeks of a Boston team winning it all - but you either love them or leave them. Well that's for this week. Keep up the softball practice.

TONIGHT IS $3 PITCHER NIGHT AT THE VIEW
Women’s Lacrosse Remain Undefeated

by Diane Christie
Tripod Staff Writer

The women’s lacrosse team had three big wins this past week to up their record to 8-6. The week began on Monday when the Lady Bants traveled to New London to face Coast College. Although Coast had not had a particularly strong season this spring, they always manage to live up to their competitive reputation.

In the first half, Trinity found out quickly this game was not going to be as easy to dominate as their last few games. Conn’s defense used a very tight zone around the crease, which effectively cut down a good many of trio’s shots. After having forced several turnovers, the Camels established a strong mid-field passing game, allowing them many attacking opportunities. Fortunately, Trin’s relentless man-to-man defense kept these efforts stifled.

As coach Robin Sheppard had predicted, but had yet to develop a strong hold on the game. As coach Robin Shepard pointed out, Trinity dominated this aspect of the game. The ball hogging, run some plays, and watched Conn’s weaknesses begin to appear. The final, though, was the closest the Lady Bants have had all season, 5-5.

The second game of the week was against Williams on Trinity’s home ground Wednesday. The strongest aspect of Williams’ game was their man-to-man defense, which cut down the normally strong scorers, junior Ellie Pierce and senior Gimmy Vogel. If it was not for the equally powerful Trinity defense, led by senior Nat Perkinson, the offense would have had a frustratingly low scoring day.

As it was, Trinity kept control of the center draws, with the help of junior Jen Iverson and senior Betty Jonas. This gave the team plenty of scoring opportunities. They scored three goals, as opposed to Williams’ three.

Finally, the week culminated in a 16-1 triumph over Amherst on Saturday. This win was a big one for the Lady Bants because it was the perfect revenge for last year’s close loss to Amherst. It was also Trinity’s last competition with a host of new players, and it got us a little more competitive reputation.

Overall, Trinity won five games this past week, including the three big wins this past weekend. The women were more successful, edging Wesleyan by 6. In a bit of a surprise situation that occurred because of the wrong line-up was given to the women, pitcher Dave Federman was forced to take the mound without warning. The one batter he pitched to walked and eventually scored, providing a margin Trinity would not overcome. Port was credited with the loss, although he faced only one batter. It was a close game until the final innings, when back-to-back Wesleyan runs put the game effectively out of reach. Paul Stanton pitched well in the game.

On Wednesday, Division II Springfield played host to the Bants. Dave Federman started the game and hurled well, but faced the offensive support necessary in getting a win. Freshman JP Marra accounted for both of Trinity’s runs, amassing a triple in the 2nd inning. Freshman Ron Grassie and senior Matt Miller looked sharp at 2nd and 3rd base respectively, in the 8-2 loss.

Thursday’s game against Tufts was one where the Bants were forced to work hard with any of their offensive support necessary in getting a win. Freshman JP Marra had a sharp showing against the Bants. Although he did not have the offensive support necessary in getting a win, Dave Federman continued to throw well, as did the entire team. The final score was 9-2, with Paul Stanton the pitcher of record.

Saturday, the Bants travelled to Nichols for a doubleheader. Game one was all Nichols, as a cluster of walks and a bases clearing double contributed to 6 runs scored. The final score was 9-2, with Paul Stanton the pitcher of record. In game two, Trinity again lost, 6-4, but all six of Nichols’ runs were unearned. Dave Federman was credited with the loss, though his complete game performance was a jewel to watch. Chris Brown played well at second, filling in for Frank Bonomo. Dave Sturden was the offensive star for the Bants.

Three of Trinity’s remaining games are at home, as the Bants travelled to Clark yesterday. They play host to Bowdoin on Friday and get Saturday for a doubleheader before finishing up the next week.

Baseball Team Stumbles On The Road

by Jeff Proulx

Trinity baseball took to the road for 4 of its 5 games last week, winning its only home game against Tufts on Thursday. After 18 games, the team’s record stands at 5-10.

Monday, the Bants took on host home team Wesleyan. In a bit of a surprise situation that occurred because of the wrong line-up was given to the umpires, pitcher Dave Federman was forced to take the mound without warning. The one batter he pitched to walked and eventually scored, providing a margin Trinity would not overcome. Port was credited with the loss, although he faced only one batter. Women’s Lacrosse Team Crushed Amherst 16-1

The women’s lacrosse team crushed Amherst 16-1, scoring from 3rd. As he raced home, the Tufts catcher stood in his way. Bowing over the catcher, VanderVeldes missed the plate. As he went back to tag the plate, the Tufts pitcher attempted to tag him. Though he had obviously scored the winning run, the pitcher made a violent cheap shot tag.

In retaliation, VanderVeldes clocked his foe in the face with his helmet and became entangled with the catcher. The Tufts’ reach out and struck John Montgomery in the face, who was out congratulating VanderVeldes for winning the game. Things degenerated from there, with the Tufts catcher emerging with a severely bloodied nose. According to one observer, Trinity won the fight as well as the game.

Saturday, the Bants travelled to Nichols for a doubleheader. Game one was all Nichols, as a cluster of walks and a bases clearing double contributed to 6 runs scored. The final score was 9-2, with Paul Stanton the pitcher of record. In game two, Trinity again lost, 6-4, but all six of Nichols’ runs were unearned.
