Meskill Elected Connecticut Governor; Cotter Wins Bid for Seat in Congress

Two Trinity men, one a Republican and one a Democrat were victorious in their bid for major office in the November 3 Connecticut elections. Connecticut Representative Thomas J. Meskill, Class of 1949, was elected Governor of Connecticut and was reelected by a 83,000 plurality. Cotter, former State Insurance Commissioner, broke the Meskill Republican state trend by reclaiming the First District U.S. Representative seat vacated by Daddario. Cotter defeated his Republican opponent, popular Hartford mayor, Miss Ann Uccello in a squeaker by less than 800 votes.

For both Trinity men the election victories came by defeating formidable foes by reversing existing trends and their performance has placed them in the forefront of their respective parties in Connecticut.

Governor-elect Meskill began his political rise in 1962 when he was elected Mayor of New Britain, a city that has a 4-1 voter registration favoring Democrats. He ran unsuccessfully for the U.S. Representative's seat from the Sixth District in 1964 but defeated the incumbent in 1966 and was reelected to Congress in 1968.

A native of New Britain, he attended schools there and, after graduating from Trinity, served in the Air Force during the Korean conflict.

Mr. Cotter

Governor of Connecticut in 16 years. The popular Trinity alumnus claimed the seat being vacated by The Honorable John Dempsey by defeating a Wesleyan man, Congressman Emilio Q. Daddario.

Two years ago, Governor Dempsey had been reelected by 115,000 votes but this year Meskill broke the Democrats' hold and was elected by a 83,000 plurality.

Cotter, former State Insurance Commissioner, broke the Meskill Republican state trend by reclaiming the First District U.S. Representative seat vacated by Daddario. Cotter defeated his Republican opponent, popular Hartford mayor, Miss Ann Uccello in a squeaker by less than 800 votes.

In “Twelfth Night”

"Twelfth Night" was produced by the Theatre Arts Department on October 30, 31, and November 1. The play received sold-out audiences. The following review, written by William McCurdy, appeared in the Hartford Courant: "The Bard's "Twelfth Night" is generally rated as his top achievement among his romantic comedies. It is a delightful play to watch. Shakespeare set his play in Illyria and politics totally without authority. Illyria and Robin Feif is an intriguing page boy. Miss Feif is also a lovely actress. Her performance is one of the highlights of the show. She is perfectly attuned to the motif of the comedy. The production is done with consummate skill and it is a joy from curtain to curtain. The production is a triumph for the entire cast and crew."

In "Twelfth Night" reform and yet, for the most part, their names exhibitionism. What degree it is merely a pseudo-cultural contribution to support the education and the institution which so indigenously provided a forum for their Babel? Although I knew John Butler for 40 years, I knew him best since 1960 when my office was directly next to his. What a wonderful sense of humor, what enthusiasm for the students; and what sage advice did he nearly always render! John was highly respected in his profession being elected a president of the Eastern College Personnel Federation, Associate Editor, R. Malcolm Salter; Secretary, John L. Hey! '66. Lack of Support

"Student activists" have received much press coverage via their protests. The "Twelfth Night" is a joy from curtain to curtain. The production is a triumph for the entire cast and crew. The student actors in the Trinity production have an impeccable setting enhanced by the musicians. The director, has staged the production in an appropriate, witty and charming way. Instead we are introduced to young student actors whose names actually educational reform and to coverage vis-a-vis their work. Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" is presently in rehearsal on his next play, "The Comedy of Errors." It is a delightful play to watch. Shakespeare set his play in Illyria and politics totally without authority. Illyria and Robin Feif is an intriguing page boy. Miss Feif is also a lovely actress. Students Tally Votes Behind the Scenes On Election Night

There were some Trinity students who worked 12 to 14 hours a day for a week in preparation for the general election in November, not for one particular candidate but for all the candidates.

These students burned the midnight oil during the College's mid-season break in the Hall Engineering Laboratory, programming a computer which on election night flashed running totals of votes in each major race as fast as figures were available.

Through the cooperation of people from as far away as Oregon, and through the combined efforts of a television corporation, a newspaper, a computer company and the student programmers, Connecticut residents received fast election returns.

Marshall Kennard, a senior from Lenox, Mass., and an engineering major, was the chief programmer and supervisor for a PDP-8 computer located in the Hall Engineering Laboratory which provided the quick tallies for Connecticut Public Television.

Voters for the state's major races, including the office of U.S. Senator, the Congressional races, the office of governor and other top state offices, were fed into the Trinity computer. In addition, the student programmers kept track of votes on the question of the 18-year-old vote and views on annual sessions of the legislature.

Looking over the students' shoulders were the cameras of the Connecticut Public Television (Channels 24, Hartford, 49, Bridgeport; 53, Norwich; 71, New Haven). And feeding the computer programmers with raw vote counts were staff members of the Hartford Courant which had counters in each of the voting districts throughout the 169 towns.

For Kennard, the whole project started last spring. Alfred Steele '64, production manager of Connecticut Public Television, approached August E. Sapega, professor of engineering at Trinity, to see if results could be computerized for faster overall tabulation.

"If Kennard hadn't been working on the computer, the Institute of Living last spring. I don't think we could have responded so positively," said Professor Sapega, "but he volunteered and it was his show from then on."

Connecticut voters received a preview of what Kennard and his student programmers could do with the fast results fed to public TV cameras during the coverage of the conventions in June and during the primaries in August.

To make that earlier effort possible, the Digital Equipment Corporation of Maynard, Mass., loaned a PTV Program Data Processor-8, and Tektronix of Beaverton, Ore., loaned Connecticut Public Television a graphic display terminal which presents the figures for TV pickup.

The equipment arrived only a few days before the Republican Convention and Kennard worked through the night and had the equipment programmed the day before the convention.

The general election presented more numerous and complex problems than the few contested positions of the conventions and primaries. The Trinity computer, also a PDP-8, was used this time as it has more storage space and extra equipment to handle this larger assignment.

A television camera was located in the Hallden Laboratory where Kennard and two other student programmers, Bruce Gwaltney, a junior from Wilmington, Del., and Dan Drury, a fifth-year engineering student from Sheffield, Mass., handled the computer.

Additional student volunteers from the Political Science Department were located at Hartford Courant to transmit results obtained there to Hallden and the computer crew.

Additional students were located at the Hartford headquarters of the National Election Service which transmitted "officially tabulated" election results to all the major television networks and the two wire services.

At the NES regional headquarters in Boston, the "Connecticut Desk" was manned by Dr. Clyde D. McKee, associate professor of political science, who made sure results being flashed to Washington, D.C., and the nation concerning Connecticut races were accurate.

Working for NES at the Hartford headquarters were: Andrew Wolf, a sophomore from New Haven; Peter Bennett, a senior from Cape Elizabeth, Maine; and Kathleen Alling, a sophomore from Milford.

NES field workers stationed election night at the Hartford Courant were: Ed Beacom, a senior from Wilmington, Del.; Jeffrey Miller, a junior from Chagrin Falls, Ohio; Paul Gomling, a freshman from Bloomfield; Lisa Donelson, a freshman from Roslyn Hts., N.Y.; Sue Arnold, a freshman from Darien; Cyndi Hawkins, a freshman from Darien; Barbara Ellinghaus, a freshman from Baltimore, Md.; and John Kozik, a freshman from Westport.

It was a busy election for the young men at the computer in Hallden, for those working at the Courant, or with NES, and for the countless students who thumped for their favorite candidate.

Bruce Gwaltney '72 and Marshall Kennard '70 (seated) check computer information for "instant" election returns with an over-the-shoulder look. Freshman Steve '74, production manager of Connecticut Public Television, sized the results and Professor August E. Sapega, acting chairman of the Engineering Department.

Students celebrated Succoth outside the College Chapel following a recent Sunday service. Jewish students served lox and bagels to other students from a Sukkah erected in Funston Garden for the occasion. The Chapel program that morning carried a frontispiece explaining Succoth to other students written by Bob Gershendel '73, president of the campus chapter of the Hillel Society. (Tripped Photo.)
Mrs. Albert B. Walker (center) of West Hartford, chairman of the 1970 Town-Gown Forum, presents Librarian Donald B. Engley, with a check for $1,000. Specified for the purchase of books, the amount represented the net proceeds realized by the Forum in its three-year program of public lectures given by members of the Trinity faculty. In addition, a silver tea service was presented to the College. President Lockwood was on hand to express appreciation.

Theatre Group To Open Tour By Visit Here

The National Theatre Institute at the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Center in Waterford, Conn., will come to Trinity on Monday, December 14, the first stop on a road tour of an original show, "Flowers and Trees." The Center, now in its sixth year, was set up by George White to encourage the work of young American playwrights. Trinity alumnus, Lee Kalcheim '69, has been one of the young playwrights produced at the Center.

The Institute is an experimental theatre program fully staffed by professional theatre artists, funded and maintained by the O'Neill Center as a resource for a selected group of colleges and universities throughout the country.

The students receive a thorough immersion in all aspects of theatre including writing, directing, acting, and puppetry. A balance between theoretical and practical work is offered in the curriculum. For a week the Institute moved to New York for a field trip to see plays both from in front and backstage, to visit costume and scene studios and to meet with many well-known theatrical figures. Frederick C. Horn '73 is one of the students represented from the participating colleges which include Amherst, Bowdoin, Brandeis, Connecticut College, Dartmouth, Mount Holyoke, Vassar, Williams, Wesleyan and others.

"Flowers and Trees" represents the culmination of the semester's studies. It is performed by the students at the Institute and stems from their semester's work. The show is being presented on the campus of each of the participating colleges.

Last summer a college credit course was offered giving the students an intensive six-week exposure to all aspects of theatre. Fifteen undergraduates attended the first session including three Trinity students: Richard Steere '73 of Philadelphia, Pa.; Lewis Williams '73 of New York City; and Patricia Whalen, a special student from West Springfield, Mass.

$6,000 Grant Awarded to Explore Suitable Careers for Disadvantaged

The use of Connecticut's disadvantaged to ease needs for professionals in public service jobs is the subject of an investigation being undertaken at Trinity College. The Connecticut Research Commission announced a grant of $6,170 to the College for a one-year project entitled "The Impact of Employment of Pre-Professionals." Careers for the underprivileged in public service was one approach developed in the 1960's to attack problems of unemployment, poverty and discrimination. The idea was to match the increasing needs for professional, technical and administrative people in government with properly trained unemployed and underemployed - pre-professionals as they came to be called.

Employing the disadvantaged in such positions encountered some obstacles, however—obstacles due in large measure to a lack of information on the most suitable work for the disadvantaged, the skills needed, those possessing the needed skills, effective training techniques and problems to be anticipated.

The Trinity project will be directed at obtaining such information, analyzing it, and providing those in agencies, capable of hiring "pre-professionals," guidelines for choosing suitable people, designing effective education and training programs, evaluating progress, and promoting those qualified to positions of greater responsibility and opportunity.

Dr. Clyde D. McKee Jr., associate professor of political science, will direct the research project. The principal investigator will be Mrs. Sandra Hilsen, a graduate student and personnel administrator of the State Labor Department. Students enrolled in the Trinity Urban and Environmental Studies program will help gather the information. Dr. McKee pointed out that the hiring of pre-professionals has suffered from lack of uniform direction in recruiting, placement and promotion. He added, "Hopefully, this study will give guidelines for that needed direction and will lead to the creation of jobs and career opportunities for the disadvantaged in our State."

Information will be collected through interviews and questionnaires from selected organizations which have experience in hiring the disadvantaged to fulfill professional needs. Data will include: methods of selection, characteristics of those employed, duties, opportunities, turnover and promotion rates, and attitudes of both hired and the existing staff. The agencies to be contacted will include Hartford's Department of Social Service, which was among the first to employ the poor as "pre-professionals," and other selected agencies of the city and the state.

Annual Giving Report

At the end of the first week of the 1970-71 Annual Giving Program, which began November 9, pledges exceeded those received for the same period last year in both the Alumni and Parents Funds segments of the campaign.

In the Alumni Fund, pledges amounted to $25,059 (same time last year—$15,998) toward the goal of $200,000.

For the Parents Fund, $5,189 had been pledged (same time last year—$3,950) toward the goal of $75,000.

The other three areas of the 1970-71 Annual Giving Program-Business and Industry, Friends of Trinity and Foundations—will be under way in early December.

Pomeroys Day, Hon. '69, chairman, executive committee, the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., is honorary chairman of the Business and Industry segment. Hugh S. Campbell '32, senior vice president and general counsel of the Phoenix Life Insurance Co., is chairman.

Crampton Trainer of West Hartford, retired vice president and treasurer of Aetna Life and Casualty heads the Friends of Trinity group.

Woman Named Career Counselor

Mrs. Paula Iraka Robbins of Concord, Massachusetts has been named director of current counseling at the College.

She succeeds the late John E. Butler, who founded the office at Trinity and served in the position for 23 years until his death in October.

Mrs. Robbins, a native of Trumack, N. J., is a graduate of Vassar College and has a masters degree in counseling from Boston University. She was formerly in charge of students' employment at Radcliffe College.

During the past six months, she worked closely with young people in the successful campaign to elect The Rev. Robert F. Drinan (D-Mass.) as a U.S. Representative from Massachusetts. She was also on the campaign staff of Chester A. Atkins, who, at age 22, is one of the youngest representatives elected to the Massachusetts State Legislature.

She has been active in civic affairs in Concord. She is a former member of the executive board of the League of Women Voters there, was director of the Concord Home Owning Corp.—Moderate Income Housing Committee and was active in the Concord Fair Practices Committee. She is co-chairman of the Concord Democratic Town Committee.

Before moving to Concord, she was a medical research secretary to the director of Cardiopulmonary Laboratory at the University of Rochester and, for two years, was a medical research secretary at the College of Physician and Surgeons at Columbia University.

Covernant and the third article in the series, in September 1980, paid high tribute to Duncan who is principal of Hartford Public High School which has enrollment in excess of 3,250 students. Among the tributes paid to Duncan are the following: “Dr. Duncan is an absolutely driven, unrelenting, almost obsessively driven leader, and has the ability to plow ahead for the good of the school system. His statements are high praise for Duncan’s unorthodox approach to improving the infrastructure of the school system.” To Duncan – the contributions of his colleagues for a difficult job well done.

I continue to appreciate the personal letters which you are writing to your schoolmates. You have kind enough to write to me, Ned. Ned and I are both reading the New York Times, and our favorite thing is when Dr. W. balloons into a cartoon balloon! We are very interested in what you are doing. We have a great deal of work including that of treasurer of the Connecticut Historical Society. We have been more empathetic. For that reason, of course, but more for the entertainment and informational content of his remarks, I am doubly sorry that more of you were unable to get back.

Citations go to J. R. R. BACHURACH, MARY PETERSON and BRIAN FOY, who returned to Trinity from Seattle, Ann Arbor and Columbus, Ohio, respectively for the weekend. Awards with comparable monetary value went to BELLE BLACK, JOHN KELLY, PETE TAISIR and their obvious bybility of Gilbert’s products. KEN LYNCH was the first to claim having to lose weight, but it remains doubtful if he can yet go to his right. Thanks are in order for Joe L. WELDON, who was reunion chairman, BOB PEDERSONI for a book signing, and FREDERICK A. TAYLOR for a birthday party on the weekend and BILL CRANE for the surprise package. That is a good man, and we are all happy that he is in our midst.

The CHARLIE WILDINGS had a summer trip to visit various cities, and the trip was great. It was gratifying to see so many attending at our first fall reunion in September, 1963, exactly 40 years after the annual reunion in the year 1923. AL and Hortense DEXTER, who are both Connecticut General Life Insurance employees, were pleased to see so many attending at our first fall reunion.

Although disappointed in the number of people who returned for our tenth reunion on September 25, 1963, the overall attendance was the best since 1963, unfortunately – and the class dinner at the University Club went very well. George Cooper was, as usual, a most entertaining and informative speaker. For those who were not present, the principal’s last look at the political attitudes on campus, the First Day of Democracy of Bemis can be of interest. He maintained that he had not changed his basic viewpoint during the 1965’s, early in which he thought he was considering a campus liberal, but feels that the prevailing attitude has been a bit more liberal than he thought the period that he now is considered a member of the conservative faction. His comments were not received with universal approval, but Your Secretary is most interested in the more entertaining and informative speaker. For those who were not present, the educational content of his remarks, I am doubly sorry that more of you were unable to get back.

The big news in fall sports on the Hilltop is the football team which chalked up a superb 7-1 record, the best finish for a Bantam eleven since the unbeaten squad of 1955.

Back in early September, Coach Don Miller had described his 1970 squad as "having the best spirit I've seen in a Trinity team since I've been here." At the time some observers thought perhaps Trin didn't have too much this fall if all the coach could talk about was spirit.

But what was precisely what thin winning eleven displayed all season and it was the key to its tremendous success.

Only a horrendous first half in Rochester, N.Y., where the squad allowed 17 points in a 24-7 loss, kept this eleven from becoming the sixth undefeated team in the 93 football seasons at Trinity.

But the Rochester defeat didn't curb the excellent attitude of the 1970 Bants.

They rallied after that Saturday and won the last three with impressive performances against Coast Guard, Amherst and Wesleyan.

With an opening win over Williams, the last two victories gave Trinity a sweep over the Little Three, the first time that has happened since 1959.

While this team was caught up in winning ball games, it also got fired up in the heroics of its senior halfback, Dave Kiarsis, who trampled records all season long. And for most of the season, he was the nation's leading small college rusher.

He finished with 1,374 yards for the season, a new Trinity and New England College Division record. His per game average of 171.7 yards was tops in the nation for college division runners. But Kiarsis, with all his speed, power and balance, couldn't do it alone and the pre-med major is the first to give credit to the men up front who threw the blocks for those big gains. Clearing the way, most of the season were ends Whitney Cook and Henry Smith, tackles Bob Ghazey and Cliff Cutler, guards Jon Miller and Tom Schaible and center Dave Sample (and Ed Raw's until he got hurt in Victory Hug—Coach Don Miller and wife embrace after Amherst victory, Trinity's first over Jeffs in eight years.

Perfect Year—Quentin Keith kicked 27 of 27 placements after touchdowns to set two New England Records.

Ball Hawkers—Sophomore Ray Perkins (left), who caught Trin's first TD pass of the Bates game. And there was teamwork in the backfield with Mike James taking on keying on Kiarsis exclusively. And alternating quarterbacks, George Matava and Erich Wolters, were the ones that mixed up the plays enough to get maximum effectiveness from the "Dartmouth Dot." (Kiarsis is from So. Dartmouth, Mass.)

Obviously, football is a two-way contest and the 1970 Bants' achievement wasn't all offense. Time and time again the defensive unit came up with the big play. Trin had one of the best "down fours" in New England circles in ends Ron Smith (the old man of the team at 25) and sophomore Bob Thiel and tackles Bill Belisle and Bill Sartorelli, Tom DiBenedetto developed into a solid middle guard and the pre-season concern over linebackers vanished with steady performances from the likes of Phil Poitier, Ralph Morini, Jim Finn with an outstanding secondary defense from George Matava, Bill Foster, Ned Hammond and Ray Perkins. A sophomore, Perkins was outstanding and punctuated a brilliant first year with six interceptions in the last two games; three each against Amherst and Wesleyan.

And for the lone specialist on the team, place kicker Quentin Keith it was a record year. His long weekend afternoons spent on Jessee Field kicking them through the uprights while the rest of the squad practiced on an adjoining field paid off. He kicked 27 out of 27 placements after touchdowns for two New England College Division records—most consecutive placements after TD and best accuracy percentage for a season—100%. A 100 percent effort throughout from coaches, players, trainers and managers.

Records Change Hands—Dave Kiarsis (right) gets congratulations from Charlie Sticks '56, whose Trin rushing records fall after 15 years to fellow Bay Stater. Dave ended with 1,374 for season and 2,949 for career, both new Bantam rushing marks.

Off on 80-yard Run—Believe it or not, Dave Kiarsis sped past all three Coast Guard defenders for an 80-yard touchdown run. Photographer David Lowe stops action just before Kiarsis cut to outside and daylight.

Vic's End—Looking back with Vic's End, Trin's pre-med major and star back, Dave Kiarsis races past the Coast Guard defenders for a 60-yard touchdown.
