A hard-fighting basketball team soundly upset the experts and pre-season departed to win the Ivy League Tournament behind a near-perfect record of six wins and only one loss.

The team went off to a fine start with decisive margins over Brown, MIT, the University of Massachusetts, and before the fourth game, against a powerful and consistently talented Williams club, did that lasso into the losing column.

This team's performance to date has surpassed everyone, including Coach Oosting. In pre-season estimates, the outlook was not as bright, but the Hilltoppers did it last three in spite of setbacks. The team played against Westover and Amherst, then went on to edge Tufts, 93-81 in an overtime game.
