Tolstaia Assesses Literary Freedoms

By Jennifer Gura - News Staff Writer

The Area Studies department nominated a dozen by Tatiana Tolstaia, a Soviet writer, to the Watson committee. A grant of $40,000 would be awarded to Tolstaia, who is currently traveling in Russia. She is the only candidate to pursue a post-graduate Watson fellowship. The committee is to meet on November 8 to discuss the selection of candidates. Tolstaia is known for her work on Soviet literature, and her nomination is seen as a recognition of her contributions to the field.

"Every year, Trinity College has the honor of nominating four graduating seniors from the Thomas J. Watson Fellowship program. This year, Vito Kape, Mende Reaves, Marianne Carabin, and Tony Clancy have been nominated by Associate Dean of the College for their work in the Watson committee. A grant of $15,000 is given to each of the 150 nominees to pursue a postgraduate year of independent study and travel abroad.

Each of the Trinity candidates has proposed a unique project of personal interest. Vito Kape hopes to study comparative health systems in Great Britain, Italy, and Japan. Mende Reaves, Marianne Carabin, and Tony Clancy have been nominated by Associate Dean of the College for their work in the Watson committee. Changes Planned for Cave

By Jane Reynolds - News Staff Writer

Last week plans were finally released for the renovation of the Massey's Cave. The college will be changing the floor covering in the Cave and the adjoining game room, and reupholstering the walls in the Cave's dining area.

"The Cave is, in essence, a studio space and the carpeting seems to be the most in terms of representation," noted Director of Vito Kape. "Massey's Cave AnnGurley. Discussions were held between Gurley and various students, staff, and administrators in order to refine the Cave's uses and the ways it might be decorated. "Most students input suggests that they want the Cave to be more of a lounge area," Gurley continued.

Architect Tai Soo Kim and interior designer Karen Archer, both of Tai Soo Kim's firm, were consulted for the renovation. Both have been meeting with representatives of Trinity for the past eight months to discuss renovations which include lighting, minor structural and interior design changes. Because of financial restrictions the College will only be replacing the carpet and wall coverings at this time.

"We discussed ceramic tile for the entire floor surface which would be very easy to maintain but very difficult acoustically," said Gurley. "The architect suggested a combination of ceramic tiles and carpeting, which would still make the job of cleaning exist for Buildings and Grounds. However, the final decision was to cover the floor with a carpet in some areas and carpet tiles in others."

Minorities' Orientation: Not A Divisive Influence

To the Editor:

I am offended by Scott Hackett's recent article against the Minorities' Orientation. It is my impression that the Minorities' Orientation serves as a gathering place for students who otherwise would not have met. It is a great opportunity for nonminority students to learn about each other and to be exposed to other viewpoints. The tripods are not only annoying but also a living nuisance. I wish that Trinity would do something about maintaining the campus with respect.

The Tripod's Tone Is "Disturbing"

To the Editor:

As a professor, I am deeply disturbed by many of the sentiments expressed recently in the pages of the Tripod. I believe that the Minorities' Orientation is one issue "homophobes" to arms with their friends and families. It is my impression that the Minorities' Orientation serves as a gathering place for students who otherwise would not have met. It is a great opportunity for nonminority students to learn about each other and to be exposed to other viewpoints. The tripods are not only annoying but also a living nuisance. I wish that Trinity would do something about maintaining the campus with respect.

Guardo's Response

To the Editor:

Mr. Hackett's article already; I don't think he would have had at least considered the minority students on campus who are interested in the spiritual, social, and political issues of his friend. There are examples of thoughtless, irresponsible, intolerant positions.

I teach because I believe that students can learn to think beyond the limitations of their upbringing and to open their minds to new ideas, and eager to grapple with them. We have seen no work such as Guardo's in this area, yet students do.

The reception your paper has given to National Conference of Christians and Jews at Trinity is one of the most unoriginal and fearful letters. Surely, they have not had the chance of learning how to think critically, how does a person think critically? I think that the tripods are not only annoying but also a living nuisance. I wish that Trinity would do something about maintaining the campus with respect.

Freshman Orientation Program Explained

To the Editor,

We feel that we must re-scribe to certain segments of Scott problème's editorial (Letter to the Editor—above) in the November 8th Trident. As past participants of the Black, Hispanic, and Asian Freshman Orientation, we must explain Mr. Maddux and others as to the point of this statement.

The Black, Hispanic, and Asian Orientation program is not openly offensive. We feel that Mr. Maddux and his friends may believe for a program "taught individuals" to satirical (to "teach") that the races are different. It is a way for minorities for allow minorities to examine what they perceive as prejudice through consciousness and films. It is not required of any student and just designed for open discussion of minorities in Trinity. It is the purpose of this program to introduce them to the concepts of prejudice and differential treatment. They may be or may not be present at this presentation.
Yet, they may experience it in their college years, in their future jobs, or anywhere. The orientation is structured to make them aware of this, and to try and provide them with the tools needed to avoid such prejudice.

The teachers in this world do not "tell as the races are different," this is obvious in any human being able to see. The problem, however, unlike when people treat race for race different because of racial stereotyping shows no treatment, and this is what education seeks to correct. Perhaps someone in the future will succeed. However, until they do, the Black, Hispanic, and Asian Ori-estation is a way in which individuals can attempt to understand why they are sometimes treated differently because of racial stereotypes.

Dear Mr. Guardo,

Thanks for making our day! Your letter in the Trident was not only great fun to read but also provided a tremendous service to Trinity's community. By coming out with your position, you set the stage for our students to think about their own beliefs and how they can change their perspective. I believe that this is very important because it allows students to reflect on their own experiences and consider how they can contribute to a more inclusive environment.

Sincerely,

Kate Reavey ’89

Homophobia Letter Was Beneficial

Upon reading your letter it became apparent that you have some knowledge in the field of anti-homophobia. Many people know that they are uncomfortable with these individuals as a whole, but many others are not aware of the specific issues that surround them.

Novice Crew Has A Successful Fall

To the Editor,

In the November issue of the Trident, there is an article on the novice crew team titled “Crew Off to a Strong Start.” As members of the team, we would like to mention that we did receive recognition for our successful performance in the Halifax Invitational Regatta.

Although we are only newcomers to the novice team, we have worked long and hard to prepare for the challenges ahead. This past fall, we had eight schools competing. Despite the tough competition, we made the most of our opportunities and achieved success.

Sincerely,

David M. Butts
Dean of Admissions and Financial A boat management team worked to ensure a successful experience for all involved. Our team was organized and prepared for any challenges that we may have faced. We tried to maintain a positive attitude and focus on our performance.

A boat was ready to sail in the first race of the season. The crew members were proud and excited to be a part of this effort. We have planned and trained for many months, and were ready to give our best performance.

At the end of the season, we saw the hard work pay off. We had a great season and achieved our goals. We thank all those who supported us an our journey. We look forward to continuing our success in the future.

Sincerely,

DKE Fraternity Not Insured

The Delta Kappa Epsilon (DKE) fraternity at the University of Illinois has experienced several incidents this past academic year, yet the fraternity's insurance coverage has been a point of concern due to the lack of insurance. The fraternity members have expressed their distress over the situation, stating that the lack of insurance could lead to significant financial burdens in case of future incidents. The members have also highlighted the importance of insurance in providing peace of mind and protection against unforeseen events.

The incident that brought this issue to the forefront was the house fire that occurred in October, which led to discussions about the need for insurance. According to DKE president, the lack of insurance has been a significant concern for the fraternity members, who are worried about the potential financial impact of future incidents.

DKE Fraternity is one of the leading fraternities on campus, and its members are active in various campus events and organizations. Despite the concerns about insurance, the fraternity continues to thrive and engage in community service and academic activities. The members are hopeful that the fraternity will take the necessary steps to address the insurance issue and ensure the safety of its members and the community.

More about DKE Fraternity Not Insured can be found in the next issue of The Trinity Tripod.

Scandinavian Viking society in Great Britain involves a unique "hands-on" approach. As a Medieval Studies major, she hopes to study the archaeological excavations of Viking settlements and ships, as well as the subsequent rebuilding of the ships by archaeologists and ship builders. Eventually, she would like to understand what societal factors produced the most efficient sailing vessels in the medieval world.

Clawson proposes a further study of Nepali rural women after studying Nepali women last year on a THAPF scholarship. This time, she wants to examine the problems that arise when urban women work in development projects in rural settings. Clawson would then make a comparative study in Peru to examine similar problems in rural development projects there. Every year but one, one or more Watson nominees has been selected for a Watson Fellowship.

SGA Info Box

-Helen Dyer R.N., head of the Student Health Advisory Committee, would like to raise student awareness and is looking forward to any input students might have concerning the services available on Trinity campus. Beth Capaldi is the SGA representative to the committee. She can be reached at Box 4446.

-Any comments or concerns that students might have with the presidential search should be directed towards Kate Shriver, Box #1410. Regarding the election competition among Trinity, Wesleyan, and UConn, please inform SGA dorm reps whether or not you voted Nov. 8.

-Future discussions include a students bill of rights, class evaluations, and an honor code at Trinity.

NEXT MEETING: Dorm reps will be collecting toothpaste and soap to aid in the Hunger and Homlessness week.

UPenn Throws Toast, Not Bagels

(CPS) Students at University of Pennsylvania football games have won the right to throw toast, not bagels, from the stands. Security officials infuriated some Penn fans by confiscating toast from them at the Sept. 24 game at Franklin Field against Bucknell University. Penn students had been throwing toast from their seats onto the field when Penn's hand gets into a certain point of the song "Drink a Hallelujah.

The toast throwing began at a 1984 game, when the students decided to respond literally to a line in the song. "So here's a toast to dear old Penn," explained Steve Harbut, Penn's sports information director. "Like fans at the Rocky Horror Picture Show, the students decided to throw a piece of toast instead of raising their hands as if they held a glass," Harbut said.

After security officials took toast from some fans, students began writing protest letters, circulating a petition and even threatening to picket Penn President Sheldon Hackney with toast at future games. In response William Epstein, Hackney's assistant, finally announced in late October there had been a "communications failure. We have no intent to try to stop the toast tradition. We intended to stop people from bringing frozen bagels," Epstein said. Penn would let security officers take toast from some fans, students began writing protest letters, circulating a petition and even threatening to picket Penn President Sheldon Hackney with toast at future games. In response William Epstein, Hackney's assistant, finally announced in late October there had been a "communications failure. We have no intent to try to stop the toast tradition. We intended to stop people from bringing frozen bagels."

Bagels, he said, are heavier and could hurt people.

Harbut agreed, but added the ban should extend beyond bagels to large packages of bread. "We don't want anyone getting whacked with a whole bagel," he said. Epstein said Penn would let security officers at the games confiscate large and/or frozen bread products "at their own discretion" if they thought they might pose a safety hazard.

Who Exactly Are The Homeless Among Us?

By Steve Safran - Features Columnist

The second thing I would like to do this week is something I guess I am a bit jealous that I haven’t inspired during the past to write to the editor. I mean, what are writers supposed to do to create a community that gets people all rowed up and riled up? Well, here I sit...another week in front of a Mac trying to miss playwrights another article...so in that is in inspiring or motivating that people respond and, for the first time, have absolutely changed my perspective. Or better yet: “You are just right. Thank you, [Reviews for enlightening me. I am forever grateful to you; you have added a new dimension to my understanding of the bounty of all this praise. Naturally..."

But what is everyone is like in the time frame. Chances are none of us were the kind of kids who covered in corners, stood in shadows, or were terrified of being called on in class (except it was math). Chances are that most of us spent our afternoon recesses on the jungle gyms all across this “lender and gentler generation” hallmark at our schools. “WATCH ME WATCH ME ME!”

To the editor: How dare you print people’s opinions as if you think we are Russian? Certainly.

"Duke" Stays at Trinity, "Lloyd" Goes to Senate

— By Eric Hammarstrom — Special to the Tripod

George Bush won last Tuesday’s Presidential election by a landslide. On a global scale, the consequences are yet to be seen. However, the Bush victory directly affects the future of Trinity College. As a result of his defeat, Mass. Governor Michael Dukakis will not be leaving his position as Trinity’s Dean of Students. "Never one to accept defeat, the Dean will attempt to use Trinity College as a launching pad for the United States, and to prove that his programs would have been successful on the national level," he commented. "I want a better Trinity, a freer Trinity, a Trinity in which everyone can live a better life," he added.

The former presidential candidate will base College improvements on a desire for "cleaner water" on our campus. Saga Bob was noticeably pleased with the Dean’s remarks, noting the current liquid problems at our Marriott Dining Service.

Speaking in fluent Spanish, "Duke" Winer emphasized the importance of reaching out to the Appalachian region of Hartford, saying, "I’m on your side!"

The Duke plans to implement a "Five Year Plan" on Trinity’s campus within the founding of a College-AFL-CIO chapter. The main effect for his plan will be to reduce the number of homeless on Trinity’s campus, providing new and cheaper housing for students stuck in North Campus lounges.

In addressing the current "hot" issues at Trinity, the Dean noted the controversy embroiled in current issues of the Triods, "I am a liberal," he explained. "And I think Freedom of Speech and Freedom of the Press are crucial to the security of our nation... I mean our College."

On the subject of defense spending, "Duke" noted Trinity’s video security system as a budgetary "black hole," similar to Reagan’s "Star Wars" program.

The Duke plans to implement the all-important issue of Drugs at Trinity, noting that “students seem to be happy with the drugs they have on campus, and I don’t foresee any changes in our policy.” The Dean added that he would “never, ever, in my entire life, negotiate with Pontius, otherwise, I will run for a job in a white house."

The Dean touched on the issue of student freedom, "students seem to be happy with the drugs they have on campus, and I don’t foresee any changes in our policy."

After much research and field experimentation, I have reached the conclusion that men have taken over the women’s shoe and clothing industry in a last ditch effort to keep women in the home. No, I am not a radical feminist—I know that women are better than men. Just think about it, would a woman invent high heels? mini skirts? underwear bra? I don’t think so. My theory is that men decide what is in style and then they sit back in their classic, comfortable, baggy pants and loafers and contentedly laugh at women struggling with their \(\text{tan}^{\text{in}}} \) in pointed shoes and shiver around in their scary stories that you can’t even sit down in comfortably, all in the name of fashion. After all, whose toes are shaped in a perfect triangle at birth? They may look that way after the first hour of a spin class, but naturally.

Gosh, this concept has staggering consequences when coupled with Darwin’s theory of Natural Selection. If men think that high heels are as attractive as society might like us to believe that they are, then chances are that women who wear high heels most the days of the year. In order to do heels for anything more than a drunken stagger into real life examples. I was in someone on the Long Walk wearing green legwarmers with matching bows, but no tights.. To make a long story short, we eventually found them on the 16th, Portland, OR 97202.

Absolutely, incredibly high heels. Therefore, women with either or both of the above characteristics will be more attractive to men, thus more women will want to stay in the house, cook, and take care of the children. It then follows that if the mother wears high heels and the daughter recognizes the fact that Daddy finds this attractive (as kids tend to do) then little Lilli will be conditioned essentially from birth to wear heels. Also, since her mother possesses at least one of the required characteristics, it stands to reason that maybe, just maybe, little Lilli also possesses one of those "feminine" qualities.

This could have a staggering effect on the Women’s Men’s Rights movement. Just picture trying to get the Equal Rights Amendment passed in a world of Fifis. Besides the fact that the women in support of the Amendment would have to leave at least two homes (two in any semblance of snow on the ground) in order to get to the polls and still maintain that careful mincing walk that is vital to maintaining some sort of a center of gravity and any outward appearance of femininity while wearing high heels. Not to even mention the staggering day to day effects that this could have on the everyday lives of millions of women. Women would want to stay in the house, cook, and raise children. Talk about a return to the Stone Age...

Anyway, enough hypothesizing about the face of women, and one real life example. I was in Westmins Mall the other day, looking for one of the last existing instances of comfortable women’s attire—black cotton tights. No, I’m not kidding. Cotton tights are the only thing that can enable any one female to wear a skirt during the winter without getting hypothermia—if of course, if you prefer neon leg warmers... After searching the premises with my female creation, we reached the conclusion that hair bows can be found in the most bizarre shapes, sizes, and colors, but that something as simple as tights just wasn’t a priority of the fashions industry. The Dean was determined to not do anything anywhere else... and as a result were an essential part of the overall plan, we continued our quest.

In one store I actually asked a salesgirl/wench if she had any idea where tights could be found. She carefully surveyed my attire from my blue high-top sneakers all the way to my einkleless face, all the while cracking her grape Bubblegum gig, and scornfully tossed her carefully measured hair sending a cloud of designer imposeur perfume my way and replied...

"TIGHTS?"

"No, I was just asking if you knew where I could find a pair of super cool pants..." I was looking for a super cool pair of high-rected crispy hot dog pants like you’re wearing. "You, cotton tights..." Finally Miss Acid Wash answered my need for her lovely New York accout: "we only have tights in children’s sizes in the mall!". Okay fine, you do have neon yellow-green leggings with matching bows, but no tights... To make a long story short, we eventually found them

INVISIBLE IDEOLOGY: TEXT, SYLLABUS & CURRICULUM

Is there a hidden agenda in your studies? Who decides what is important and what is irrelevant in science, art, and the humanities? What invisible ideologies lurk behind the book lists of this college, this country, and this civilization?

The recent symposium on art, knowledge, and ideology explored the collision (and sometimes the unstated assumptions (often about gender, race or class) that structure contemporary scholarship and teaching - the politics lurking behind our daily intellectual and social life.

We invite all students and faculty to submit proposals for short papers or presentations on any aspect of invisible ideology. Please submit your ideas or outlines to Jan Cole, Dean of the Faculty, by Wednesday, November 30.

The Economics of Hunger Explored

by Jen Van Campen - Special to the Tripod

If the average person were asked, "Why are people hungry?" he or she might try to quote some source or recite some statistic, but will usually end up with the quick-fix answer: too many people and too little food. The truth is not so simple and this explanation oversimplifies the economic and political factors and diversifies attention from the real root causes of hunger.

Globally, the major causes of hunger are political, institutional and technological. Many developing nations are abandoning the traditional small family plots in favor of large plantations which produce cash crops, in order to pay off their debt. For example, the United States imports cash crops from 36 of the 40 poorest nations. The result is that there is less local production on small plots to provide food for the communuity. Farmers are forced to produce coffee, cotton, sugar or tobacco, not the food that their own people are starving for. Small farmers need access to credit in order to support or expand their production capabilities, yet banks are unwilling to loan money because small farmers are seen as a risk to the large agribusinesses. In market economies, food must be produced to make a profit, which means that many people who need it most. Market surplus is typically sent, not sold, overseas to the wealthy, not sent to the poor.

In the United States the hunger problem is a condition of poverty. Over 32 million Americans live below the poverty line. Since 1979, the number of Americans living in poverty has increased by 43%. In a nation with such tremendous wealth and technological advantages, checking that over 20 percent of all American children are poor in one city is one in every two black children under the age of six is poor.

The hunger problem has increased primarily because of economic factors and not in federal assistance programs. One economic factor which has significantly increased the numbers of the working poor is unemployment. It has increased from 2.7% in 1979 to 4.3% and has not decreased since 1979 even while actually indicating about 30% of its economic power since then. And although unemployment has decreased, a recent joint Economic Opportunity Commission study found that when annual wages are examined, 44% of the men increase in employment from 1979 to 1985 consisted of jobs paying less than $7,400 (in 1979 dollars). Not only the Reagan Administration has removed much of the funds which served as safety net for those at or below the poverty line. According to the Council on Budget and Priorities, government benefit programs now fill 10% of their previous proportion in the last 25 years. This is a significantly smaller proportion of families who are unable to pay out of poverty than they did in 1979.

When examining the hunger problem it is important to remember it is not the amount of resources the world possesses, but the way in which they are distributed that is creating the problem. One of the most particularly frightening distributional changes made by advanced nations is to increase military spending. National security is more than military strength. National security is health care, good education, jobs, adequate housing and enough food for every member of society. The health of a nation depends on the health of its people. To end the hunger problem here in the US and abroad their must be a global commitment to issuing the fundamental human right to life, health, the most basic being dependent on adequate nutrition.

Five Common Myths About Hunger Dispelled

--by Emily Blumenfeld - Special to the Tripod

The profound promise of our era is that for the first time we may have the technical capacity to free mankind from the scourge of hunger. There is an optimistic atmosphere of hope, an objective that within a decade no child will go to bed hungry and no family will worry about a meal on the table.

The good intentions, expressed by Henry Kissinger at the World Food Conference in 1973, are in stark contrast to the undeniable fact that 800 million people in this world have not enough to eat and do not have a good chance of getting it. In fact, the problem has worsened. Hunger has always been with us. We read about the existence of hunger in the newspaper, in novels, in the Bible. In Exodus the children of Israel were aided in their need of food by the angel of God. Today we try to help hungry children through national policies and international organizations. Although the problem has always existed and there have been attempts to eliminate it, why, then, does hunger continue to be a problem? Despite good intentions, I simply believe we have not improvised the efforts against malnutrition. Many agree that hunger is still a problem and that a problem that should be solved. Therefore, our goal in this article is to present some international organizations which have adversely affected the fight against hunger.

Hunger and Homelessness

Week: Nov. 12-18

Five Myths:
1. Hunger exists because of scarcity.
2. The earth produces more than enough food for everyone.
3. Hunger is a crisis between the "have" and "have nots".
4. Hunger is a result of overpopulatation.
5. If too many people are a cause of hunger, we would expect to find the worst hunger conditions in countries with the most people per cultivated area. Japan has a higher standard of living, but it is a thriving, wealthy nation. Most of India's people are poor. Japan has a good ratio land, but they use their resources well to their own advantage. Hunger and high birth rates are in reality both symptoms of the same disease—the insecurity and poverty of the majority resulting from the monopolization by a few.

The Dukakis Campaign: What Happened?

By Kyle Ashinhurst
World Outlook Writer

In the November issue of the Trinity, I predicted that George Bush would defeat Democrat Michael Dukakis in Tuesday's general election. Now that the campaign is over it is time to look back and analyze just what went wrong with the Dukakis/Bentsen ticket and to decide what George Bush's election means for America.

As recently as August, Michael Dukakis held an impressive lead over George Bush in virtually every national poll. Bush was out of the public eye for months, and the impressive Democratic campaign seemed to forecast a tremendous Dukakis victory on November 8th. As we now know, this was not to be.

To begin with, Dukakis, for whatever reason, decided to take a vacation during the month of August. After the Democratic National Convention ended, he campaigned briefly in the South, then returned to Boston to carry on his duties as Governor of Massachusetts. While this might have scored a strategic advantage at the time, Dukakis' failure to renew the initiative after he left Atlanta gives the Republicans a golden opportunity to drive home their message that Dukakis was a wishy-washy, criminal-coddling, inexperienced Northeastern liberal. While the Dukakis/Bentsen campaign openly expressed these attacks, they neglected to formulate a rational and effective response. The truly sad thing is that with the defeat of all of Bush's attacks on Dukakis' credentials having been broadcasted across the country, the Democrats' advantage, had Dukakis played his cards right, would have been considerable.

A second reason for the Democratic defeat during August was the obvious fact that the Republican convention took place during that month. The post-convention "bounce" which George Bush received was powerful enough to put him ahead of Dukakis in the polls and seriously impede the Democrats' fall campaign. Again, this Republican surge has been blamed on the vigorous effort on behalf of Bush/Bentsen during and after the New Orleans Republican convention. In fact, this takes the proudly held "high seat," apparently believing that since Bush left Dukakis alone during the Democratic convention, the Democrats should grant Bush the same courtesy. In politics, such naiveté is suicidal.

The third explanation for Bush's victory was Dukakis himself. In an age where personality and charisma are of vital importance in a presidential campaign, Dukakis came across to most voters as a cold, professorial candidate who cared little about their problems, even though his campaign was based upon an explicit commitment to average Americans. In another cultural irony, Dukakis came across as warm and charismatic, but was by far more "human" than Bush. Dukakis' result? Bush won. It is little comfort to the Democrats to think that, had they nominated a more dynamic and ardent candidate (Marie Corse perhaps, or even Jesse Jackson?) they might well have beaten Bush.

The painful fact which the Democratic Party must now face is that the 1988 election was, by all accounts, winnable. They started out the campaign with tremendous advantages, and watched them slowly evaporate. Had Dukakis been more aggressive, had the Democrats loudly started the "Reagan Revolution" with Bush/Quayle, had Jesse Jackson been used to mobilize the black vote, had Bush not squandered time and money on a futile campaign in the South, and had Michael Stanley Dukakis himself been able to act like a kinder and gentler, he would now be working on his inaugural address, rather than planning his campaign for 1992.

Having answered the question "Why did Dukakis lose?" we should now turn to a more important matter: what does Bush's election mean? On January 20th, the President-Elect George Bush will take office. Boston University's Vlan of Hartford notes, "The result: a party that is far closer to the conservative philosophy of Ronald Reagan than Dukakis. The president that he assumes office in what surely will be an alternative to living in a cardboard box."

Homless in Hartford: A Struggle to Survive

By Clarion Curran
World Outlook Writer

Where are the homeless in Hartford? Just take a look around you. An afternoon downtown will present you with a variety of income levels, ranging from grey suited clerks to Harvard professors to homeless. An afternoon downtown will be an issue commonly reported in the media nationwide, he held less than a vote lead over Dukakis in several states in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Maryland, South Dakota and California. Had the Democrats won these five states, the election would have been far clearer and Bush's claim for the support of the American people would be far more serious.

If anyone needs proof of this look at some statistics: Of the 54% of Americans who supported Bush, nearly half claimed to have cast their votes in support of Michael Dukakis rather than George Bush. Similarly, fully 25% of those who voted for the Bush/Quayle ticket also supported Democratic Congressional and gubernatorial candidates. Third, while Bush was an impressive popular-vote victory nationally, he held less than a vote lead over Dukakis in such states as Pennsylvania, Illinois, Maryland, South Dakota and California. Had the Democrats won these five states, the election would have been far clearer and Bush's claim for the support of the American people would be far more serious.

If you are interested in learning more about the Dukakis/Bentsen ticket and the upcoming Democratic Party, contact one of the many Democratic clubs or organizations. If you want to learn more about the Bush/Quayle ticket and the upcoming Republican Party, contact one of the many Republican clubs or organizations.

Worrying about the homeless in Hartford is only the beginning. There is a lot more to do. There is a lot more work to be done. But we must start somewhere. Whether it be in Hartford or your home town or anywhere else in the United States, the time has come to act. The homeless today require a more effective system of education, and the homeless tomorrow require a more effective system of health care. The homeless today require a more effective system of social services, and the homeless tomorrow require a more effective system of economic development. The homeless today require a more effective system of political representation, and the homeless tomorrow require a more effective system of democratic participation.
Arts Profile: WRTC DJ's Mix Rap with Politics

By Nina Tiger –
Special to the Tripod

On Thursday afternoons from 12 to 3, WRTC radio presents Hip Hop Nation, the station's only daytime rap show, hosted by sophomores Shawn Wooden and Terrell Davis. Under the DJ names of 'Matrix' and 'King Imperial', Wooden and Davis play a variety of rap music, while establishing a strong, pro-black message. This reporter spent a few minutes talking with the DJ's after their latest show.

When did you start working at WRTC?
Davis: We started last February.
Wooden: It was Black History Month, that's how I remember it.

Who are your listeners?
Davis: I'd say that the age group can be anywhere from 13 to 24, but we also have a lot of older listeners in their 30's.

Why is your show different from others?
Wooden: Well, on our show, since we are a Black History Month show, we did a mix of an instrumental from 'Public Enemy' with Martin Luther King's "I Have A Dream Speech." The response was very positive and now we regularly play tapes of prominent black people mixed into the music. Traditionally with Louis Farrakhan or Malcolm X, the media has tried to block them out and keep them from speaking the truth. We feel that combining their speeches with rap is one way for them to be heard.

What message are you sending to the black community?
Wooden: Rap groups themselves already push a pro-black message as far as helping yourself, rising up and doing positive things. We are trying to present rap not just as music. Most people, through their ignorance, don't think much of rap and don't even know what the words are. They just think it's garbage. We try to push the message even further by bringing in these speeches. Throughout the community especially one show is really popular and people come up to ask for Malcolm X or Farrakhan. It really surprised me that people in their 30's call up from work and say that they listen to us every week. It's good to be tuned and that's why we think our show is also different than regular rap shows.

Why else is your show unique?
Davis: In the beginning, we were having local artists send in their tapes. We would play them over the air, and then have our listeners call in and rate them. That really gives groups a good start. If you know your stuff is good, you will keep up with it, keep producing material and then maybe someday you can come out on a label and break out of Connecticut. I am in a professional rap group called The Kings of Rap. We put an album out last year, and I know how hard it is, especially to come out of Connecticut which is not known as a rap state. Both of us are into the actual business side of rap music. Shawn is part owner of a record company called Chilkwan Records and I is a manager for a rap singer.

Do you believe that rap will be a lasting musical style?
Wooden: It will stick around because they said eight years ago that rap was just another fad. Now five years old and they are going to grow older and keep it up.

Davis: When rap first started it was the stories from the streets, then it changed into songs about the rappers themselves and how great they were, and now it's more of a political message. It is saying what the government is doing to everybody, but it's centered on blacks because it's more or less, a black form of music. Although it is coming into the mainstream now and being picked up by commercial stations.

Wooden: The problem is that the really good rap, which is political rap, doesn't as easily make it over to top forty or groups such as Run DMC.

Do you plan to continue in the radio and music industry?
Davis: I plan to keep doing rap as long as it's around and I believe that it will be around forever. My dream is to have a black, commercial twenty-four hour radio station.

Wooden: I don't plan to make a career out of it, but I love it now. It feels good that we are doing something for the community and for black people by pushing the pro-black message.

Editor's Note: This week from November 13 to 19, WRTC will hold its annual marathon to help raise funds for the station. Listeners should call in during any show and pledge money to help support this valuable non-commercial, college/community effort. Those who give money will be sent WRTC buttons, bumper stickers, t-shirts, etc., while the WRTC audience will be treated to special marathon programming. Please tune in and show your support.
Handel's Messiah

November 18 - 19, 1988 @ 2:00 p.m.

The Christmas portion will be sung by the Trinity College Concert Choir with orchestra and soloists.

Conducted by Gerald Moshell

Gerald Moshell

Handel's Messiah was composed both as a Christmas section and an Easter section. Many argue that Handel is often referred to as the "Prince of the Oratorio" or the "Master of the Oratorio" even though he was a composer of both the Old and the New Testaments. Handel's Messiah is considered one of the greatest choral works ever written.

The Messiah Concert Choir will be performing only the Christmas section of the Messiah with an additional selection of the most famous movie scenes from the Messiah. This selection includes scenes from the Old Testament, which is the part of the Messiah that is most closely associated with Christmas. The choir will be accompanied by an orchestra, which will include a full choir, bass, and a variety of soloists, including a bass soloist, tenor soloist, and soprano soloist.

The Messiah Concert Choir promises to be a wonderful musical experience for all audiences, and the combination of handel's music and the visual images from the Messiah will create an unforgettable evening. The concert will take place in the Trinity College Chapel, and tickets are available through the Trinity College Ticket Office.

For more information, please contact the Trinity College Ticket Office at 555-1234.

Initiations No Laughing Matter

By Eric Hummersten

According to College Hockey West, on the last Sunday of Feburary, 1988 seven Varsity Hockey Players at Kent State University took five freshmen team members into a basement of a house off campus, gave them matches, and forced them to drink a mixture of rum and beer.

That doesn't sound very healthy, but you've ever been invited on an athletic team. That kind of thing happens at nearly every University across the country these days, and when it is made, and within days freshmen are chided with underage consumption and a first-degree misdemeanor. Each of them faces possible penalties of six months in jail and $1,000 in fines.

Two team members were charged with furnishing alcohol to minors, another first-degree misdemeanor. Five others were charged with boozing, a fourth-degree misdemeanor carrying a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail and a $250 fine.

Upon canceling this year's hockey season, President Schwartz commented, "Based on the information provided to me, I do not believe that this program is an acceptance of the spirit or of our athletic program."

This scene is set in an athletic at a college, I have watched and participated in "initiations" with the east at Kent State, and the possibility it of causing the termination of my sport had never even crossed my mind.

A new Winter sports season is about to begin at Trinity College. This year in particular, the following Northern and other events, the administration is facing the issue of alcohol on campus.

"Going from bad to worse, a total of Kent State team members have been charged with criminal charges brought against them. Athletes Of The Week

This week’s College View Cafe Athletes of the Week are Joe Yamin and Terry McNamara. Yamin, the co-captain linebacker, closed out his four-year Trinity career by breaking the Trinity record for tackles in a season, a mark that had stood for 97 years. Yamin had several key stops, as well as an interception, against Wesleyan and was a defensive force all season. McNamara finished the year with a NESCAC-leading 50 receptions.

Bantams Annihilate Wesleyan, 38-15

Finish Ninth Consecutive Winning Campaign

By Bill Charest - Sports Editor

Saturday was absolutely perfect day, if you happened to make the trip from Hartford to Middletown to see the Bantams visit Wesleyan in their season finale. It was cool, breezy, with leaves blowing around - it’s like football. Then the Bants went out and made the day even more perfect, dominating and humiliating Wesleyan on offense, on defense, and in every way imaginable,羞辱着The Cardinals, 38-15, bringing their record to 7-7, good enough to finish in second place at 5-2-1.

But perhaps the most important reason why the Bants were able to dominate Wesleyan was their ability to hang onto the ball. After the afternoon.

The degree to which Trinity dominated Wesleyan in the first half was easily seen in the first-half stats. Trinity outgained Wesleyan 91 to 44 on the ground, 170 to 77 on the air, and had 11 first downs to the Cardinals’ 9. The Wesleyan crowd seemed completely discouraged by the half, knowing that their Cardinals had been utterly embarrassed, and that the game was all but over.

Yamin Tackles 97-year-old record

Congratulations to Trinity linebacker Joe Yamin, a senior co-captain from Waterbury, CT, who broke the single-game record for tackles with 36 against Coast Guard, eclipsing the 54-year-old mark of 34, set by Charlie Weber. Yamin then went on to break the record for tackles in a season, finishing the 1988 season with 143. The front seven, notably tackle Dan Prochniak and nose tackle Rob Conklin had a great day, with an all-out Cardinal blitz with a dump-off.

Yamin's 97-year-old record of 36 tackles against Coast Guard stuffed Wesleyan running back Kevin Griffin (14-26, 254 yds., 2 TD) was a bit shaky in the early going, but seemed to get stronger as the game progressed. Defensive back Rob Conklin had a great day, with an interception, a forced fumble, and great one-on-one coverage all afternoon.

The degree to which Trinity dominated Wesleyan in the second half was seen in the second-half stats. Trinity outgained Wesleyan 143 to 14. The front seven, notably tackle Dan Prochniak and nose tackle Rob Conklin had a great day, with an all-out Cardinal blitz with a dump-off.

But perhaps the most important reason why the Bants were able to dominate Wesleyan was their ability to hang onto the ball. The Bants were down 7-0 early, when a fumble by Wesleyan's backfield left the ball at the Wesleyan 20. Soon after, wideout Mike Fawcett had a fine year, and will fully satisfied with their performance.

End Run: With the 1988 edition of the Bantams having finished their season, some major players will be lost to graduation. On offense, running backs Belber and McCurry will be graduating. However, with Kevin RisCassi, Corrie Foster, and Stephen Rodgiate left to carry the load in the backfield, the Bants shouldn't be too afraid. Kevin Griffin, the offensive field general, will also graduate, but junior Ted Eyster has already had some valuable experience as a starter, and sophomore Rich Zackman and freshman James Lackman are capable reserves.

The offensive line, a strong point of the Bantams attack, will see the departure of captain Joe Yamin, who broke the single-game record for tackles with 36 against Coast Guard, eclipsing the 54-year-old mark of 34, set by Charlie Weber. Congratulations, Joe on your record-setting performances, and to all graduating seniors who were a force in four years of Bantam football!
