Mather to Be Redecorated

Plaza for rebricking the blossom, dining area, and corridor of Mather Hall is now under construction and members of a committee of administrators, faculty members, and students. The plans evolved from a question raised by several of the more than 800 faculty and students of Mather to the administration. In turn, Mr. Albert Holland, vice-president of the college and director of the development at an all-college development meeting last fall. The question, "Can we put the 'moccasins' into the corridor," administrated by Mr. Baer, was answered "encouraged" by Mr. Baer who said the question was always open to suggestions.

Plaza has been drawn up which are now being studied. These include ringed in the middle lounge with round wooden tables and chairs. New lounge chairs, lamps, rugs and draperies are in line for the middle lounge this spring. There will also be a new room created in addition to the checking out the present room. These will be two newly formed corridors.

Robert Sward, whose poems have been praised for their "air of having been made for people rather than for other artists," will give a reading and lecture on "poetry" on Thursday at 4:00 p.m. in Alumni Lounge. Mr. Sward, who was a 1945 Fulbright Fellow and a 1965 Guggenheim Fellow has been a Poetry Fellow at the Bread Loaf Writers' Conference. His poems have appeared in a variety of periodicals, among them "The New Yorker," "Poetry," "The Hudson Review," "Transatlantic Review" and "The Nation." Mr. Sward's latest volume is "1,000-Year-Old Fiancee and Other Poems" which was published in 1965. In 1964, "Finishing the Dance and Other Poems" was released. Mr. Sward stated in a New York Times review: "Many of Robert Sward's poems are bonded to a sparseness that recalls the vernacular simplicity of William Carlos Williams...He has a voice and range, and he has produced an admirable first volume...Judson Jerome in "The Antioch Review" noted Mr. Sward's "writing in a varyng, free-associative, stop-and-go manner which makes his poems often explode like Dreyfus' detonator in every direction...a poetry of surprise, of individuality, one of bitter fun."

Two Levels

Mason Plan as it now exists is ineffective, hypocritical, and farcical, to say the least. The Sophomore Class survey on fraternities points up this fact all too well, and it is up to the IFC to see that something be done in its place to acquaint freshmen to the realities of fraternity life and bring them into contact with the people who dwell on two levels. The first level is the easier of the two. It involves merely informing freshmen about the objective facts of fraternity life: financial responsibilities, pledging responsibilities, fraternity activities, and perhaps most important of all, who is in which house. In addition to these objective facts, freshmen need to be informed about the ideals, goals, and purposes of fraternities—collectively and individually. All these facts could be provided in a comprehensive pamphlet edited and published by the IFC.

The second level of acquaintance is the social level. This, by nature, is a more difficult proposition and one which the IFC has had little concern for in the past, except in discouraging "dirty rushing" with rules that are broken every time you look around the fraternity house and what Fraternity need is an opportunity to meet in an atmosphere in which rushers on both sides of the fence can see each other socially. This will involve some kind of open house parties on some specific weekends and, perhaps, some other informal affairs such as coffee hours after some hours. Some planning might even be worked out for freshmen to dine at fraternities either during the week or at special weekend meals.

This problem is a ticklish one because it demands that fraternities, which are essentially closed organizations, "open up." However, problem for which the IFC must find an adequate solution. The present plan is all but useless. It is no use to have a new plan to have a truly successful rush, a new plan is sorely needed.

To the Editor:

In view of the fact that there are nearly 300 freshmen at Trinity and that only 136 of these students signed the "Lexington Young Republican" petition, I would like to take note of the fact that the vast majority of Trinity students, in signing the petition, I would also like to say that I am shocked by the fact that responsible organizations like the Y.D.'s and Y.R.'s would draw up such a vague and meaningless love. It seems to me, therefore, that any national effort was as fruitless as Trinity's.

I am writing to you in response to the despotic act of "in- crease" committed by Joseph H. Russo. I am referring specifically to the situation with the coffee hour in the Lower Common Room. Russo has been attempting to curtail the coffee hour, which is now being provided with accompanying food, down to the point where it no longer exists on campus property.

I get in touch with Mr. James Ryan, college security officer, to talk to the Office of Buildings and Grounds to see what arrangements can be made for storage of your bicycle. Bicycles which are not in dead storage are to be kept at the bicycle stands.

Russo, I am referring specifically to the coffee hour. Russo's actions are: not the case. It is also the case that freshmen can be permanently disabled by the IFC to see that something be done in its place to acquaint freshmen to the realities of fraternity life and bring them into contact with the people who dwell on two levels.

Goodwin Fellows Regroup

To Improve Arts Center

An ad hoc committee of the Goodwin Fellows, spurred by recent criticism of the honorary organization for the performing arts, reorganized the group. The committee met at a meeting on January 19. The committee, consisting of chairman, John S. O. Jones, chairman, Paul B. O. Jones, and John H. O. Jones, appointed by John W. O. Jones, decided to avoid splitting the group into two separate bodies and to accept its dual role as both a honorary and a working organization.

This committee continued the group's five-meeting board of trustees, consisting of the chairman, the teacher-trainee, and the heads of the organization's three committees, the Events Committee, the Publications Committee, and the Fellowship Committee. The director of the Center will sit as an ex officio member at the meetings of the executive committee.

The Activities Committee and the Hospitality Committee were consolidated as one.

The roles of each of the remaining committees were realigned. The Events group will plan in conjunction with the center director, all events scheduled on the calendar and will coordinate the use of the center facilities with other campus organizations. The Publications Committee will handle all public relations for Center events. The fellowship committee will act as a clearinghouse to coordinate public activities now being done by individual organizations. A Standing Opera Committee, at present, is being drawn up. Work of the House Committee will include the drafting and running of activities at the Center.

One of the main objectives of the revision is to encourage more student interest in and activity in the Arts Center in those areas not engaged in the membership of the Fellows. Anyone desiring to help in the planning and execution of the Arts Center program will be strongly encouraged to join the provisional fellowship.

Although the number of provision- al Goodwin Fellows will be con- siderably lower, those who remain will be held com-

The 1966 version of the Trinity crew is new in many ways. There is new varsity status, a new building, a new coach, and experiments with new styles.

The new building in East Hartford was completed during the summer and dedicated this fall. According to the new coach, Arthur Gilcreast, these new facilities are among the best that he has ever seen. By the time the ice on the Connecticut freezes in the spring, the work on a ramp to the water will be completed, and the docks will be in the water.

As usual, the crew will be getting into condition during the month of February. Workouts consist of a variety of weight exercises, and an "industrial" amount of running to build wind and leg muscles. With a lucky break in the weather, the crew might be able to get out on the water by the third week of February rather than the usual first week in March.

Tom Israel, president and captain of the Rowing Association, leads a group of about a dozen returning varsity and under-varsity oarsmen, and two novices. Despite their experiences, these men will face stiff competition from members of last year's excellent freshman crew.

Gilcreast, the new coach, was formerly the freshman coach at Yale. In daily workouts this fall, Coach Gilcreast experimented with the "British-style" of rowing, developed by the world-championship-winning Great Britain crew. One of the planned changes is "sherpaing" and differing from the American oars in that they are a shorter and wider. They are designed for rowing at a higher number of strokes per minute.

The schedule this year includes two Saturday home regattas at the beginning of the season. On April 15, Amherst and C. W. Post will be at Trinity, while the following Saturday, Wesleyan and St. Anselm will be the competition. There is also a cox-vee race against A.C. on April 20.

Following the home races, the crew travels to a series of regattas. The first is the President's Cup at Poughkeepsie on April 30, then the Rusty Callow at Woonsocket on May 1, and finally the Dad Vail in Philadelphia on May 14.

The season comes to a close in Boston against Northeastern. Northeastern is no longer a "small college" crew, and the team should be a challenge to the "new" Trinity crew, which is looking for a good year in 1966.

All those interested in rowing, managing, or coaching, whether or not they have had previous experience, are invited to attend an organizational meeting of the crew tonight in Wean Lounge at 5 p.m.

In their first home game of the season, Trinity's hockey squad whitewashed Wesleyan, 4-0, last January 15. The victory was the Bantoms' second in as many starts.

The contest was a fairly even match between the two clubs. Trinity's lone advantage came from the fact that the first string Cardinal goalie was unable to play. With this in mind, Tony Bryant romped home a pair of goals, and Henry Barkhausen and Tom Good- year had one apiece to round out the scoring.

The next home game is on Friday, February 11, against Hobart.

Landes Lands 30 to Carry Bantams by Clark, 103-84

by Nels Olson

Both opponents continued to trade point evenly. Trinity maintained a 17 point margin until the five minute mark in the last quarter, when the Bantams increased their advantage to 19 points, 88-70. With three minutes left and leading 95-74, Coach Shoel introduced his squad of reserves who had been playing individually throughout the evening. Sam Elkin sank the 100th and 101st points with 30 seconds remaining to play. The final score stood at 103-84, Trinity.

Landes and Belfiore then strung two of his evening’s 23 points to the Bantams tenth win against Trinity since they met last Saturday as they sunk Canterbury, 86-48, in foreign water. Expecting most of their troubles from the Canterbury top-notchers, the Trin tankers were more pressed by Canterbury’s strong supporting squad.

While Trinity was eight of 11 events, the hosts forced them to take six of nine sutures. Left Vogelstrass was big man for the little Bantams with victories in the 100-yard individual medley and the 100-yard breast-stroke.

Rip Van Winkle Is Here

Hartfordite

A native of Rhode Island, Peter K. Van Winkle has lived in this city for 18 years where his father is the rector of the Trinity Episcopal Church. A Graduate of Denison University (History) Rip spent the summer of 1964 in the Sales Management training program with the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company.

After a five month tour of duty with the Armed Forces for the National Guard Rip returned to school, this time involved with the newly developed Axiom Plan. Following this he began full time field work associated with the Ralph Love agency. During the past year Rip has been on the Trinity Campus recruiting and discussing the Axiom Plan so as to fit it to the Trinity Student body needs.

While in college Rip was a columnist for the student newspaper, a participant in Track, Swimming and Tennis, produced a special report on procedures within the Ohio House of Representatives as well as a report on Denison University admission policies.

In Hartford he is a member of the University Club, YMCA, and the Bachelors Club. He enjoys skiing on anything, week-ends to Poughkeepsie, handball, squash and tennis.

Connecticut Mutual feels that RIP VAN WINKLE is well qualified to represent them on the Trinity Campus and hopes that the students will feel free to call on him with questions about the industry.

Agency Associate

The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company has developed a program for college men known as the Axiom Plan, having studied the variances of this and excellent plans offered by other companies RIP VAN WINKLE has come up with a new concept to be offered to Trinity students during the coming months.

During the past year RIP has presented this idea to a cross-section of Trinity students, faculty, and administration officers. The results have been the basis for the new AXIOM PLAN designed to cover all the contingencies a man will face as he leaves Trinity and at the same time incorporates the flexibility that can adjust the policy to the individual financial situation of each client.

RIP will plan to visit each of the fraternities as well as individuals during the next four months. He is available for appointment and can be reached by calling his office (233-9825) or his home (522-6570).
