President's Message

Our 121st Commencement and 124th Anniversary Celebration will take place this year on June 13, 14, 15 and 16. Reunion classes are well along in their plans for dinners and many have already secured their rooms. Since many members of non-reunion classes will be returning, John Mason and Bill Peelle are making special plans for the 1823 Dinner. This year Class Day will be revived for the first time since the war, and there will be many other events designed to make this a long remembered weekend.

The class officers and alumni association heads are writing to their classmates and to Trinity alumni in their area urging them to return this June. I wish to add my personal invitation to theirs. You will have an opportunity not only to renew your old friendships but also to hear about the wonderful progress that has been made this year on the 125th Anniversary Development Program. It is my hope that all of you will plan to return and help make this a memorable occasion.

Reunion

To make your reunion arrangements as simple as possible this year we are sending out general notices early so that you may mark on the enclosed post card the events which you plan to attend.

Reunion Classes:
1894 1897 1907 1917 1927 1937 1895 1902 1912 1922 1932 1942

Dormitory Accommodations: As usual, rooms in the College dormitories will be available at a charge of $1.00 per night. This includes everything necessary for a comfortable night's sleep. Keys should be obtained in the Alumni Office, Jarvis 19, when you register.

For those arriving early the beer tent will be available from four o'clock until dinner Friday.

Friday Night Dinner: There will be a special dinner for alumni, faculty and seniors in Cook Dining Hall at 6:30 p.m. Again we urge you to make your reservations on the enclosed post card so that we may accommodate you. After the dinner there will be a number of movies of the College and its activities available for those who wish to see them. Cost — $1.00.

The Alumni Luncheon: In order to provide properly for the large number of returning alumni it is necessary to charge $1.00 for the Alumni Luncheon to cover a part of the cost. This will be the usual buffet luncheon and it is hoped that all alumni will attend.

Baseball Game: Ray Oosting hopes to secure an opponent for the College nine. The Hartford Alumni Softball Champs are ready to take on all challengers.

President's Reception: President and Mrs. Funston extend to all Alumni and their friends as well as the Seniors and their families an invitation to a reception to be held on the lawn of the President's house.

1823 Dinner: This dinner is given for returning alumni of non-reunion classes. Arrangements are being made to hold this dinner at the University Club. An early reservation will reserve you a good seat at the dinner. These reservations should be made through the office of the Alumni Secretary. Cost — $2.50.

Meals: The College Dining Hall will be open for breakfast everyday from 7:30 to 9:00, and it will be open for luncheon on Sunday from 12:30 until 1:30 p.m.
EXERCISES: This year we are returning to the custom of previous years of holding Open Air and Baccalaureate exercises as separate events.

REUNION CLASSES: They will be contacted by their class agents for special reunion dinners.

Please fill out the enclosed post card promptly.

Sir Alfred Zimmern

ON FOUR consecutive Thursday evenings from February 27 through March 20 the students and friends of Trinity had the opportunity of hearing a series of lectures by Sir Alfred Zimmern, the eminent British scholar and public servant. Sir Alfred came to Hartford in early February to visit a friend on the College faculty. He accepted an invitation to deliver a course of lectures and insisted upon giving them as a gift to the College.

Sir Alfred Zimmern has successfully combined a brilliant academic career with distinguished service to the British government. A graduate of Winchester and Oxford, he served at Oxford as tutor, lecturer, and finally as Professor of International Relations and Fellow of New College. In the first war he was in the Foreign Office and in the late war he was deputy director of research in the same department. He was one of the leading British negotiators on the Preparatory Commission of UNESCO in 1944-1946. Sir Alfred is the author of numerous books on history, international affairs and political science. He has received honorary degrees from English and Dominion universities. He and Lady Zimmern founded the world famous General School of International Studies which exercised a profound influence on students of foreign affairs who trained there.

Sir Alfred’s lectures were well attended by students and townspeople as well. Fifty professors and teachers of the social sciences from colleges and schools in Connecticut attended the third lecture which was preceded by a dinner where the distinguished Briton was feted by the History Department.

Sir Alfred’s lectures were devoted to an analysis of the World Crisis. He designed them, not as a commentary on current events, but as an investigation into some of the deeply rooted distortions and misconceptions which have combined to produce a situation of crisis proportions.

In his first lecture Sir Alfred spoke of the nature of the crisis which he described as the simultaneous emergence of a number of crises. He stated that the tendency to look at one face of the world situation only was misleading and inaccurate for it disregarded the intermingling of the various types of crisis. “What are we experiencing today,” he said, “is a crisis within a crisis within a crisis within a crisis.” He therefore bespoke the attention of his audience to an analysis of some of the fundamentals which marked these crises. Of basic importance is the contradiction involved in national sovereignty as against the sovereignty of law. A legacy of the French Revolution, the idea of nationalism emerged in the last century and drove peoples into national groups which were not under the rule of law but under various petty absolutes. Such a condition breeds war because it sets no limit on states except the will of the sovereign. This important misconception, Sir Alfred claimed, was at the bottom of the international picture of many decades. In his lecture on the social and economic crisis Sir Alfred emphasized the importance of defining accurately the vocabulary of economic and social discussions. He denied that there was any such thing as economic system. Instead he spoke of social systems and economic processes and warned his audience against accepting the terminology of Marxism and thereby endangering a sound and independent analysis of economic questions. In a lecture entitled the “Crisis in Human Self-Respect” Sir Alfred spoke of culture, civilization and way of life and warned that we must reorientate our thinking toward non-white peoples. In his lecture on the political crisis he emphasized the need, in this atomic age, for a UN executive.

Sir Alfred’s arguments, brilliantly presented, did a great deal to stimulate discussion on the campus and elsewhere. And Trinity College by making them available to people in Hartford was able to offer an intellectual opportunity to the community which was widely appreciated.
Romance Language Department

It is my privilege to introduce to the alumni the staff of the Department of Romance Languages at Trinity College and to give a brief sketch of the career of each of us.

Gustav William Andrian was graduated from Trinity in 1940. As the recipient of the H. E. Russell Fellowship, he began his graduate studies in the Romance Language Department of the Johns Hopkins University, where he stayed until 1943, when he was appointed instructor in the Army Specialized Training Program at the University of Maryland. At the conclusion of the Army Program, Andrian returned to Johns Hopkins to continue his studies and to teach in the College for Teachers of that university. In 1945 he was appointed Assistant Professor of Romance Languages at the University of Maryland and the following year, upon receiving his doctorate from Johns Hopkins, he was appointed Assistant Professor of Romance Languages at Trinity.

Robert Palmer Waterman majored in Romance Languages at Trinity where he was a member of the class of 1931. He has done graduate work at Trinity, the Middlebury French School and Yale, as well as at the University of Paris. After teaching at St. Mark's School and Kingswood Country Day School, he was instructor in Romance Languages at Trinity from 1936 to 1938, at which time he went to Amherst College. In addition to teaching there he served as Assistant to the Dean, and in the first part of the war was a member of the faculty group chosen to teach in the Army's Foreign Area and Language Program operating at Amherst. In 1944 he volunteered for duty with the Office of Strategic Services, serving in England and in France, where he was awarded the Croix de Guerre in 1945 for his work with the Maquis and in the regular French Army. Returning to the United States in the same year he was Special Assistant in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of War, until the summer of 1946 when he returned to civilian life in order to resume teaching.
Louis Charles LaBreque, Jr., was graduated from Syracuse University in 1941. He entered the army in August of that year, went overseas (England) in the summer of 1943, and at the time of the invasion was an interpreter with the 29th Division. Seriously wounded in Northern France, he was returned to England, then transferred to the Information-Education Branch of the Ground Forces Reinforcement Command in Paris. Upon his discharge from the service in the fall of 1945, he entered Trinity College as a graduate student, receiving his M.A. the following spring. While still a graduate student he became an assistant in the Department of Romance Languages. In September 1946, he was appointed Instructor in Romance Languages.

Last of all I shall mention some of the important landmarks in my own career. At the time of my graduation from the Johns Hopkins University in June 1917, the first World War was going on; I was rejected as too light in weight for military service. I taught French and Latin for two years at St. James School, Washington Co., Maryland, and I am very glad to have this opportunity to express my deep gratitude to the Headmaster of St. James School, Mr. Adrian H. Onderdonk, for his invaluable advice and helpful guidance in my first teaching position. I owe my present post at Trinity College in very large measure to Mr. Onderdonk, and I repeat that he has been a very great influence in my life.

In 1919 I was fortunate enough to be awarded a Fellowship offered by the Belgian Relief Commission for one year's residence and study in Belgium. I studied at the University of Liege. Of all the interesting events crowded into my year abroad, the most memorable was a visit to the house of the late Cardinal Mercier in the little Flemish town of Malines. Many of the alumni will recall that Cardinal Mercier was the recipient of a Trinity LL.D. on the occasion of his trip to the United States in 1918.

Upon my return to America I completed my work for the Ph.D. at the Johns Hopkins University in 1923 under the able direction of Professor Lancaster and Professor Chinard. I received my appointment at Trinity College on July 1st, 1923, and so, at the end of June this year I shall have completed my twenty-fourth year in the Department of Romance Languages.

The Department is very much gratified to have the opportunity to offer adequate instruction in Spanish. In the person of Gustav W. Andrian, '40, we have a well-trained and enthusiastic teacher, capable of offering sound linguistic training in the spoken language and an appreciative understanding of Spanish literature. We hope that advanced courses in Spanish will soon be a regular part of the curriculum.

Elementary and second-year French courses are so large at present that each of them is being offered in six sections. We are fortunate to have the services of Robert Daly, M.A. '26, Joseph Stookins, an instructor at Loomis, and Morton W. Briggs from Wesleyan, who are with us on a part-time basis, to help with instruction in these courses.

Mark Twain Settles the Matter

Many examples of the wit and delightful personality of America's great humorists never found a way into their writing, but are recorded only in the hearts and minds of their contemporaries. Or sometimes, as in this case, stray bits of aged newspaper clippings, from which we gleaned the following story.

Back in 1886 the friends of Trinity College were very much afraid that the Rev. Dr. George Williamson Smith, who had so successfully filled the President's chair, would accept the assistant bishopric of the Diocese of Ohio. The faculty urged him to stay as head of the College, as did the students, who drew up a petition, which they signed to a man. The Cleveland Leader of December 19 stated that President Smith had written to Cleveland that he could not decide about the Ohio offer until after Christmas, and printed the following letter from Mark Twain to President Smith:

Farmington Avenue
Hartford, Conn.
Lection Day, 1886

Dear Mr. Smith —

Here is some more of it in the Times this evening. Now we want to beseech you to tell those Ohio people — and make it sharp and strong, so that they will understand — that people are very well satisfied with you where you are, and are tired of this intermeddling. We can’t afford to furnish bishops for every Maryland and Ohio that comes along, and we cannot have ourselves being annoyed and made uneasy all the time this way. Of course it is a delicate thing for you to write those people the kind of letter needed, and so if you would rather have me do it, I will attend to it, and it will probably be best all around to fix it that way. I can say very strong things when I am warmed up, and I am warmed up now. I can write a letter that will just make those people never mind about details. You turn the whole thing over into my hands, leave this Ohio insurrection to me — I’ll make short work of it.

Sincerely yours,

(signed) S. L. Clemens

Weeks later the Trinity College Alumni Association enjoyed its annual dinner at Delmonico’s, and at the same time celebrated a matter of great importance to the college. Dr. Smith had declined the Bishopric for the second time since his presidency. The graduates turned out in full force and made the dinner the most successful the Association had yet held. Mr. William G. Davies, ’60, began the speech-making, and President Smith was received with cheers. After an eloquent speech by the Rev. D. Parker Morgan, the president of the Association announced that he was going “to turn Mark Twain loose.” The latter spoke in part as follows:

“I don’t know why I am here except in the character of a constable. I don’t know just what game is going on here, but to my notion it is just a matter of a vacuum in some diocese again. I think that there is a conspiracy here, and that there is a bishop in the meal somewhere. I saw no apprentice hand in this conspiracy, and I want to be frank and tell you that the best way to keep the place is to go bishoping somewhere else. I no sooner persuade one diocese to take a walk than another comes up, and I’m getting suspicious. A gentleman looked at me yesterday and I said, “I can’t accept a diocese.” Now I was all wrong. He was only trying to collect a milk bill. But honestly, we want to keep our president. (Cheers) A college president must be of that rare breed of men whom students love to obey, such as our Smith. Promote him? Away with your minor titles. He stands on the summit. He’s a builder of men. (Loud cheers)”

John F. Butler

Placement Bureau Director

John F. Butler has been appointed Director of the Placement Bureau as of March 20. His duties will consist in career counseling with the undergraduates, and he will be in charge of placement work for students and alumni.

Mr. Butler prepared for college at the Hartford High School. At Trinity he majored in history and economics, and was a member of the debating society and played on the soccer team. He is a member of Alpha Chi Rho.

Graduating with a B.S. degree in 1933, he joined the tax department of the Hartford Connecticut Trust Company. In 1942 he left to become an expediter with the Bigelow Sanford Carpet Company, and from 1943 to 1945 was a field director with the American Red Cross attached to the Combat Engineer Training Center at Camp Abbott, Oregon, and Fort Lewis, Washington.

Since the war Mr. Butler has been executive assistant to the president of Kolodney and Myers, Inc., Hartford. He is married to the former Miss Grace Smith, daughter of the late Mayor Edward L. Smith, and they have one son, Sean.

Best Sellers

Editors Note: Dr. Allen delivered the following talk on the Trinity Radio Series over Station WDRC last winter.

AREN'T best seller lists rather bad things? Don't they make all Americans rush like a flock of sheep to read eight or ten books, while eight or ten hundred others, probably just as good, get practically no readers at all? Why must we all be alike? Carry the thing a little further, and we can imagine every American reader turning from page 326 to page 327 of an only seller, Love in a Ramjet by Jane Whizzleheimer at 8:37, Friday evening, January 10, 1967. Only perhaps by then it won't be a matter of turning pages, as all books will be televised. Anyway, do we want to be regimented as we are?

I think we do, and for a very good reason. People like to talk to each other about books they have both read. I don't know how many novels are published in the United States each year — certainly over 500. How many novels does the average person read a year? Say ten. Then if the reading were equally distributed over the 500, you would have one chance in 50 of talking to someone who had read the same book you had. As it is, the best seller list tends to guide our choice so that there can be some social give and take in book chat.

That would be a good idea, you say, if the ten best sellers are the ten best books — but are they? Was Hungry Hill the best 1943 could produce, or Forever Amber the best jewel of 1944? But what do you mean by "best"? Best for what? For whom? Forever Amber would be extremely highbrow reading for Mortimer Snurd, while Charles McCarthy might find it right up his alley. The two books which consistently sell the very best are the Bible and the Boston Cooking School Cook Book, which certainly have little in common. No one of us would pick out the ten best sellers as being the ten best books of the year — but Mr. and Mrs. Average picked them out.

How did they pick them out? About half merit, and half chance. About 1850 years ago a popular comic writer in Rome said that the dry winter needed new jokes, but he wasn't sure of making much of a hit when he tried to supply the demand, since paper was his dicebox and paper was his dice — chance decided whether his books would succeed or not. And chance seems to have largely decided ever since which books would be best sellers and which would be remaindered — which in his day meant being used to wrap up olives and fried fish.

The Romans had a well-organized publishing trade, by the way, with editions of from 500 to 1,000, and they could get out a fairsized edition in a few hours — all handwritten. They managed it ingeniously — divided up the author's manuscript into sections, and a reader read aloud each section to a considerable number of copyists. Many hands made quick work, and slave labor made cheap work — ordinary books cost about a quarter. The authors wrote their own advertising copy, but even so they didn't make much money.

The term "best seller" is less than fifty years old, but the thing has always existed, since the first author, who was a caveman and published picture-books on the walls of his cave, and probably charged admittance to the reading public. Doubtless some caves were much more popular than others; and I expect that there was luck entering into it even then. Some Cro-Magnon lady would see that all her friends went to a particularly handsome author's publication party. For as history has had king makers, literature has had best seller makers — Dr. Johnson was one — all the young authors sent him presentation copies of their books, and any he approved of became successes. In our own day William Lyon Phelps and Alexander Woolcott were sent all the new books, too, and either of them could personally make a book successful if he liked it enough.

Of course there have always been two kinds of best sellers — one the long-steady-pull kind, the other the flash-in-the-pan kind. An example of the first is Thoreau's Week on the Concord — never was there such a failure — as I remember it, there was a printing of a thousand, which didn't sell. So Thoreau carted them all back to his garret in Concord, and boasted that he was the only author with a library of a thousand books, 760 of them his own works. Thoreau's fame was like goldenrod — it bloomed late; the second edition of Walden didn't come until after his death, but then editions kept coming, and this winter beautifully illustrated ones have appeared, a hundred years late. I have no idea how many copies of Walden have been sold during the century, but enough to make a good many authors on today's list envious — and his sales have just started! An example of the flash-in-the-pan — bright as lightning but as brief — might be Forever Amber, or The Manatee, whose advertising was a lot more readable than the books themselves. What started the public buying, I expect, were the two advertising pictures — on the one hand, a picture of the authoress, for whom the word "photogenic" might have been coined, or in the latter case, that of a ship's figurehead, with a particularly robust mermaid whose pneumatic protuberance had to be reduced one-sixteenth of an inch before the New York Times would accept the advertising copy. Of course the sale of Forever Amber was further helped by the fact that it was banned in Boston, as was 1944's best best seller, Strange Fruit. It is odd that the publishers have never banded together to give a thanksgiving plaque to the Watch and Ward Society as being their best advertising agency — perhaps the professional men's jealousy prevented it.

Besides the two kinds of best sellers I have mentioned, the slow but steady classics and the fast but short-lived scandals, there is a third kind — the books which go with a bang but also keep on going. These novels are usually long ones — the reader feels he's getting his money's worth in bulk; and they are apt to be more or less historical — the reader can feel that he's not only being entertained, but is improving his mind too. These books are not classics, but they are read for decades instead of for months. Almost down below the horizon now are Kingsley's Westward Ho and Blackmore's Lorna Doone, whose heroine my mother always called her favorite character, and who certainly had a melodious name. Then there was Lew Wallace's Ben Hur. One of the thrills of my boyhood (which like the more famous tree, grew in Brooklyn) was to see the real chariot race in Ben Hur when the book was dramatised — at least I heard a tremendous noise and saw through a tremendous cloud of dust a peacock white nag and a brown one trotting on a wooden treadmill. It was the biggest and noisiest triumph of state realism until the Hippodrome chorus girls marched down into the water and disappeared, or until the rains descended in Maugham's play Rain. But Ben Hur was written by a United States Army general, and had a right to be spectacular.

Two others of this substantial sort were Hervey Allen's Anthony Adverse, a double-header, first on the best seller lists of 1933 and 1934, and Gone With the Wind, by Margaret Mitchell, heading 1936 and 1937. Imagination would have to do quite a lot of stretching before any of these could be called great books, but their vitality has been substantial as compared with their thousands of competitors.

Looking back at it, that 1936, when the wind first went, was quite a year — the Rome-Berlin Axis appeared, and Edward VIII said, "At long last." Also we had a list of best sellers probably unsurpassed for quality: It Can't Happen Here, Sinclair Lewis' attack on Fascism; The Hurricane by Nordhoff and Hall, which our 101 men on Palmyra Island have just been reliving; The Thinking Reed by Rebecca West; and Eyeless in Gaza by Aldous Huxley. None of these are great books, but their combined literary quality makes earlier best seller lists look like marshmallow salads. And it was in 1936 that the oddest best seller ever to appear was second on the list: Santayana's The Last Puritan.

I cannot imagine how it ever got there. It was by a professional philosopher, and it showed it — practically no plot, psychological analyses pretending to be characters, a minimum of any kind of sex, a depressing, melancholy atmosphere of failure — what did the hundreds of thousands of purchasers think of it after they'd gotten it, and how many finished it, or got half way through it? I am afraid that they bought it purely for prestige value — "See, I can be highbrow, too." At any rate, it was the greatest compliment the American public ever paid to current literature, for it was a far finer book than any modern one I have mentioned so far, as you can discover if you — not read, but re-read it. Not only did we compliment literature, we complimented ourselves, and nothing as excellent has appeared before or since so high on the list of best sellers.

The candidate for this class of substantial novels that is now on the present list of best sellers seems to be the Shepards' Holdfast Gaines. An encouraging sign is that it has climbed from the bottom of the list to sixth place; this shows, I believe, that it has real power in it to interest its readers, and to move them. It combines frontier realism with a warm glow of American idealism, so that we feel proud of our country without being conceited about it. It is generally conceded that women are the purchasers who determine the large sales of books. It has also been generally conceded, at least by male critics, that women want romantic and sentimental books. Judging from the best sellers of the past, the Gene Stratton Porter, Temple Bailey and Ethel Dell books, women demand lots of love-making under distressful circumstances, but with chastity of deed, and an attitude which verges on the maternal. Now there is rather little love-making in Holdfast Gaines and what there is tends toward self-denial; the hero and heroine don't have much to do with each other except giving each other up. And the viewpoint is more paternal than motherly; it is a masculine book. Either the virtues of the novel outweigh its sentimental deficiencies, or else women readers are not such soft snaps as they used to be for the blatantly sentimental. I should not be surprised if we Americans were to show that our taste in all the arts has considerably improved, and especially our taste in reading.

Yet, best sellers are certainly not the best books, by any single standard; any year's list is a queer mixture—worthy and unworthy, glad and sad, sentimental and cynical. No author and no publisher can possibly know whether a new book is going to sell one thousand or five hundred thousand copies. Paper is still the dice, and paper is the dicebox.

Rodney J. MacGregor Memorial Scholarship

The Hartford Electric Light Company has announced the establishment of a Trinity College Scholarship as a memorial to the one young man in its employ who gave his life in action in World War II. It will be known as the Rodney J. MacGregor Memorial Scholarship.

A graduate of Hall High, West Hartford, Mr. MacGregor volunteered for service in February 1942, and graduated from Ellington Field, Texas, a lieutenant in the air force. He died in action in the Mediterranean area July 11, 1943. He was awarded the Air Medal for conspicuous service, and the Purple Heart.

The scholarship will start this September, and under the terms the company will contribute $500 during 1947 to 1950 to Trinity College to be awarded to a member of each entering freshman class. The recipient will continue to hold the scholarship throughout his four years of college provided he continues to meet the scholastic requirements. Those eligible will be employees of the Hartford Electric Light Company, sons or legal male dependents of active or pensioned employees, sons or legal male dependents of employees who died while actively employed or while pensioned by the company. If none of the above meet the College requirements, the company reserves the right to make the scholarship available to any member of the freshman class selected by Trinity who resides in the area served by the company, and who otherwise qualifies.

Mr. Austin D. Barney, president of the Light Company, stated that one of the primary considerations for the scholarships will be financial need, and preference will be given to those who are not eligible under the G. I. Bill of Rights, since this bill provides veterans with educational benefits.

All applications for scholarships will be submitted directly to Trinity, and the company will not participate in the selection of candidates.

Trinity College is very grateful that she has been selected by the Hartford Electric Light Company for this memorial scholarship. It is indeed a "living memorial," and a most practical method of honoring a man who has given his life for freedom.

Burgwin Legacy

The late Hill Burgwin, '06, has left a legacy to Trinity College of $2500 which the Trustees have voted to place in the newly established "Alumni Fund Endowment."
His will says in part: "I direct that this legacy shall be added to and invested with the consolidated or general endowment fund of the College. I request that this fund be entitled Permanent Alumni Fund or other appropriate title and I express the hope that its foundation will encourage others to make gifts to it in memory of deceased alumni."

His gift will found a permanent endowment for the Alumni Fund, and gifts of $100 and over will be gratefully accepted for this purpose. The income from the "Alumni Fund Endowment" will be credited annually to the Alumni Fund.

Mr. Burgwin's legacy will be the start of the "Alumni Fund Endowment" and it is indeed gratifying that such a loyal alumnus should be the first to have his name permanently memorialized.

Pi Gamma Mu

Pi Gamma Mu, national social science honor society, held its annual initiation on May 7 in Woodward Lounge and inducted Governor James L. McConaughy, Hon. '26; Sir Alfred Zimmern; Professors Christopher Salmon, D. G. Brinton Thompson and Wilbert S. Ray; and ten undergraduates: Lewis S. Dabney, Pasquale H. Fiorita, Paul Groebli, Jr., Edward H. Jawin, Barney Lapp, Theodore D. Lockwood, Edmund C. Platt, II, David K. W. Wilson, Charles F. Withington and Edmund Woodward.

The Society was founded in 1924, and the Trinity College Chapter, Connecticut Alpha, received its charter in 1936. The Society has as its purpose the recognition of outstanding scholarship in the social sciences and is also designed to reward achievements in public service. Undergraduate members are elected from the Senior and Junior classes who have completed at least twenty hours of work in the social studies with a grade of B or better. Alumni, faculty and friends of the College who have demonstrated signal achievement in either scholarship or public service are also eligible for membership.

Professor Humphrey is the honorary president, and Professor Troxell is secretary-treasurer. Last year the Society elected President Funston to membership.

State Representative Luke F. Martin

The District of Thomaston, Connecticut, has sent to Capitol Hill, Hartford, Luke F. Martin, a junior at Trinity. Martin, who is twenty-six years old, is a Democrat, and he represents a district that has been continuously Republican for over thirty years.

After graduating from Thomaston High, Mr. Martin went to Columbia University night school. He served as a captain in the field artillery in the European theatre for eighteen months, and entered Trinity after his discharge.

Representative Martin plans to attend law school after his graduation next year and hopes to continue in public life. Now he commutes from Thomaston to morning classes which are over before the General Assembly convenes. He is a member of the Committee on Veterans Affairs, and also the Public Information Committee.

As we go to press the Hartford Citizens Campaign is organized and ready to start solicitation for the 125th Anniversary Development Program.

Other sections of the country are hard at work under their alumni chairmen.

President Funston visited the Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh alumni and the final reports should bring excellent results from these areas.
Basketball - 1897

Thanks to the Rev. Percival M. Wood, who played on Trinity’s first basketball team in 1897, we relate incidents of the game’s origin here fifty years ago. Dr. Elton G. Littell, ’99, Haslet M. Glazebrook, ’00, and Colonel E. Kearsley Sterling, ’99, are the other living members of this team.

It is our belief that these men participated in the first intercollegiate competition in the United States, for although the game originated in Springfield in 1891, we can find no record of colleges playing one another before 1897.

“As I look back now, the evolution of basketball at Trinity was simple and quite normal. The game was originated in nearby Springfield in the early nineties and came to us via the gym classes. It was the usual wind-up of class exercises — first the dumb-bells, Indian clubs, check weights, and then the class basketball scrimmage. We practised in Alumni Hall, but played most of the “home” games at the Y. George Velte was the coach, and a good one too.

“The first year we played with local teams in and around Hartford, also college games, with fair results. Total games played, 13: won 8 lost 5. The best achievement of the year was the Triangular Intercollegiate League a semi-formal arrangement of games by Yale-Wesleyan-Trinity. Both Yale and Trinity won from Wesleyan (Y-32, W-4) (T-26, W-5). Trinity evened up with Yale. In each game, the winner took the game by two points and, indeed, put basketball on the map at Trinity. He seemed born to the game, caught its spirit and sensed its possibilities. As a goal thrower he was superb, hitting his mark with a mathematical accuracy that gave promise even then — we see it now — of his future good work at high calculations as Dr. Luther’s assistant in Math, and later as professor in the Department.”

Winter Sports Review

Both Trinity basketball teams had splendid seasons with the Varsity winning twelve and losing five, and the Junior Varsity triumphing eleven times to five losses.

The Varsity had a difficult schedule with ten games away and seven at home. After a fine start of eight straight wins, the string was snapped by Springfield College in a hard fought game. Wesleyan nosed us out at home, 34-42, and at Middletown, 50-59, in exciting contests. The team played well against Harvard at Cambridge, but never could overcome an early lead and lost 50-63. Victories were racked up against Middlebury, Coast Guard, Amherst (for the second time), Tufts and Union. The final game on March 12 against Yale in New Haven was a thriller.
Red Faber, captain-elect of the 1948 team and winner of the Arthur P. R. Wadlund basketball award donated by Paul Trigg, '36 for the most valuable team player

Dick Kirby, who did not score a point in the first half, wound up with 16, and tied with Yale's Tony Lavelli for the game's top honors. From a half time deficit of 32-17, the Hilltoppers pulled up to 44-40. Yale stayed ahead and with four minutes to play was leading by two points. A desperate sprint by the Blue left the final score, Yale 59, Trinity 53.

The prospects for next year's team look very bright for Captain-elect Red Faber. Only diminutive Dick Kirby and veteran Hal Hayes will graduate. There are several boys on the Junior Varsity who have developed tremendously this season and who should see much service.

Joe Clarke's swimming team had a fair season, defeating Boston University, Worcester Tech. and Coast Guard, while losing to M.I.T., Amherst, Williams, Bowdoin and Wesleyan. The Coast Guard meet was won in the final relay. Captain Jack Tyler did well in the sprints, and his brother, Bob, the Captain-elect, was a steady winner in the 220 and 440.

The squash team defeated Wesleyan and Amherst for its first intercollegiate victories in this sport. The team lost to Williams, Harvard, Yale and Army. In the final match Wesleyan avenged her earlier defeat. Dick Weisenfluh, until he hurt his shoulder, played an exceptionally strong game, and easily won the Newton C. Brainard trophy for the college championship.

Baseball

Old Man Winter swept south with the ball team during the Easter vacation as snow prevented the playing of the Washington & Lee and North Carolina games. Against Davidson Joe Julavits scattered nine hits and struck out eight while his mates pounded several long blows and fielded well. Trinity 12, Davidson 2.

Continuing South the team conquered Furman, 8 to 2, with Jack Scully, John Chapin and Bob Wilson scattering four hits. Hal Heintz had four out of five, and Bill Powell's homer was a big smash.

Wofford College nosed out Trinity 3 to 2 in a pitcher's battle. Harvey of Wofford allowed but four hits and struck out six with his fireball. Red Faber and Bill Leahy combined for Trinity's runs.

The Loyola contest was rained out and the team completed its spring tour by losing to a strong Rutgers team, 6 to 1.

This is the most extensive spring tour in recent years. Next year's trip will not cover so much territory, but games with Navy, William and Mary, and the University of Maryland have been scheduled, and it is hoped that more will be booked in this area.

On April 11, Trinity fell before the Army's undefeated team, 10 to 5. Jack Mackmull of the Cadets allowed three hits and two unearned runs in the seven innings he pitched as well as getting three safeties himself. Trin threatened in the eighth and ninth innings with three runs, but the damage had been done by Captain Glenn Davis, the football star, and his mates. Bob Barrows, Trinity's right fielder, had his eye on the ball for two solid hits.

The team played well against Yale, but a pinch hit single by Elwell of the Blue in the ninth scored the game's only run.

Track

It is too early to predict about the 1947 track team's success. Ed Lemieux, former Hartford High Star, has an excellent chance to shatter Mort Crehore's two mile record of ten minutes and ten seconds made in 1913.

Ray Oosting has several strong prospects working out including Ray Halsted who holds the college high hurdle record of 15 9/10 seconds.

Captain-elect Parker Carleton, sprint star and co-holder of the 100 yard dash, did not return to college.
Michael A. Connor
1887-1947

The College lost a faithful son when on April 25th "MIKE" CONNOR suddenly passed away. Since the first day that he stepped on the campus he maintained his interest in Trinity. The Halden Engineering Laboratory was constructed last fall by his firm, and this winter he was an advance gifts team captain for the 125th Anniversary Development Program.

In Hartford and in Connecticut his activities were widespread: Soldier; State Senator; State Motor Vehicles Commissioner; President of the Hartford Board of Police Commissioners; a Member of the Local Welfare Board; Assistant Adjutant General and Quartermaster General of Connecticut; a Director of the Newington Home for Crippled Children; State Chairman of the United Service to China.

"Mike" continued the clean play of his college baseball days in everything he undertook. His enthusiasm and personality will long be remembered.

It is with deep regret that we learn of the death of Mrs. Adrian H. Onderdonk, wife of Adrian H. Onderdonk, '99, former headmaster of St. James School, St. James, Maryland. She was a frequent visitor on our campus, and was known by many students other than the St. James alumni. Her cheery smile and bounding enthusiasm for all that is good in life will be missed by many.

To her husband, and her sons Adrian, Jr., '34, Bruce, '37, and Dick, '48, we extend our deepest sympathy.

The directors of the Almada Lodge-Hartford Times Camp for underprivileged children have written the following resolution of regret concerning Mr. and Mrs. JOSEPH C. CLARKE, who will be unable to accept appointments as directors this summer: "Since the day they were first employed, April 23, 1931, they have been rendering service far beyond the duties of camp director and assistant. They have always been unselsh and self-sacrificing in their aid to the many hundreds of underprivileged children who have enjoyed vacations at the camp. They have contributed to the improvement of the children's health and to their understanding of good citizenship and have guided them toward better opportunities to live constructively than otherwise might have been possible. The directors are deeply indebted to them for all of their interest."

PROFESSOR CONSTANT represented Trinity at a closed meeting March 15 at Yale to discuss plans for the new Brookhaven, N. Y., research project in the peacetime application of atomic energy.
PROFESSOR COOPER will address the Hartford Junior Women's Club at the Hotel Bond on May 18. Subject: the British Empire.

PROFESSOR EMERSON spoke on the origin of the energy of the atom and the evolution of the sun and stars before the New England Association of Chemistry Teachers. This meeting was held at Trinity in the Chemistry Auditorium on March 22.

MR. GLASSNER became the father of a son, Edward Lawrence, born December 8.

MR. NILSON has published a review of Works of Love by Soren Kierkegaard in the January Philosophical Review.

MR. OGLIVY won the International Star Class spring sailing championship at Nassau on April 3.

PROFESSOR RAY lectured to the Hartford Police Academy on March 6 and 27 on "The Psychology of Testimony."

PROFESSOR SHAW has been re-elected to the Board of Trustees of Rollins College for another term of five years. On April 11, he participated in the Burke Society conference of Fordham University. This society promotes the study of political and international relations in the light of principles and traditions that have been characteristic of the international society of Christendom.

PROFESSOR TAYLOR became the father of a son, William Albert, on March 9.

PROFESSOR THOMPSON addressed the Hartford Kiwanis Club on April 17. Subject: "American and Canadian Relations.

PROFESSOR TOWLE has published a new textbook, International Trade and Commercial Policy. On March 20 he addressed a meeting of the Employment Managers of Meriden and Wallingford at Meriden.

PROFESSORS TOWLE and RAY represented the Trinity Chapter of the American Association of University Professors at the 39th annual meeting held in Boston, February 22.
