Amherst Faces Strike Objecting to Parietals

The Amherst student Council (CUC) has threatened a "school-wide student protest if any independent students are suspended for violation of parietal hour restrictions." The threat is in response to a student administration statement threatening expulsion as punishment for parietal violators. The protest is set to begin Saturday, however, in the form of a "meeting into an AD bull session."

Washington Sees Two-Part Protest: Peaceful, Violent

Western Farce of ‘Miser’; Stage Company Turns Pop

by Steven Bauer

You walk into the Hartford Stage Company the night before the opening of Skinflint Out West, and begin to regret your decision to leave your car outside. The theater, which is undergoing a renovation, is crammed with reporters and photographers. The lights are dimmed, and the stage is set for the opening night of Skinflint Out West. The setting by John Conklin is a contemporary, yet whimsical depiction of a decrepit ranch. Wooden fences, old oil drums, hoop barns, and a weathered barn are all part of the set. You sit back and wait for the play to begin.

Soon it becomes apparent that Cartier has written a farce of a farce. He has taken Moliere out of a European sitting room, having vaguely changed the names to protect the innocent, and he has somehow managed to retain the wit and the bawdy humor of Moliere. In writing a "farcecapone," one runs the risk of creating archetypal characters on the level of Cru- der Red and Hunting. At times during the performance this risk is realized, but often enough the designers succeed in achieving a new creation using Moliere's text. It is a risk which, when done right, is exhilarating. The audience mingled with the cast immediately after the play for an encore from Peter Johnson, Walterapy Cox, and Gunther Renditions of "Jericho" and "Sun- rise" were dispensed to the audiences to Mock Rock. After a half- dozen numbers, the group gave their act a needed shot in the arm with some Molotov-style bongos.

The WORD: Asylum at Last

by Michael Plummer

Here, finally, a week's late, is the word, is the word to the Asylum. But stay away from the place on rainy nights. Bostrops, who are definitely all well, are performing. We'll get back to you on their coming.

Steve McCormick and Joey Reoynolds (yes, THE Joey Reynolds, alias Mr. Mocassin) are Bostrops, a night-club-discotheque with electronic tendencies. There is some evidence that Mr. Reynolds is actually on the wall. One is led to believe that a certain relationship with light is a factor of some mean significance. Of course, this is a relative, mysterious observation. Belief in the cathartic powers of the Asylum is almost completely basic to the motivational pattern of A.

Relationships with the outside world are possible but not necessarily fair, a rate, but the possibility of wasted potential remains if internal fulfillment does not arrive. To hope, verify the possibility that those on the outside, realizing what A has to offer, will enter. To enter, is to join with it, this investigator would like to believe. That the proposal is good to excellent.

McCormick is a tall, boyish Amherstian brought West from Hartford. He did, for a time, have a good time in the Asylum. You might say he paused the wails, if you really want to know. He was there and it was there. He read poetry into himself into the place. That has to be respected. And he is honest.

He'll push a polite reviewer away to admit that the word, the Asylum is a winner. The entire lighting scheme can be displayed in time with the name of the poet. When you are watching the light, one can also get involved looking at about three hundred words on the wall. They are to be called, if not that the top halves are so solid, but the midsections they wear are touching bottom. If you are on the wagon, you can see the Top- tronic tendencies. There is some electronic craftsmanship. There is one of the best-kept secrets of the Asylum. Asylum at Last "The Word; Asylum at Last."

"When they talk about the Asylum, the kids say it's "The Word."

Response to Free Store: Surprise, Enthusiasm

A man's 1-D card, a suite peas-pod-leather, crisp apples, and a copy of the "Calcutta Statesman" are among the many items exchanged at the free store. The Asylum, as it is usually called, is a community-oriented store, and members are given a copy of the "Calcutta Statesman" in exchange for their membership. The store is usually packed on Friday and Saturday nights.

The War Monster

It is getting harder and harder for even the most closed mind of the "over thirty crowd" to dismiss the daily deluge of anti-war protests, demonstrations, vigils, and rallies as the unthinking and misdirected voice of a radical minority. The Washington demonstration to "Confront the War-makers" provides evidence that the war effort has become substantially adopted by both the nation's intellectuals and moderates.

Last year's victory for the censors, newspaper advertisements listing dissenters to the Administration policy, has this year been outgrown both in practicality and in scope. A listing of dissenters is no longer sufficient. As the unattractive and misdirected voice of a radical minority.

The headline makers remain the extremists, the violent, the vio-

High Rise Plans

Floor plans for the high rise dormitory which is presently under construction at North Campus are on display outside Dean Tomat's office. The floor plan shows a typical four-man suite and a floor plan of the lounge and snack bar area on the ground floor. The renderings were done by the interior decorator working with Peter and Cook, the college architects. These preliminary plans were approved by the student-administration advisory committee on dormitories.

Dorm Repairs

Students who have requested work done on their rooms should contact the Assistant Dean of Students if this work has not been completed.

The Interfraternity Council will hold a Smoker with the biology department Thursday at Pi Kappa Alpha at 7:15 p.m. The Smoker will be open to the entire college community and the informal evening of discussion will include Mr. Berger, Van Stone, Child, Calbrunton, and Crawford of the department.

Allen Parking

The College had hoped to allow limited parking in the area immediately behind Allen East and Allen West near the garages. But construction deliveries for the high rise dormitory now make it necessary to strictly enforce a parking ban in that area. Thus, effective Friday, October 20, 1967, no parking will be allowed behind the Allen Place dormitories. Students may park on the east side of the North Campus dormitory.

Colloquium

68 out of 71 English majors cast ballots last week, electing the following as student members of the English Colloquium Planning Committee:
- Class of 1966: Alan Ginsberg, Peter A. Greaves, Walter A. Hastings
- Class of 1965: Richard F. Patterson, Robert A. Netby, William M. Onger

Bull Session...

Improvement of the social opportunities would require large-scale organization.

- Proposed solutions included construction of a new social center and the potential opening of the fraternity to independents. Little progress was made on the social question, however, since independent option was not represented. Brookes asserted that under fraternity open house system the independents would feel awkward and would consequently hesitate to attend. The group agreed that even if the plan did work, it could not solve the entire problem. John Foote said, however, that the role of fraternities was to help, and not to solve completely, the social dilemma.

Bryan Green '65, an originator of the session, expressed his disagreement of the new system. He emphasized the importance of the Educational Policy Subcommittee. In his opinion, the committee did not make an adequate effort to get a broad picture of student opinion. Charles Penick '70 felt that under the senior dormitory system, the fraternities would be compelled to admit students they would not have ordinarily taken. Separating the seniors, said Glenn Gayle '68, would hurt underclassmen by eliminating inter-class contact.

Winlow led a discussion regarding College development. He expressed his belief that in the future the College will have to be less conservative in its investment policy.

The group discussed the First Challenge Grant, which Winlow termed "great" because its application is unrestricted. He explained that the funds will be channeled into programs in non-scholarship facilities, the Life Science building, the Winlow Library, and scholarships.

Winlow stated that presently the College has no long-term growth plans that includes large land acquisitions. He noted, however, that the College has purchased off-campus land on Crown Street, New Britain Avenue, Allen Place, and Vernon Street.

Unfailing Trinity cross-country captain Bill Shortell again crossed at the line first in leading the varsity harriers to a 19-36 victory over Southern Connecticut. The 4.4 mile run across the sprawling Connecticut campus was staged Friday and Shortell recorded a 23:21 minute finish.

Sophomore Chuck Hosking puffed home third and three other Blue-and-Gold runners took fourth, fifth and sixth: Moore, Howard and Vanderlip.

Meanwhile the frosh stretched their losing streak to two as Southern Connecticut managed a 18-44 rout. John Durland, finishing third, was a meet the Bantams lost 25-32.
