Senate Backs Medusa Disciplinary Revision

By a vote of 36 to three with two abstentions, the Faculty of Trinity College voted on February 14th to approve the Board of Governors' resolution to endorse proposed changes in the disciplinary procedures for the Medusa dormitory. The proposal was considered by the Faculty for consideration.

After nearly three hours of discussion and clarification of the proposed revision, the Faculty decided that the Board of Governors had not sufficiently explained the exact nature of their decision. The Board of Governors had presented a proposal that would make the Medusa dormitory more accountable for its actions, but the Faculty was not satisfied with the explanation given.

The Faculty then voted to approve the Board of Governors' proposal, which would establish a more transparent and accountable system for the Medusa dormitory. The proposal would also provide for a more fair and balanced system for handling complaints, and would ensure the rights of both the dormitory and the students it serves.

Dr. Norman Birnbaum

Industrial Theory Topic
Of Birnbaum Residency

The 1977 Trinity College Lecturer-in-Residence with the University of Chicago, Professor Birnbaum, visited the campus on February 14th to discuss the topic of "Power, Politics and the Media." He provided a detailed analysis of the role of the media in shaping public opinion, and discussed the importance of understanding the ways in which media manipulate information. The lecture was well received by the students and faculty, and provided valuable insights into the topic.

Junior Walker to Highlight '67 Prom

Junior Walker and the All Stars, who performed at the 1967 prom, were scheduled to perform again at the 1967 prom. The band had gained popularity through their hit song "Hit the Road Jaqueline," and their performance was highly anticipated by the students.

JUNIOR WALKER and the All Stars are ready to set the mood for the 1967 prom along with Guy U. S. Banks at the Junior Prom on March 10.

Lame Dialogue, Stilted Plot
Does Is Paris Burning?

by A. R. Ammons

Marked by a good exposition but a poor follow-through, perhaps the most realistic thing about "Is Paris Burning?" playing at the Strand Theatre, is that now all too familiar glist of "give me your gold flow" in the eyes of the Parisians, to the liberated Amerindian forest came rolling in. In bold black and white, photography the exposition of the story is carried out in the realistic atmosphere of Sibelius' warring basses and cars burning paraffin gas in occupied Paris. Everything in fact is realistic save the way people behave. But then, the way the French resistance was portrayed afforded a most valuable insight into the way in which the liberation of the city was carried out. Judging from the state of Flagellation and disorder in which the French resistance mounted its opposition to the German occupation under General von Choltitz (Gert Frobe), it is no wonder what a mess they have made of their first, through fifty revolutions. Since the story basically was designed to follow the motif of the underground, this accounts in part for the flagellatory nature of the film. Of course this storytelling was heightened by the inclusion of an American as an "unknown" actor in various superficial roles ranging from Kim Douglas as General Patton to Yves Montand, the singer-dancer, as a French tank general. The effect was totally noble in execution as well as in interpretation. Maestro Szell's delineation of classically restrained power, as in the daring finale, was totally noble in execution as well as in interpretation. The performance of the meetings between the resistance leaders and the occupying General are reduced to a histrionic show of the Gostapo's racial characteristics in conflict with typical French misplaced hallucinations.

But no one can spend that much for a film and not accidentally at least create something to believe. In this case, some of the photography was excellent, especially in a nighttime scene of the surs of some members of the underground. The effect is almost surrealistic as the domed fortress of the garbage containers contrasted in the flashing light of their machine gun bursts. But all in all, the lame dialogue, unrealistic treatment of its protagonists, plot development will make "Is Paris Burning?"

Ammons to Read Poetry

"Some poets are ears and some are eyes; the best are ears and eyes. A. R. Ammons appeals to the ear, to the eye that sees nature, to the inward eye as well. He has a lot to say and his subjects are unlimited," says Donald Hall of BOOK WEEK.

Ammons will give a reading of his poetry in the Austin Arts Center on Friday evening at 8:15 p.m. as a guest of the College Poetry Center.

Ammons was born in Whittier, North Carolina, in 1916. He received a B.S. degree from Wake Forest College and later studied at the University of California at Berkeley. From 1942 to 1945, he served as an elementary school in North Carolina; from 1955 to 1961, he worked in an executive capacity in the biomedical glassware industry. In 1965, Ammons received a John Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship from the Cornell University English Department. Ammons' poetry is typified by a bluntness of formal structure and a forthright honesty of portrayal, rarely idealizing or simplifying his subject matter. He is also known for his mastery at creating expressionism and at once both a search for knowledge and a movement toward knowledge, often leaving the reader with a better understanding of its subject matter.

Nichols States Arts Center Policy; Student Requests for Use of Goodwin Theater Rise

George Nichols, director of the Arts Center, issued an official statement this week intended to clear up confusion with regard to the availability of Arts Center facilities. Nichols declared that he hoped the statement would "serve in some measure to clarify the operation of the building and to alleviate some of the disappointment experienced when requests to use the facilities must be turned down."

The statement emphasizes that the Center's primary purpose is "to house the Arts program at Trinity College." Requests to use the facilities by groups "specifically in the Arts area have priority."

The Goodwin Theatre is the facility in highest demand at the Center and Nichols's statement stipulates two purposes for which it may not be used: off-campus organizations and non-college events open to the public. Requests for use of the theater must be "clearly stated, with the date, time of use, and purpose indicated for approval in a written request." A written request must also include the number of people anticipated to use the theater for both public and non-college events. The statement notes that the Center's primary purpose is "truly to serve in some measure to clarify the use of its facilities to any groups working on campus events."

The President of Trinity College wants to know the score on '67 compacts

DEAR REB:

I'm a well-known composer, and I need a new car. The trouble is, I'm just too Bizet to pick one out. And what's more, many of the new cars I see are often bought in the garage for repair. But I do have a good friend who is pleased with his new '67 Dodge Dart. He was given an excellent deal and Berloz any money on it. My Bach is to the wall. Can you help me?

LUDWIG

DEAR REB:

My advice is that you let yourself Ravel in the enjoyment of driving the sporty, all-new Dart for '67. You'll find its Usz price is a lot lower than you'd expect. And even though it's longer outside and bigger inside this year, Dar-I still a great car to handle.

Here's the swinging, man-sized compact for '67 that's got three B's of Britain. The new Dodge Dart is longer, more powerful. But still at that snazzy, compact price. Drop in at your nearest Dodge Dealer's and try it out for yourself.

The Arts Center Director wished to remind students that, after requests to use the theatre have been cleared on the College Calendar at Mather Hall and the dates have been confirmed, the individual responsible for scheduling the dates must check with the Arts Center secretary to determine what personnel, equipment, and expenses will be involved. Nichols attributed the frequency of requests to use the arts facilities to the "great demand for these productions."

The 4-1-4 proposal attempts to solve several problems at the same time. It is a compromise, in a sense, between the 3-3-3 and the 4-1-4 systems. The 3-3-3 system has been criticized for its strict calendar and lack of flexibility, while the 4-1-4 system has been criticized for its large course load and lack of freedom. The 4-1-4 system attempts to balance these factors by allowing students to take a lighter course load than the present system, while also maintaining a certain level of freedom.

The 4-1-4 system is divided into three terms: the fall semester, the spring semester, and the summer term. Each term is six weeks long, and students are required to take at least three courses during each term. This allows students to have a lighter course load than the present system, while also maintaining a certain level of freedom.

The 4-1-4 system also includes a summer term, which is six weeks long and begins immediately after the spring semester. During this term, students are required to take at least one course. This allows students to have a summer break, which is something that is not currently available in the 3-3-3 system.

In conclusion, the 4-1-4 system is a compromise between the 3-3-3 and 4-1-4 systems. It attempts to balance the factors of course load and freedom, while also allowing students to have a summer break. This system may be the best option for those who are looking for a balance between these factors.

The Trinity Tripod

In Loco Preventis: Part One

By C. P. Hill

There is a certain mockery being manifested in our country's peace or war philosophy. The existence of two alternatives, one or the other, is caught, for not only must he be a pacifist or a militarist, there is no middle ground. This hypocrisy has caused me to wonder about our responsibilities, those of us, I am certain, who think we are the beneficiaries of the United States. But what of those who have been placed in a situation where they face the brunt of these regulations? Those who are the recipients of this control and either seek to escape the education offered us in the United States, or remain and suffer, are we not all part of the same activities which were once considered merely a Trinity student and his college, or a college man and the country? It is understood that the United States has a certain responsibility to its citizens, but the same activities which were once considered merely a Trinity student and his college, or a college man and the country, are understood that the United States has a certain responsibility to its citizens, but the same activities which were once considered merely a Trinity student and his college, or a college man and the country, are

What Remains

The Spring Symposium on "Control Over Social Change in a Democracy" has been planned by the cooperation of the student Symposium Planning Committee and various administration officials to assure the success of the symposium, however, much work remains to be done by the student body.

Students cannot fully benefit from the two-day conference unless they have acquired a certain interest in that area of study and would communicate a more positive and stimulating attitude to the rest of the College.

The Symposium Planning Committee in the nature of the Trinity student by giving serious consideration to the conference plan, and by showing its willingness to discuss calendar proposals with the student in-sudy faculty Symposiums.

Pompous Pronouncements

The Spring Symposium is an "In Loco Preventis" as it appears to be a personal code of behavior (the personal code of behavior) and serves the state, there is little doubt that the potentialities for the national social relations of the United States are under attack.

The Symposium Planning Committee is to be greatly complimented for putting such a Symposium on the calendar, and the only students who have more to offer the United States than most citizens escape the education offered us in the United States, or remain and suffer, are we not all part of the same activities which were once considered merely a Trinity student and his college, or a college man and the country? WHERE THE GIRLS ARE (Enlarged)

by Christopher Lees

(WHERE THE GIRLS ARE, by a university staff of the Daily Princetonian. The Dial Press, Inc.)

To know more than a few women's names is a sure sign of a well-rounded education. To be able to talk cooly and casually about the Cliffs, a Smithie, and an Apricot without getting out of breath is a mark of a well-rounded college course.

Peter M. Sandman and others have written and edited what they call "a very special social guide to college women in the U.S.A."

"It's meant to be used," say the editors, "but with a smile.

"It's all we'tl be too dry in your prose. Have another martini, Mr. Sandman."

To be just to this little book, it's about as informative as Time magazine is on God and as devastatingly superficial as Playboy is on sex. But both magazines are very funny and they sell. This book, too.

At worst, WHERE THE GIRLS ARE is good family entertainment. Concerned parents with sons in college will probably sit down at the more easy observations. For example, the Vassar girl "gives more with scotch. She goes down well with bourbon. Even for teas-" indeed, if such exist, she goes...

But why go? But parents will love the book. It says college is such fun.

At best it's useful. Most of the 125 colleges described (or labelled) have their rules and hours more or less accurately noted, and nightspots are named and evaluated.

Weisberg Rails Warren Report

because it distills their preconceived conclusions.

Admitting that the face of the man in the doorway was not clearly discernible, he presented a proof of his own, based on the fact that the man was wearing, in so doing he contrived to present the picture of a man named Billy Nolde Loveljy, Weisberg's name primarily because the special photo enlargement he had made of the skirt showing it to be identical in every detail -- missing bilateral, variable, and fabric -- to the one worn by Oswald when he was arrested.

The speaker also cited a F.B.I. report on a witness who claimed to have seen Oswald in that doorway but was never questioned about it.

The Commission's failure to question the witness about the man in the doorway is evidence of its de- spite to reach a preconceived conclusion, according to Weisberg.

His second major consideration was the bullet which, according to the Commission's "three bullet theory," caused two injuries to Governor Connally. Weisberg maintained that in denying the "three bullet theory" Weisberg maintained that more than three shots were fired and that they had to be fired by more than one person. The Report holds that Oswald fired the three shots within five seconds; according to Weisberg, this is a human impossibility.

The speaker concluded by saying that the Warren Investigation was in effect a "whitewash." He reminded his audience that a "government must not have the intent of perpetrating an injustice unless it is earned."

A disappointing representation of family opinion concerning the 3.3 trimester proposal was obtained by the TRIPOD from the return of four questionnaires distributed to 17 department chairs and selected family members. The survey attempted to ascertain the preference for and feasibility of the trimester plan presented by the Curriculum Committee before the Faculty at the December 13 meeting.

Related questions probed the topics of alternative calendar scheduling, particularly the 4-1-4 "Intercension" program featuring a one month interval for special topics research projects. Arguments for endorsement and condemnation were equally represented; Dr. M. Curtis Langhorne (psychology chairman) and Albert P. Rubin (chairman of the religious studies department) favored the 3.3 proposal, while Governor Andrania, and an anonymous family member opposed the committee proposal.

Langhorne spoke favorably of the trimester plan, citing his personal experience with that calendar system over a three decade period. He pointed out the increased flexibility and advantageous holiday positioning. In addition Langhorne preferred the trimester plan for its accelerated pace and lightened course load, particularly for the upper classes. Rubin echoed the approach of the unburdened vacation and maintained its inauguration, while the opposition opposed the "18 course program."

Unanimous disapproval was registered for the alternative 4-1-4, declaring that "I see no value to anyone in the one part of it particularly," Dr. Langhorne, however, qualified his negative judgment by surmising that "the 4-1-4-3 system is completely different. It is a study of the 4-1-4-3 system." Andrania, however, denied any sentiments of the original which was disposed (or disposable) cheap conversation to college women in the U.S.A."

WHERE THE GIRLS ARE is a re- vival of the original which was published two years ago. But the gloss of fast, fiction, myth and drollery has been warmed over and the jokes are not much funnier, either.

Look for example, in the index where it says, "C.I.A. page 60." This book on page 60 and you will see, "Editor's Note: The following article has been revised and cleared by the Central Intelli- gence Agency."

It was explained that work which is followed by a blank space. There is also one called "Dum-Dum Smithington Cliff College, North Southamton, Massachusetts (tel- phone: 416-221-1313) which was backed by the eighth of the fam- ous family of sisters. Describing the social scene, the article says, "The intelligent element hangs out at the general store; the least dates are unusual ones sitting on the pot-bellied stove."

Again: "Admissions policy con- tinues the majority of M. Smithington students to the dumb-blonde tendency. If you see a truc- kette watch out, she's a wimp -- particularly if she's wearing a miniskirt."

As much for the weak jokes. (Actually, there are more of these than I could be bothered to count.) Thanks to the book is witty in a brittle sort of way and, as one of the four introductions points out, it is quite readable.

"It's meant to be used, says the editors," but with a smile and a face and a double in your mind. The book is sup- posed to have passed through a variety of armpit, rib, wrist, and thigh losing the forced airway in the majority of Mt. Smithington students. According to the same report, the book is supposed to have passed through a variety of armpit, rib, wrist, and thigh losing the forced airway in the majority of Mt. Smithington students.

Can you make it as a modern banker?

A banker today is a lot more than a money specialist who waits for the community to come to him. He's a well-rounded, imaginative individual who knows how to present a package of financial services to fill his client's needs. He's professionally involved with every kind of business, from government to space exploration to problems of emerging nations. And he can't be pigeonholed because versatility is one of the keys to his success.

He has job status and pride of profession. And his compensation and employee benefits are the envy of many.

His training is thorough and guided by experienced seniors who cushion the rough spots and put him on the high road when he's ready in his own mind and deed.

Before you make your big career decision, take a long look at banking. Ambition is the key, and the best way to check yourself out is to set up a give-and-take session with a Chase Manhattan Banker.

One more thing.

Modern banking is in. It asks for versatile, creative, imaginative men who want to range the community, the nation and the whole wide world.

Discuss the possibilities of a career in modern banking. A Chase Manhattan banker will be on campus soon. Your Placement Office will tell you when and where.

With left off in the Trinity-Ashland game and the score tied at 70-70, the game went into overtime. The teams played the overtime period as they did the first half, with each team making a basket and turnover six up the court, reversed, then regained the ball. Just past center, the Trinity floor leader, Captain Don O'Neill, hit a Buzzer-beater, but the referees' count was over and, after consulting, they ruled the basket off. With the clock showing only four touches for the after half, both had perfect days, while Chris Klemm picked up two wins. Mike McLean, competing for the number one spot in the weapon, registering three wins while giving away none.
