850 Students Protest War Escalation, Seek Community Support Via Petitions

An estimated 800 to 900 students at the College had turned out all or most of their energies beginning May 4 in working for a "solidarity" move to support the National Student Association protest of the escalation of the war in Southeast Asia.

The outpouring of concern that swept the student body also was felt in the faculty and the administration following a "chain" of events that included President Nixon's announcement (April 30) of U.S. military move in to Cambodia, the resumption of bombing of North Vietnam (May 2) and the report (May 8) that five students were killed and others injured by National Guardsmen on the Kent State University campus.

Events were unfolding rapidly on the campus as this first issue of the REPORTER was going to press.

After 72 hours it was significant that:—there had been no violence and the major thrust of the student protest effort was directed at getting the outside community behind them through petitions, letters and speaking engagements —classes continued with no coercion from protesters to those who wanted to attend, including many protestors who attended classes and then returned to the "movement" —faculty, agreeing their first responsibility is to show up for classes for those wishing to continue the course, adopted extraordinary procedures in recognition of "the urgency" felt by many students to devote energies toward the protest —President Lockwood supported the right to responsibly demonstrate concern but insists the College must remain open to permit academic objectives and allow for all views —in the movement gained momentum there was unprecedented activity on the campus but the protest remained peaceful in sharp contrast to other campuses some of which cancelled classes, called off commencement or closed

Some of the major developments of the first three days of the protest activities:

Monday, May 4

Some 900 students attend all-College meeting in Mather Hall and decide on "solidarity" to join national student movement in protest of escalation of the war. While posters call it a "strike" the student vote makes it clear that there is to be no coercion...that any student can go to class if he wishes. Decision is made that the major thrust is to get "middle America involved" through petitions, letters and house-to-house canvassing.

Dr. Lockwood, attending a seminar on higher education in Washington, D.C., issues statement to the campus expressing an understanding "for the eagerness of many not only to demonstrate their concern but also to bring pressure and persuade the government to lower the level of intervention in Cambodia and Vietnam. I have no intent to interfere with discussion of these (see STUDENTS page 8)
Students from Pennsylvania face the loss of financial aid from their home state if the college in question does not sign an agreement to report certain derogatory information that might arise concerning Pennsylvania students.

An act by the Pennsylvania Legislature requires that colleges and universities report any criminal offenses committed by any enrolled students to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Such disclosures would be in conflict with the act of the American Association of University Professors, which guarantees academic freedom.

Specifically, colleges and universities released from their obligations under the new law by the reversal of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court decision which directly or indirectly may discourage students from any region from attending Pennsylvania institutions. Therefore, we cannot allow the determination of student-administrator-faculty relationship to be directed or compromised by the Pennsylvania Legislature. We cannot and will not serve the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

We feel that it is not within the province or the rights of Pennsylvania to request this action nor is it our right to disregard our own policy on confidentiality of student records.

The reporter, Thomas A. Smith, director of external relations, has written the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency for clarification of a number of issues in the decision. It is expected that the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency will take action after the reply to Mr. Smith's letter is received.

One of the more imaginative gestures on National Earth Day to call attention to the importance of our environment was thought up by Mr. Thomas Smith, a junior art major from Mamaroneck, N.Y., who is shown here depositing a bag of "good earth" from the Trinity campus into a safe deposit box held open by Marcus D. Goodale, executive vice president of the Connecticut Bank and Trust Company.

His plan was to reclaim his "precious possession" and return it to the campus on April 22, 1971, which will be the first anniversary of Earth Day, 1970. The box is making the bank available free of charge.

Endowment Sought For Jewish Studies

An event devoted to the recognition of the Trinity College Jewish Studies Program was held March 18. By the time the event concluded it was a clear commitment to expand the program and raise endowment for permanent lecturing positions.

The speakers included two Rabbis, a professor of religion, two students, Professor of Psychology at the College, Leonard Greenberg, '48, chairman of the Jewish Studies Fund. The attendance, number more than 100, included alumni and friends. Plans are currently underway for other similar dinners to be held in New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

Throughout the dinner, speakers stressed the value of the Program for both the Jewish student as well as the non-Jew. President Lockwood said, "I feel that we must dedicate education in behalf of human experience. We welcome the contribution which Jewish Studies can make to this goal."

Dr. Edmond LaB. Cherbonnier, professor of history, of the Department of Religion, said that the turning point for the active development of the Program occurred when the College was selected by the Jewish Theological Seminary for a grant to help establish a Program.

Advisor to the Hillel Society for the past 18 years, Rabbi William Cohen described this past year at the College as "...starting... for the first time the students are picking us for courses." Rabbi Cohen added, "The students have an idea to Classical to Contemporary Judaism," said that one of his most rewarding experiences was that two of his students said his course strengthened their decision for their life's work. Other than the Rabbinate and the rabbiner is now studying for the Episcopal ministry.

A transfer student from Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Robert Russell '70, teaches conversational Hebrew at the College. His course covers more than the language, bringing his students in contact with Jewish history and literature and the sense that Jewish culture is alive and growing.

Jay Schindler '70, a pre-medical major, feels that the courses he is taking have to "...give something to come to Trinity," said he, "We have classes and we study, and we work hard, but we want more...for more...Jewish literature, Middle East, Jewish relevance for the young people of today and not just for the people that live here in the college community."

The Jewish Studies Program is now a reality at Trinity. More donations to the library have been made, more speakers are being sought. It was announced that Rabbi Abraham J. Heschel, internationally-known theologian and author, will lecture at the College in May.

Arsonists are believed responsible for an early morning fire March 25 which did considerable damage to the reception area outside the Trustees Room where President Lockwood's office has been located since last year. Firemen, who responded to the 2:11 a.m. alarm, contained the flames to the reception area in Downes Memorial where furniture and office equipment were destroyed, and floors, walls, ceilings and the electrical system were affected.

In addition, there was heavy smoke damage throughout the corridors on the second and third floors of the clock tower building and adjoining Williams Memorial.

Total damage has been estimated at $50,000.

The fire followed a 24-hour period during which several false alarms and a bomb scare had brought firemen and police to the campus.

President Lockwood has stated that it is "...prepared to take every legal action possible against any person found responsible for a false alarm or fire."

Bishop Mills has received honorary degrees from Linfield College, University of Pennsylvania, Divinity School, St. Augustine's College and Morgan State College.

Dr. John M. Blum
A native of New York City, he received his A.B. degree, summa cum laude, from Hamilton College in 1962, and Ph.D. degrees there in 1947 and 1950.

A following service in the U.S. Navy, Dr. Blum joined The Massachusetts Institute of Technology faculty in 1948 as a research associate, while working on his doctorate. He was promoted to assistant professor of history in 1950 and associate professor in 1952.

A member of the Yale faculty since 1957, he was appointed chairman of the History Department in 1964, and in 1966, was named Farnam Professor of History.

During 1961-63, he served as a member of the Board of Ethics of the City of New Haven and is now a trustee of the Horace Mann School and the American Friends of Cambridge University. He is also on the visiting committee of the Harvard University Press.

Dr. Harold C. Martin
A native of Raymond, Pennsylvania, he received his A.B. degree from Harvard College in 1937, an M.A. degree from the University of Michigan in 1942, and his Ph.D. degree in 1954 from Harvard University. He has done additional graduate work at the University of Wisconsin and Columbia University.

He began his teaching career in New York State high schools and, in 1946, was appointed to the Department of Government, by year's end over 100 graduate students, representing every department, were members.

Now, two years later, TGSA shows signs of becoming a viable part of the Trinity campus. Membership is open to graduate students and graduate alumna. It's original objective - that of allowing graduate students to get together on an informal basis to exchange ideas - has been realized.

Another objective is apparent. Its second year of operation saw TGSA undertake to represent graduate students on campus. "During the past year," Mr. Lewis observed, "the Graduate community of the Trinity College community have been willing to meet, and really listen to those things that graduate students consider important. It's almost as if they've been waiting for these students to speak up. None had before."

This fall, at the suggestion of the College, a TGSA committee began an intensive evaluation of the graduate program. This resulted in a series of recommendations for improving graduate education at Trinity.

A TGSA newsletter has been published regularly during the past year for the graduate student on campus. TGSA has gone beyond "put-together" and now has assumed a position where it intends to make a significant and lasting contribution to the College. Traditionally, the commuting graduate student has been an alien on campus. Being established in the community, the part-time graduate student brings a different perspective to the campus. TGSA is attempting to make this perspective more meaningful.

Graduate Student Group To Aid Forgotten Alumni

"A graduate program suffers if it provides no opportunity for its students to trade perspectives. We needed that opportunity at Trinity. We were all strangers." Thus, Matt Sheridan stated in retrospect the reason for the founding of the Trinity Graduate Student Association.

Mr. Sheridan, an advertising copywriter, acted to fill this need for a student organization while an evening graduate student at Trinity during the summer of 1968. His objective was shared by Charles B. Lewis, an associate personnel technician, who currently serves as TGSA president. These two students began to recruit other members of their "American Political Parties" course and Billie W. Jones, a computer analyst, became treasurer and membership chairman; Mrs. Janet B. Boyer, a French teacher, agreed to serve as secretary and program chairman.

With the encouragement of Thomas A. Smith, then associate dean, and Mrs. Carol Lawton, executive secretary of the graduate and summer studies, the TGSA adopted a Constitution and sponsored an ambitious program that included sports, social, cultural and academic affairs. While the fledgling group's first Board of Directors was recruited from the Department of Government, by year's end over 100 graduate students, representing every department, were members.

B.D. degree in 1937 from the University of Toronto where he majored in mathematics and economics. In 1945 he became a member of the Group of Presidents.

Three years later, he was appointed assistant secretary in the Department and, in 1953, he was named chairman of the Subcommittee on Individual Accident and Health Insurance. He was appointed second vice president in 1957. Mr. Roberts has held a number of positions in insurance industry organization. He is director of the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce and the Institute of Higher Education.

He is a trustee of the Kingswood School, Renzoclaar Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, Hiram College, and the Connecticut College of Public Education Council. He is a former member of the Greater Hartford Board of the College of Education and Welfare and the Connecticut Institute for the Blind and Handicapped and a past director of the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce and the Institute of Higher Education.

Mr. Roberts is a fellow of the Society of Actuaries and holds an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Clarkson College of Technology.

Francis Goodwin II
Born in Hartford, he was a member of the Class of 1918 at Yale. During World War II, he served as a member of the U.S. Navy as commander of a subchaser in the English Channel and Irish Sea and was awarded the Navy Cross in 1941.

Following the war, he joined the New York building firm of Todd, Irons & Roberts in 1923. In 1925, he returned to Hartford to begin an insurance agent career that would span 40 years. Until 1958, as a member of the firm of Beardsley & Beardsley, then became an associate at Silas Chapman & Co.

In 1958, he served as president of Francis Goodwin & Co. and, in 1941, became a senior partner in the firm of Goodwin, Loomis & Beardsley, a position he held until his retirement in 1962.

Mr. Goodwin was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Republican Latin School and Hartford College. He is also a member of the Advisory Board of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation for Comparative Literature, and is a director of the Schenectady Trust Company and Volunteer for International Technical Assistance (VITA).

Dr. Martin is co-author of the revised edition of "The Logic and Rhetoric of Exposition" and "Inquiry and Expression." He was editor and a contributor to "Prose Style in American" and contributed to "The Teaching of English."

Fuller, Dean of Faculty, Resigns; Credited With Curriculum Change

Dr. Robert W. Fuller, dean of faculty since July 1968, has resigned his post as of the end of the current academic year.

President Lockwood, in announcing Dean Fuller's resignation to the faculty, said, "At this time Dr. Fuller is considering a writing position in an institution of higher education and will make known his acceptance later in the year." He added that "Dr. Fuller has concurred in making this early announcement because he realized that to delay making known his intention to resign would hamper the faculty search for a successor."

Dr. Lockwood said, "The College has benefited innumerably from Dr. Fuller's wisdom, ability and energy." He praised Dean Fuller for playing a "significant role in the development of Trinity's innovative curriculum which went into effect Sept. 1968, and for this long range view of the liberal arts college" which contributed to Trinity's decision to institutionalize the program.

"It is with deep personal regret that I announce Dr. Fuller's resignation. To him and his family, I offer my warmest wishes of success and affection and our very best wishes for their future success and happiness."

Dean Fuller came to Trinity from Battelle Memorial Institute's Seattle Research Center, where he was a physicist. He has since travelled to South Africa and India, on educational missions for Battelle. While in Seattle he headed an experimental teaching program in photo-schools.

He is the author of many articles in physics and co-author of a two-volume book, "Mathematics for Classical and Quantum Physics."

Dean Fuller attended Oberlin College and received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees both in physics, from Princeton University. He has also done graduate work in economics at the University of Chicago, spent a year of study in France and a year at Wesleyan University as a Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study. He taught physics at Columbia before joining Battelle Institute.

The following excerpt is quoted from an editorial in the TRIPPORD:

"...Dean Fuller, perhaps the most articulate spokesman for many of the College's recent innovations--the new curriculum, the Hurt inter, the Ten College, the judicial system, to name a few--it will not readily be replaced."

"Dean Fuller's imagination and willingness to innovate on a campus with a conservative faculty and a history of uninspired mediocrity made him Trinity College's greatest asset."

"At this crucial juncture when implementation of the College's many new structures and programs shows signs of having worked, his departure that of Dr. Fuller's resignation and the loss of a man of Dean Fuller's proven initiative and skill is regrettable."

If the College is ever to realize its potential—if the teaching standards are to rise in proportion with the increasingly rigid standards of student admission, if our progressive programs are to be effectively implemented, if additional new programs are to be initiated, the College must seek a man of similar dedication and persuasion as Dean Fuller to fill the Dean of Faculty post he leaves."

Uganda Teacher Aidin Chaplin

The Rev. Thomas T. Nabeta, a chaplain, and teacher from Uganda, East Africa, is visiting Trinity this week and works as a student associate chaplain under the auspices of the Executive Council of the Episcopal Church of America and in cooperation with the College, to observe American education and college chaplains. Chaplain Nabeta is on leave from Makerere University, Kampala, Uganda.

panel consisting of equal representation of faculty, students and administration. The board's role is to ensure that the safeguards and the rights of the individual found in the civil court system are upheld. At right to counsel, an appeal process, the right to be present at all hearings and the option to remain silent. An appeals board includes six-man appeals board, consisting of equal representation from each group. President Lockwood is the final appeal from this board.

To appeal board, or the president, may uphold charges and findings, drop charges, lessen the penalty or refer the matter back to the panel of original disposition.

The system also includes a code of conduct and a procedure under which an individual or a group of students may challenge the judicial system. These procedures have been to eliminate any untoward happenings or repeated violations of operation and parking of vehicles.

An all-male commenting on the judicial system in the HARTFORD TIMES said, in part: "Trinity has the new police, and the public are aware of those responsible and rights.

Allowing students an equal share of responsibility is the key to proving the emotional way to deal with the spirit of disruption that prevails at so many institutions.

On reflection, it is an affirmation of the entire campus' collective stake in purposeful education and learning. The student body helps draw the rules and, helps enforce them — and the same rules apply to everyone.

The Trinity system would seem to eliminate the common complaint that students and faculty are left out of the decision-making process. And it should obviate any plea by potential protesters, for instance, that they are treated as equals.

Western universities, in centuries ago, with almost-dictatorial rule by their administrations. Over the years, the faculty role grew to a dominant position at some colleges. And recently, student revolt has been growing.

Trinity's evolving attitude sees students as part of an adult community, set aside from national politics to pursue a common institutional concern. It sees trustees as avoiding involvement in day-to-day, more immediate decisions.

It seems a little radical to those of us who were used to listening to the line. But perhaps we were too willing to concern ourselves as students being taught, rather than as young scholars in a common pursuit of knowledge.

students from war-related industries and urge the faculty to strip AFROTC of academic credit after those currently enrolled complete program.

It is reported that over 10,000 signatures have been obtained on petitions and that some 4,000 letters have been sent to Senator Dodd. Our student report he contacted Senator Dodd and asked if he would be moved if he received an “avalanche of mail from students and citizens in the community” and that the Senator said “I probably would be moved.”

Thursday, May 7

As the REPORTER goes to press, the protest movement continues with hundreds of students giving our doors-to-door for more signatures. Classes are still being held with attendance varying and athletic events are being played or cancelled according to the wishes of the team members. A number of special workshops are also listed by the students.

The involvement in the protest seems to intensify as some students give each other hiccups in order to make a better impression on the community.

The faculty has a regular meeting scheduled for Tuesday, May 12, at which one item on the agenda is to review the academic credit of the AFROTC program on campus.

Resolution of the Faculty

During the past week events at home and abroad have precipitated a sense of profound crisis at many colleges and universities, including Trinity. The faculty recognizes that hundreds of Trinity undergraduates believe the urgency of the situation compels them to devote their energies almost exclusively to activities designed to modify the national policies underlying the crisis.

At least a majority of students, on the other hand, wishes to continue the semester in the normal way. Many students maintain intermediate positions.

We, the faculty of Trinity College, commend the vast majority of students of all persuasions for the restraint and intense interest with which they have conducted themselves during these past trying days. We wish to respond to the needs of our students who wish to continue the semester in the normal way. Many students maintain intermediate positions.

We wish to respond to the needs of our students who wish to continue the semester in the normal way. Many students maintain intermediate positions.

In order to serve equitably the interests of all students, the faculty institutes the following extraordinary procedures:

1) Classes shall continue to be held in the usual manner. Out of respect for the students with differing points of view, no member of the Trinity community shall attempt to coerce any student into attending, or not attending, any class.

2) Students electing to do so may take final examinations in the courses, but such examinations shall not be required of any student.

3) Students not taking final examinations are to receive a final grade based on all the work which they have been assigned during the semester. Students have the responsibility to consult with their instructors about academic standards in deciding not to take final examinations.

4) General examinations shall be optional in the courses of students in the circumstances in a manner consonant with the academic integrity of Trinity College. In order to serve equitably the interests of all students, the faculty institutes the following extraordinary procedures:
