Blanshard Sees Good As Pleasure And Fulfillment
Feb. 20—Brande Blanshard, re- tired chairman of the Yale phi- doepy department, today put forward what he called a “rational and responsible” solution to the moral problem.

Blanshard, who is also the author of “The Philosophy of the Unreasoned Mind,” said that his book is a commentary on the book of the same title by W.R. T. He said that his book is a commentary on the book of the same title by W.R. T. He said that his book is a commentary on the book of the same title by W.R. T.
The Tripod would like to remind its readers of its policy with regard to publishing letters. In exceptional cases we will withhold the name of the writer of a letter, but only if he signs his name to it and requests us to do so. We have to publish occasional numbers of letters in the past because their authors were unknown to us. Also, we do not publish all the letters we receive, but select those which we consider of greatest general interest.

Ben Reid Parody

To the Editor:
The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that so frequently流感 us if from dereciured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.

To the Editor:

The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that is so frequently流感 us if from dereci-

ured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar

nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated

of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and

popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.

To the Editor:
The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that is so frequently流感 us if from dereci-

ured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar

nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated

of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and

popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.

To the Editor:
The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that is so frequently流感 us if from dereci-

ured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar

nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated

of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and

popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.

To the Editor:
The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that is so frequently流感 us if from dereci-

ured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar

nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated

of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and

popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.

To the Editor:
The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that is so frequently流感 us if from dereci-

ured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar

nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated

of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and

popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.

To the Editor:
The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that is so frequently流感 us if from dereciured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar

nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated

of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and

popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.

To the Editor:
The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that is so frequently流感 us if from dereciured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar

nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated

of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and

popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.

To the Editor:
The success of the Reid article deserves hearty congratulations for his brilliant parody in Monday’s Tripod of the heart-rending sentimental slip that is so frequently流感 us if from dereciured channels of communication. I must confess when I first read this article, front page A1, I thought he was serious! But after a careful recasting of similar

nuggets into phrases as “Connecticut will kill him back” or “relevance of creative, vitally important writing”, I finally grasped the intent behind the columns.

His technique, I must add, is devilish. Deserves mention: He starts with the classic, inflated

of Reid which the naive, naive, naive who tries to explain away crime, guilt, and responsibility from one language by dumpling us with the cliché

never given a chance” or “ever given a name” possible. The author confounds the beholder of source material, especially from the ideal of all rebels and

fearless, free thinkers in play-

(Aubert Camus). This last
def -

ultimately repels our sympathy from the idol of all rebels and

popular writers. The author

thus, I believe, is the excellent

cumstances he, Benjamin Reid,

involved in.
Bantam Quintets Drop Pair At Middletown

Bantam Cardinals

Romp, 79-66

MIDDLETOWN, Feb. 21—Wesleyan avenged an earlier loss by beating Trinity tonight, 79-66. The Wasps picked up their tenth win of the season to keep losses, and dropped Trinity to a 6-5 mark.

Although Trinity led early in the game, the Cards came back to go ahead midway in the first half and kept a sizable lead for the rest of the game.

The Cards' attack was led by Captian Brownie Towle with 17 points, Soph Winky Davinag with 16, and Senior Bob Morisse with 10. Senior Bob Morisse with 10.

Early Lead Collapses

The Bantams jumped off to a 5-0 lead and increased it to 15 before Wesleyan called time at 3:20 to cut the lead to 9-5. But Trinity never allowed the Wasps to get closer than six points the rest of the way.

Ricketts took a pair of field goals to make it 8-4, and the Cards finally tied it at 8-8 at 4:30 with a free throw by von Schellenberg.

Wesleyan soon took the lead and increased it to a 13-point spread with eight minutes remaining in the game. Trinity would not recover from that.

Ricketts hit three more times in a row and then there was no stopping him. Behind his prolific scoring, Trinity moved to a 44-40 lead midway through the half.

Back In The Game

The Bantams fought hard and didn't give up, even when they fell behind 56-36 with a couple of minutes remaining. Gish then hit three points in a row and the Cards were back in the game.

It was a tightly contested game and nearly a 50 per cent field goal percentage that enabled the Cards to stay with the team that could possibly be the best freshman team in New England.

The sophomore was substitute point guard who helped keep the Cards close. Gish hit three field goals to put the Cards back on top by 13.

Personnals for both teams were granted by Captain Jay McWilliams, the Cards' head coach.

Frosh Lose Heartbreaker

The Bantams defeated the New London frosh 69-62 in December, but according to Coach Jay Williams, the loss of Norman and Uphoff could possibly be the worst freshman team in New England.

Among others, they have beaten Harvard and Williams. The Trinity team has been tough in recent years. Bob Morisse and Bob Morisse have given the team a strong front line and Captain Towle has been a fine playmaker.

Against Wesleyan, Gish led scoring with 18 points and Jager had 12.

WHERE WILL YOU BE IN 1992?

To plan ahead and get ahead...

PICK THE STEADY GROWTH

Right now, your business future lies entirely ahead of you. On the "curve" of your predictable future, there's no place to go but up. But project that curve ahead 20 or 30 years; you want to keep right on going up—steadily. With this end in view, you are probably looking for a future with what you believe is a "steady company."

This trend, however, might be misleading. To evaluate it on a long-term basis, measure this growth against time. Is it too fast for stability? Is it too slow and uncertain for your personal advancement? Are you steady enough to give you confidence in your own future growth?

Here at The Heald Machine Company growth and stability go hand in hand. The machines that we make are used in practically every branch of the entire metal-working industry.

Heald is very definitely a growth company—one that has expanded steadily for many years and is now broadening even more rapidly than ever before. For example, the application of Heald machines to larger, AUTOMATED production lines has put us in a position where high-production machines we are building today are performing operations that were considered out of our field just a few years ago. This growth pattern seems excellent for size, volume, and advancement, too.

And to help you get ahead, Heald offers you one of the most complete and comprehensive training programs available.

All things considered, you can plan on a promising future at Heald. For the full story on what Heald has to offer the graduate engineer, plan to see Mr. Edward T. Farley, Personnel Manager, The Heald Machine Company, who will be interviewing students on campus Friday, March 2, 1962.
First Time In 14 Years

Swimmers Trounce Amherst, 58-37

Burton, Smith Set Marks In Freestyle, Breaststroke

February 21 — Sophomores Ian Smith and John Burton kicked off more than their share of the varsity men's 58-37 romp over Amherst today as the two Slaugthermen each set a new Trinity College record, and accounted for nine of the Bantams' eight first places. Today's win marked Trinity's first pool victory in fourteen years against the Lord Jeffs, bringing the Bantams' won-lost record to 3-3 for the season.

Ian Smith then smashed his own record of 2:40.9 for the 200 yard breaststroke set on January 13, and set a spectacular 2:38.0. The previous record for the event had been 2:44.3, set in 1958. The teamwork of Burton, Raymond, Goodman, and Jay McCracken gave the Bantams their fifth consecutive win of the afternoon as they coped the 400 yard freestyle relay.

The Slaugthermen travel to Schenectady, New York Friday night to face an always tough Union squad.

Dothmen Lose to Cards, 5-4

Feb. 21 — Trinity won three of the first four matches but could not quite come up with the victories as it bowed to nearby Wesleyan. Don Mills again provided the incentive, but his teammates could not rally enough to record a victory. Mills defeated White of the Cardinals 15-9, 15-8, and 15-6. Other Bantam victories were: Bob Pope over Magee 15-7, 15-8, 15-12; Bruce Leddy over Smith 15-4, 15-10, 14-3, 15-13; and Bob Readman over Olds 15-10, 15-10, 8-15, 15-12. Player Crosby came closest to winning before bowing in 5 games.

The Freshmen again saved the day by routing the Wesleyan Frosh 6-3. Nick Mclver led teammates Zimmerman, Brigham, Clement, Beyer and Auciunco to victory.

Budweiser

On the Brighter Side

A lighter look in the traditional geometric designs so favored by the college man. Arrow presents them this spring with a tapered body for a trim fit styled with button-down collar, and back pleat.

Long sleeve $5.00
Short sleeve $4.00

From the "Cum Laude Collection"

Enjoy the King of Beers!

Where there's life... there's Bud!

ANHEUSER-BUSCH, INC. • ST. LOUIS • NEWARK • LOS ANGELES • TAMPA