Room Switching: $100 Fine

In connection with the May room drawings for next year's dormitory locations all students are reminded that they will be required to reside in the room assigned to them on the day the draws are made. Each student and their respective roommates must attend the draw in order to verify that their room is assigned to the correct student. Those absent from the draw will be required to submit a request to the Registrar's Office for a room change. The request must be submitted prior to the deadline of May 1st. Failure to do so will result in the student being assigned to the room as assigned by the draw. Students who fail to attend the draw and do not request a room change within the required timeframe will be assigned to the room as assigned by the draw. Students who fail to attend the draw and do not request a room change within the required timeframe will be assigned to the room as assigned by the draw.
'Pops' Presents 'Carousel', Orchestral Review of Past

An informal history of operetta and musical comedy will be presented tonight in the Goodwin Theatre at 8:15 when the College "pops" orchestra plays "Carousel".

As each number in this musical review of the past is played, the listener may find themselves transported to another time and place, experiencing the rich tapestry of musical history.

Dewey Weddle

started a bottle cap collection with this one.

"Back on Grain" by Dick Forbes is the third story. Unlike Stephens' this one is not black and white, but rather a humorous tale that plays on the themes of love and life.

"Sack of Grain" by Dick Forbes is the third story. Unlike Stephens' this one is not black and white, but rather a humorous tale that plays on the themes of love and life.

TRINITY CAMPUSS LAUNDRY

- Special This Week
- Pants 29c
- One Day Service
- Complete Laundry and Dry Cleaning Services
- Expert Tailoring
- Basement Cook A

All But The Lines Service Will Be

Open Saturday 9-1:00

Hilton Hotels Corporation, National Sales Office, Palmer House, Chicago 90, Ill. Please send the Faculty-Student Rate Brochure that tells all.

I am a Faculty Member Student

NAME

HOME ADDRESS

STREET

CITY

STATE

Hilton Hotels in the U.S.?
Three Torrents of Spray

Theater in Oblique, Vital

by Robert M. Lewis

Three torrents of spray came into the southend Saturday afternoon when ‘The Theatre of the Obliyays’ presented three student-written, student-directed, and student-produced plays. The three plays varied in style from the large course blasting stream of a fire hose to the misty spray in a camellia garden on to a shower spray with a grandfather turning hot and cold controls.

The way out by Richard For-best was a reading with some attentiveness of a mundane situation that became a personal crisis and an attempt to justify it by pragmatic sanction. The four players read as though they were somewhat interested in the theme. It was the entrance of Peter Braver that caused me to cease bodily — sending me into the hasty conclusion.

The mule delineate spray on camellias came through on the second play PRANTON written by Douglas Cushman and directed by Chris Hansen. The scene was as a battlefield — brings out the contrast of conflict to the realities of war and the poetry of the human conditions. Bill Smithy, as Pedro, and Leoal Tardif, as Capitano, were allable believable, and Mike Williams was the slight abbot to human frailties. The play — ‘NIC-

CAR — was written by Hopkins Park and directed by William Hartman.

This kind of theatre in the oblique to vital and needs to be appraised for the exposure it affords the playwright, the experience to the actor and director, and the participation of an audience to give and take and live and grow, it is vital to do and to do. Short comings are necessary to see larger goals and attidues. Bravo!

Ed. note — Mr. Lewis is the innovator of the Quiet College of art, a setting for theatre, folk singing, poetry reading, radio, and art display.

Review...

(Continued from Page 3)

so what now seems like a too-hasty conclusion.

Turning now to the poetry, I am equally impressed with the variety though there is not quite as much variety. Perhaps the most remarkable of these is Patrick Pierce’s ‘The Mote in God’s Crown.’ It is filled with striking images like ‘that cut out of salt’ and ‘the stilt of memory’ and the hand which ‘cracks the joints of these.’

No poem can survie on the ingenuous images, but Frank, who graduate last spring, has managed to build them into a complex and moving statement.

Mike Rassman’s ‘The Gulf’ appears to be merely descriptive at first, but if one recalls ‘Partitioning Heart’ and makes full use of such phrases as ‘snake-like patte’ and ‘guiltless fruit,’ the gulf becomes a faun and those two last lines become chilling in implication.

Differing from both these poems, Alan Gringshaggar’s ‘laughing Reflections’ is personal, sensual, and narrative in treatment. It is unfortunate that this poem had to be finished through the course of five pages because there is a narrative sweep which takes on a dramatic intensity if the poem is read without a break.

On the second reading it will become apparent that the girl in this poem is being identified with the last specifically and nature generally; what reads like a love poem on one level then becomes a study of one man’s relationship with the earth.

Doug Cushman’s work is marked by a highly sophisticated use of paradox and irony, in each of these three poems there is a remarkable tension established in such paired opposites as ‘dark’ and ‘light’; ‘shimmering water’ and ‘scambling’; ‘dreamer’ and ‘the dreamless dream.’ These poems offer a cool intellectual insight compared with the more sensual

work of Pierce and Crichton.

The third prerequisite for excellence in a publication of this sort is appearance, and here the issue is without question one of the best in you.

The general arrangement of material, selection of paper and type are all excellent in a publication of this sort. The book is well bound, the link between Tom Gal-

nor’s ‘Weeds’ contrast in Rodney Cook’s ‘City’ which faces Bob Stepto’s ‘Weeds,’ the collage of ‘paths’ and ‘guiltless fruit’ the gulf becomes a faun and those two last lines become chilling in implication.

Differing from both these poems, Alan Gringshaggar’s ‘laughing Reflections’ is personal, sensual, and narrative in treatment. It is unfortunate that this poem had to be finished through the course of five pages because there is a narrative sweep which takes on a dramatic intensity if the poem is read without a break.

On the second reading it will become apparent that the girl in this poem is being identified with the last specifically and nature generally; what reads like a love poem on one level then becomes a study of one man’s relationship with the earth.

Doug Cushman’s work is marked by a highly sophisticated use of paradox and irony, in each of these three poems there is a remarkable tension established in such paired opposites as ‘dark’ and ‘light’; ‘shimmering water’ and ‘scambling’; ‘dreamer’ and ‘the dreamless dream.’ These poems offer a cool intellectual insight compared with the more sensual

work of Pierce and Crichton.

The third prerequisite for excellence in a publication of this sort is appearance, and here the issue is without question one of the best in you.

The general arrangement of material, selection of paper and type are all excellent in a publication of this sort. The book is well bound, the link between Tom Gal-

nor’s ‘Weeds’ contrast in Rodney Cook’s ‘City’ which faces Bob Stepto’s ‘Weeds,’ the collage of ‘paths’ and ‘guiltless fruit’ the gulf becomes a faun and those two last lines become chilling in implication.

Differing from both these poems, Alan Gringshaggar’s ‘laughing Reflections’ is personal, sensual, and narrative in treatment. It is unfortunate that this poem had to be finished through the course of five pages because there is a narrative sweep which takes on a dramatic intensity if the poem is read without a break.

On the second reading it will become apparent that the girl in this poem is being identified with the last specifically and nature generally; what reads like a love poem on one level then becomes a study of one man’s relationship with the earth.

Doug Cushman’s work is marked by a highly sophisticated use of paradox and irony, in each of these three poems there is a remarkable tension established in such paired opposites as ‘dark’ and ‘light’; ‘shimmering water’ and ‘scambling’; ‘dreamer’ and ‘the dreamless dream.’ These poems offer a cool intellectual insight compared with the more sensual

work of Pierce and Crichton.

The third prerequisite for excellence in a publication of this sort is appearance, and here the issue is without question one of the best in you.

The general arrangement of material, selection of paper and type are all excellent in a publication of this sort. The book is well bound, the link between Tom Gal-

nor’s ‘Weeds’ contrast in Rodney Cook’s ‘City’ which faces Bob Stepto’s ‘Weeds,’ the collage of ‘paths’ and ‘guiltless fruit’ the gulf becomes a faun and those two last lines become chilling in implication.

Differing from both these poems, Alan Gringshaggar’s ‘laughing Reflections’ is personal, sensual, and narrative in treatment. It is unfortunate that this poem had to be finished through the course of five pages because there is a narrative sweep which takes on a dramatic intensity if the poem is read without a break.

On the second reading it will become apparent that the girl in this poem is being identified with the last specifically and nature generally; what reads like a love poem on one level then becomes a study of one man’s relationship with the earth.

Doug Cushman’s work is marked by a highly sophisticated use of paradox and irony, in each of these three poems there is a remarkable tension established in such paired opposites as ‘dark’ and ‘light’; ‘shimmering water’ and ‘scambling’; ‘dreamer’ and ‘the dreamless dream.’ These poems offer a cool intellectual insight compared with the more sensual

work of Pierce and Crichton.

The third prerequisite for excellence in a publication of this sort is appearance, and here the issue is without question one of the best in you.

The general arrangement of material, selection of paper and type are all excellent in a publication of this sort. The book is well bound, the link between Tom Gal-

nor’s ‘Weeds’ contrast in Rodney Cook’s ‘City’ which faces Bob Stepto’s ‘Weeds,’ the collage of ‘paths’ and ‘guiltless fruit’ the gulf becomes a faun and those two last lines become chilling in implication.

Differing from both these poems, Alan Gringshaggar’s ‘laughing Reflections’ is personal, sensual, and narrative in treatment. It is unfortunate that this poem had to be finished through the course of five pages because there is a narrative sweep which takes on a dramatic intensity if the poem is read without a break.

On the second reading it will become apparent that the girl in this poem is being identified with the last specifically and nature generally; what reads like a love poem on one level then becomes a study of one man’s relationship with the earth.

Doug Cushman’s work is marked by a highly sophisticated use of paradox and irony, in each of these three poems there is a remarkable tension established in such paired opposites as ‘dark’ and ‘light’; ‘shimmering water’ and ‘scambling’; ‘dreamer’ and ‘the dreamless dream.’ These poems offer a cool intellectual insight compared with the more sensual

work of Pierce and Crichton.

The third prerequisite for excellence in a publication of this sort is appearance, and here the issue is without question one of the best in you.

The general arrangement of material, selection of paper and type are all excellent in a publication of this sort. The book is well bound, the link between Tom Gal-

nor’s ‘Weeds’ contrast in Rod Pro Ecclesia...

We are glad to see that the College has taken its motto to heart in selecting the speakers for Commencement Day this year. The Honorable Judge, Bishop Dean, is, indeed, a prominent Anglican clergyman ("Pro ecclesia") and, as such, has been called to function as the President of the class ("et Patria"). Whether or not one feels that Trinity should be "for the Church and the Fatherland," there is no doubt that the Trustees have invited prominent men from both these areas of society to speak on June 5.

Hamlin

In a semi-related matter, the opening of Hamlin Hall for independent dining five nights a week next year is another expression of the College's concern for those who do not belong to fraternities. The benefits of this dining setup have already been propounded many times in the past, and we are glad to see that the College has done something to improve the independents' situation.

Phi Mu Delta

We wish to congratulate the new Lambda Chapter of Phi Mu Delta and its newly initiated brothers for bringing another national fraternity to the campus. It has become increasingly apparent that if the fraternity structure on this campus is going to fulfill its purpose, it is going to have to expand. PFD's is one type of expansion which the College welcomes. The other is internal expansion by individual houses.

At the charter presentation ceremonies for PFD's on Saturday night, President Jacobs stated that Trinity owes very much of its stability to fraternity and sorority houses, and that the climate here for fraternities is as fertile as necessary growth of this system is carried on within this climate.

Unconcerned?

However, there seems to be a definite lack of concern about the curricular life here. Last week's TRIPOD expressed concern with changes which were implemented last year. One such concern is the comment that "no one has communicated to us any desire to discuss sociology or pass-fail next week: if the pass-fail proposal is not passed next week, and no one has even mentioned voting on the faculty, etc."

Kil Carsons was killed. Crowds of people and students from Washington College are varying shades of weep and wail around Paddington Green. Candide read, said to be the Secretariat and desolate that he is, who beg to speak as he he, the fear and trepidation of the strong grew. Candide read.

He had left Harris Ford nearly five minutes before, Kil bought his ticket and had all the connections that moved him until he handed over the Automobile, had evidently returned to the Forest Body. The body was found with a knife in it, a life-time supply of Husky Company Socks and a Montparnasse suit in which he had been cut up into plain jackets and that the Amhoosti had ritually dived plume under a sacred and holy oak.

The other tribe, the Smythons, were a smaller tribe of noble Amhoosti who had been abandoned by Byronic at Vineland. According to the primitive elephants and rock paintings, this second tribe had migrated south and set up an uneasy alliance with the Amhoosti as the many years passed. Kil said it was clear from his futile observations in the pine flat that, even in this modern day, there was better feeling due to the two tribes fear of minimal conflict. The tribe had lived and clothed in horn-beam: the Amhoosti were forced to couple with the Amhoosti, there being no way to for the trachesterous Barstoll Falls and discover the presence of Kil Carsons.

The hardy scout said that, although the beaver season had been short in that neck of the woods, he had remained until the last bit of snow had vanished and the fire-water season had been short in that neck of the woods, he had remained until the last bit of snow had vanished. The fire-water season had been short In that neck of the woods, he had remained until the last bit of snow had vanished. The fire-water season had been short. Kil Carsons was bushed. Crowds of people and students from Washington College suffering from scholasticism. Candide read, said to be the Secretariat and desolate that "no one has even mentioned voting on the faculty, etc."

Whether or not one feels that Trinity should be "for the Church and the Fatherland," there is no doubt that the Trustees have invited prominent men from both these areas of society to speak on June 5.

Realizing this diversity and the emotional content of the situation, we are not sure if Mr. Carsons decided to read out "the act" it would symbolize the content previously made and reflect favorably on the College. In this situation there were many different opinions held by members of the student body concerning what should or should not be done.

Car-Stopping

Ugliness, even with necessary, indispensable. The practice of a small but important. Mr. Carsons was killed. Crowds of people and students from Washington College are varying shades of weep and wail around Paddington Green. Candide read, said to be the Secretariat and desolate that he is, who beg to speak as he he, the fear and trepidation of the strong grew. Candide read.

The letter was designed so that if Mr. Carsons decided to read out "the act" it would symbolize the content previously made and reflect favorably on the College. In this situation there were many different opinions held by members of the student body concerning what should or should not be done.

Realizing this diversity and the emotional content of the situation, we are not sure if Mr. Carsons decided to read out "the act" it would symbolize the content previously made and reflect favorably on the College. In this situation there were many different opinions held by members of the student body concerning what should or should not be done.
Curriculum Changes (continued from last week)

The Physics department will change a number of its upper level courses next fall, as described below, and as a result the course requirements for majors will be changed to: "Four and one-half years of physics, including physics 301, 302, and 307, plus one-half course from the 400 level.

Physics 308 and 310 will be renamed to Physics 403 and 410 (ADVANCED LABORATORY PHYSICS). Physics 309 will be changed from ATOMIC PHYSICS TO QUANTUM MECHANICS. It will include the physical, mathematical and analytical structure of quantum mechanics. The material will be based heavily on applications of Schroedinger's equation, including approximate methods of solution, and some use of matrix methods. The course is designed to provide the theoretical foundation for Physics 208 and other courses in modern Physics.

Physics 310 will be changed from NUCLEAR PHYSICS TO ATOMIC PHYSICS. These courses will include the structure of multi-electron atoms, the atomic fine and hyperfine structure, and transitions between energy levels. Physics 403 and 404, INTRODUCTION TO QUANTUM MECHANICS, will include the physical, mathematical and analytical structure of quantum mechanics. The material will be based heavily on applications of Schroedinger's equation, including approximate methods of solution, and some use of matrix methods. The course is designed to provide the theoretical foundation for Physics 208 and other courses in modern Physics.

LAMBDA CHARTER - J. Robert Zahn (left) presents the Charter of the Lambda Chapter of Phi Mu Delta to Thomas S. Collette, the chapter's president, at ceremonies Saturday night.

 Phi Mu Delta, the national fraternal organization of women, has been given a charter and a pledge of $5,000. The charter was presented to R. T. Zahn, past president and current national vice-president of the organization, by Thomas S. Collette with Lambda Chapter's charter, Collette is the chapter's president.

Panelists Discuss Students Of '60s for Frosh Parents

"A call of informality" has come into being among today's college students which may be determinate to the next generation, according to Dr. George B. Cooper, chairman of the history department.

"Such behavior may lead to informality and informality to informality and informality to informality," said Dr. Cooper, "and the cycle may continue until it becomes a way of life for the individual.

"If this is the case, it is a serious problem," he added. "And if it is not, it is a serious problem because it is a way of life for the individual.

"A call of informality" has come into being among today's college students which may be determinate to the next generation, according to Dr. George B. Cooper, chairman of the history department.

"Such behavior may lead to informality and informality to informality and informality to informality," said Dr. Cooper, "and the cycle may continue until it becomes a way of life for the individual.

Panelists Discuss Students Of '60s for Frosh Parents
Here are 7 knotty problems facing the Air Force: can you help us solve one?

1. Repair in space. If something goes wrong with a vehicle in orbit, how can it be fixed? Answers must be found to permit on-orbit repairs. Partial answers may be as important as full solutions. What will be needed? Answers must be found to permit on-orbit repairs.

2. Lunar landing. The exact composition of the lunar surface, as well as structural and propulsion characteristics of the lander vehicle, exist. This problem, important study remains to be done. If you are an Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it.

3. Life support biology. The filming of experiments and new approaches to finding life in space is one of the most exciting, and perhaps the most vital, work that can be done. If you are an Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it.

4. Space propulsion. The primary propulsion systems are becoming more important as the space vehicle's mission. This problem, important study remains to be done. If you are an Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it.

5. Space physiology. It is necessary to learn about the human body in space. This problem, important study remains to be done. If you are an Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it.

6. Space exploration. The objective of a spacecraft is to determine its ability to maneuver over certain points on the earth. This problem, important study remains to be done. If you are an Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it.

7. Pilot performance. Important steps will be made to determine how the pilots of manned spacecraft will be able to cope with the stresses of space travel. This problem, important study remains to be done. If you are an Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it.

Name:
Address:
City:
Telephone:

Want to find out how you fit into the Air Force? Contact your nearest Air Force representative, or mail the coupon today.

United States Air Force
AIRCRAFT CLINIC
AIRCRAFT CLINIC

Air Force ...

Washington D.C.

Air Force ...

For Personnel...

For Personnel...
Jones-Elton Quadrangle Work Progressing Slowly

The consensus of the students living in the Jones-Elton quadrangle seems to be that the area would be very attractive if it ever gets finished.

Dean H. Kelsy, associate comptroller of the College, said this week that he expected the beautification project on the quadrangle to be finished by May 15. He reported that the delays had been caused by the involvements of contractors and many different types of workmen on the project. Each morning for the past two weeks students living in Jones and Elton Halls have been awakened at 8 a.m. by jack-hammers and steam drills. One student complained about the workmen, saying that "there always seems to be one working and three standing around shooting the bull."

Another student wanted to know if there has been any limit to the amount of work these laborers can do in an hour. They all seem to lay down their tools at the exact same time, satisfied that they've done an hour's work in forty minutes.

However, in general students interviewed seemed completely satisfied with the progress being made, and with the plans. Dean Kelsy commented that "this project will certainly help to counter the ugliness of Jones and Elton, but what they really ought to do is put trees all around the buildings, so you couldn't see them."

Senior Ball...

(Continued from Page 1)

Phi Kappa Psi and one of the founders of the "Trinidads." According to Tull, the instrumentation for the mass on the 15th will be "creative."

That same evening at 7:30 a reading of T.S. Eliot's "Four Quartets" will be performed in the Penrose Memorial Garden at the Chapel. Directed by James W. Gardner Jr., assistant professor of English, the reading will include musical interludes by the Carillon and a baroque ensemble in the Cloister.

Mr. Gardner has arranged the poems to best represent the poet and three internal moods, according to Chaplain Tull. Reading in the performance will be John A. Dana, associate professor of English, Chaplain Tull, Mrs. Amelia Rivest, and Miss Betty Parker. Also assisting will be Mr. Albert C. Janson, president of the College.

Bleachers will be set up on the south side of the Garden for the reading which will be free of charge to the entire College community.

The Turtles (yeah, yeah, yeah).

COLLEGE VIEW SERVICE
360 New Britain Ave.
(Just West of Summit St. Gate)
Offering Mobil Products
Complete Automotive Service
Free Pickup & Delivery Service
7 a.m. - 10 p.m. Weekdays & 8 a.m. - 10 p.m. Sundays
The varsity victory also returned Trinity to the top of the race for three hours, the varsity's usual high stroking pace. Pete Johnson was unable to use this to best advantage, but it brought the varsity's usual high stroking pace. Pete Johnson was unable to use this to best advantage, but it brought the varsity's usual high stroking pace. Pete Johnson was unable to use this to best advantage, but it brought the varsity's usual high stroking pace.