Fall Reunion Offers Seeing 'Trin In Action'

Attending one of their classes, talk to them in the Cave and attend a panel on "Student Involvement in Campus Activity and the Community."

"Reunion '70!" Talk with the faculty. Greet some of your old profs. They will give you their seasoned views on what is happening and likely to happen. They knew Trinity when and they know Trinity now.

"Reunion '70!" And of course you can greet your classmates and attend the president's reception and dinner. Hear his "State of the College" message Friday night and attend the annual luncheon in the Field House Saturday noon.

"Reunion '70!" Back in 1967, David Beers '57 and his wife Peggy attended his 10th reunion at the College. It was held after commencement and Beers found it a "listless affair."

But he didn't leave it at that. He and Peggy pondered why the reunion was "listless" for them and concluded that it was the wrong time of the year. They wrote a proposal to move the reunion to the fall and their suggestions and arguments for the move were printed in the spring issue of the Alumni Magazine, 1968.

In part the Beers couple wrote: "What we envisage by 'reunion' at Trinity is a return of the alumni to see the College both at work and at play. It is not entirely reunion of classmates looking back at old college days, but also a new notion of thinking men and a living college..."

And they wrote: "The alumni body can hardly be given much of the essence of the College merely by being told about it by a tired administration on a sun-baked and empty campus."

"Reunion '70!" From the Beers plan, as it came to be known, and the comments that followed, reunion was moved by the Alumni Executive Committee from the weekend after Commencement to September, effective in 1970.

As the Alumni Magazine with the Beers plan was coming off the press in the spring of 1968, events on college and university campuses were suddenly making front page news.

And in 1969 disruptions continued and in the spring of 1970 it was Kent State, Jackson State and the national college strike movement.

Much has been written about those days and even more has been stated. What about Trinity? What effect did all this have on the College? What about coeducation and the new curriculum? Peggy and David Beers couldn't have known the dramatic events that would occur in the spring of 1968 and since. But ironically they wrote in 1967: "We fuss about the generation gap, let's try to close it. The fall is probably the best time to see the student's life."

To the Editor:

There is no doubt that having an AIESEC traineeship in a foreign country is one of the best things a student can do in the summer. During the months of the traineeship the student gets to know two different worlds, the business world, where he is involved directly through the traineeship assignment and on the other hand the student world, "on the spot". I have been lucky enough to see and learn both these worlds and furthermore, I have had the opportunity of living with a family here in Hartford, so there has been a third world for me to see. Actually AIESEC-Trinity has solved the accommodation of the foreign trainees in a ideal way. All of us six trainees, representing France, Holland, Japan, Peru, Switzerland and Finland lived with families in the same neighborhood, practically in the same block on North Oxford-North Beacon Streets. And there has really been a lot of interaction in a very international atmosphere. I have been especially lucky, as a student of economics, to stay with the family of Dr. LeRoy Dunn, Trinity associate professor of economics. In that way I have had a special opportunity to learn new things, new aspects of the American economy, educational system, politics and many other things. And of course Trinity College. I am very impressed by Trinity Campus, especially the sports and recreation facilities it offers. The campus seems to be a community itself, which is completely different from the European type of universities and colleges. The only thing I am sorry for is that I missed all student activities. I'll be back in Finland when the school year begins.

One of the very few not-so-pleasant things here in Hartford has been the hot weather. While we must keep order (and the "strike" was orderly), we recognize that students are concerned about contemporary problems and quite properly explore solutions while they live. This nation has traditionally turned to its colleges to produce educated citizens who can make sound judgments based on reason and rational discourse. In these complex times, colleges and universities are more necessary than ever to meet the challenges to our republic. It is a time for more support—no less. Our adversaries would like nothing better than to see us "close up shop."

Air Force, College Agree ROTC to End In June 71

The College and the Air Force have mutually agreed to terminate the AFROTC program on the campus effective June 1971.

The agreement was reached this summer and was based on dwindling enrollment in the program. Currently there are four seniors and four juniors enrolled in the AFROTC program, far below the minimum of 10 officer candidates each year which the Air Force seeks.

In announcing agreement to discontinue the program, James P. Goode, assistant secretary of the Air Force for manpower and reserve affairs, wrote President Lockwood, "The Air Force has been proud of the ROTC unit at Trinity College, the support of the program by you and your administration, and the Air Force officers produced by the unit. Every consideration possible will be accorded students currently enrolled in the AFROTC program."

The request to discontinue the program came from Dr. Lockwood after he and General B. C. Cassidy, commandant of the AFROTC headquarters, Maxwell Air Force Base, had concluded "neither the Air Force nor Trinity can justify continuing the program when few if any are involved."

In his letter to the Secretary of the Air Force, Dr. Lockwood wrote: "...since it is in our mutual interest to terminate the program, I trust that this discontinuance may occur without prejudice to any future consideration of a program should the occasion warrant it."

The announcement mutually to discontinue the program next June comes after a year in which the program had been one of the targets of anti-war efforts. The student body had voted in May to urge the faculty to discontinue academic credit and on May 13 the faculty voted 53-47 to eliminate academic credit for participation in AFROTC after June 1971.

The Air Force ROTC program has been at Trinity since 1948. At the height of its enrollment in 1953, there were 553 students, or more than half of the undergraduate student body.

The request to discontinue the program has been made by the student body, but it is widely expected that the program will continue at least through the 1971-72 academic year.

REUNION

If the alumni find it hard to understand the students of today, imagine how students view alumni. Many of the "gag" could close over coffee, in a classroom, during a panel discussion on the sidelines of the soccer match and in the stands at Jesse Field.

All are interested in activities. A drama production, the opening of an art exhibit by Professor John Taylor and a film society screening, all on Saturday morning, the chapel bells will summon the alumni to a Memorial Service for the 72nd at 10:30 a.m.

A look at "Changes in Education in the 70's" is a subject of a panel in the late morning. Sadie Griffin will bring the traditional alumni luncheon in the Field House with a football gam, follw then receptions and class dinners.

Alumni Reunion '70!

It would be anything but a "lifeless affair."

years (1947-1959). During this time he wrote two textbooks, "Steam Power Plants" (1952), and "Power Plants" (1959), and numerous articles.

He was active in professional and civic organizations, including being president of the Central Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and serving as chairman of the Harris Township (Pa.) Board of Education.

Since coming to Trinity he has resided in Bloomfield where he has also served a term on the Board of Education.

He is former chairman of the Hartford section of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, is a former secretary-treasurer of the American Society for Engineering Education (1969) and is one of 12 incorporators of the University Research Institute of Connecticut of which he is now president. He is also director of the Haldane Machine Company, Thomaston, Conn.

He is former chairman of the College Work Division and the Laymen's Division of the Episcopal Diocese of Connecticut and is active in parochial work at St. Stephen's in Bloomfield.

...in addition to the department chairman, who will hold informal confer regularly, President Lockwood has formed a Special Program Council to coordinate the college's need for a normal departmental perspective and to advise the dean on related curricular matters. Members of the Council are Dr. Drew A. Hyland, associate professor of philosophy, for Experimental Programs; Dr. Clyde D. McKee, associate professor of political science, for Urban Studies; Dr. Borden W. Painter, associate professor of history, for the Freshman Seminars and Summer Programs; Dr. H. McKinley Stebbins, professor of modern languages, for the Non-Western Studies Program.

The program has the support of the Non-Western Studies Committee of the Connecticut Association of Secondary Schools which allows the Trinity administration to secure information in the high schools and to work through the guidance counselors.

The semesters are held for an hour one night a week and cover a wide range of material. No tests are given and papers, although willingly accepted, are not mandatory. The only charge to the high school pupil is the cost of his textbooks.

Classes are held on the Trinity campus.

The program has been accepted with great enthusiasm since its inception in 1966. "The late summer time around Trinity has been quick to volunteer as discussion leader. The program has been enhanced by the leadership and assistance of competent faculty and administrative advisors including Alexander A. Mackinnon, chairman of the education department and former principal of Bulkeley High School, Dr. Roy Heath, former dean of students and N. Robbins Windom, dean of educational services.

"The Tragedy at Son My"

Whatever your views on the Vietnam war, this interpretive account of the massacre at Son My in South Vietnam will sift you and send you into a rage. It was nearly 20 months after the massacre of hundreds of Vietnamese civilians allegedly by an American unit (fired on March 16, 1968) that the reader finds himself back in that hamlet.

You are once again (Part Three: "One Morning in the War") you wish to God you weren't.

You want to yell "Cease fire" when: "A small boy three or four, suddenly appears from nowhere on the front in a group of American. He is clutching his wounded arm with his other hand while the blood trickled between his fingers. He just stood there. His eyes staring around he did not understand what was happening to him. Suddenly the radio operator put a burst of 16 into him."

And again: "Two boys maybe four or five years old appear. A guy with an M-16 fired at the first boy and the older boy fell over him to protect the smaller one. Then they fired six more shots. It was done very businesslike."

Hammer, the father of two boys himself, has 49 pages of incredible eyewitness reports (that account for most of the some 400 to 500 civilians who were needlessly slaughtered that day. Some were shot near air raid bunkers, some burned in their "hoottches" and many were herded into a canal, guarded for a while and then machine-gunned.

All of this was allegedly done by members of Charlie Company, First Battalion, Fourth Marines at Son My in the central coast of Vietnam. During his probings, Hammer also found that another massacre took place that morning allegedly by the ARVN. By weaving this news, Hammer is pursuing the sub hamlet of My Hoi two miles to the southeast where an estimated 97 civilians and a few Americans were swept by Son My. The using a case study. New Urban Corps Offers Aid To Students, City

Trinity students will be participants in the Hartford Urban Corps work-study program, which has hinged on a joint basis by Trinity, University of Hartford and St. Joseph College with the City. According to Joanne Sour, Trinity's special assistant for community affairs, and a prime mover for the program, "This year more and more people now that learning does not take place only on campus, but much can be gained by a direct experience through working in the City. A student engaged in service-learning...integrates an accomplishment of a needed task with educational growth. Urban Corps thus becomes one more constructive link between colleges and universities and the needs of the community.

"The nuts and bolts of Urban Corps is tied to the work-study program. Anyone with working potential in a certain area, certified by the college's financial aid officer, is eligible for work in the Corps. The intent is that instead of students working on campus, they would work in city agencies. In this way, the City gains the energies and enthusiasm of bright college students, and the students in return gain direct experience and insight into urban problems.

The work-study program is undertaken by the federal government for eighty percent of the cost. Thus, city agencies gain inexpensive help by having to pay only twenty percent. In September, job openings in various city departments will be filled by college students from the three participating schools.

Some of the jobs developed by the City include...work in the Corporation Council in preparing the City's 1970-71 legislative program, departments of Park and Recreation, Assessment, Civil Defense, Development Commission and the Neighborhood Center.

United States Commissioner of Education, James E. Allen Jr., who was instrumental in increasing the government's financial commitment to the work-study program, has said that "The need is a concentration on ways of helping the young realize the potential of their...new sense of purpose and spirit for service."

A little more than a year ago, you may remember, BERT SMITH celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Invitations to the event were sent out by the Rev. L. Smith Scholarship Fund, a self-perpetuating organization, the custody of which can now be facilitated. It seems that Bert wanted to help the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the South. So he raised a fund whose income is paid to the Seminary for the benefit of some outstanding student. But just last week the Fund named for a Texas bishop, but the donors overspent and named the Fund after Bert. The Fund therefore is not just another name for Trinity, but it is an independent entity, continues to serve the laudable purposes for which it intended it.

Your SECRETARY asks you again to send him a summary of your career. Unless you feel that you will have a career to finish, you should not be able to return on what you have done. Since this summary will not be published until after your death, and then at the discretion of the Class Secretary at that time and the editors of "The Reporter," you need not be deterred by modesty from sharing your current or past opinions of the work you did and the world in which you did it. It will be included in the Class Archives and should be accompanied by a portrait, at any age. Your Secretary, for instance, is going to depict a bearded portrait, if he can find one, in deference to current fashion. He wore his beard from 1927 to 1936, but it was last winter more and more decorative than the beards he expressed in this portrait is almost unbearably sweet, and my wife and I wish to refer to it as the "Blessed."

It is indeed encouraging to review the splendid results of the 1969-70 annual giving campaigns conducted among Trinity alumni and parents. Particularly gratifying was the record total of $187,118 raised by the alumni—the $59,603 raised by parents—and the record average gift of alumni ($83.12) and parents ($127.36), both substantial increases over the previous years.

We are most appreciative of this support during a year when the economy has undergone severe stress and private higher education has experienced equally severe fiscal readjustments. Your support thus demonstrates a conviction about the significance of Trinity’s academic program.

In addition, your support has made possible the continuation of our faculty salary plan, our financial aid program to needy students, and progress in library acquisitions. I cite these areas because they lie at the center of the learning which Trinity offers future alumni.

On behalf of the College, may I thank all who contributed to the annual giving campaign and my special thanks to Mr. John T. Wilcox ’39, chairman of the Alumni Fund; to Mr. A. Dix Leeson, chairman of the Parents Fund; their committees and all who worked so diligently.

Many of Trinity's great athletes have over the years expressed toward the lofty portly middle-aged frustrated "memoriam:" but there is a noticeable absence of that deathly silence of note within the ranks of 1955 alumni, who have blossomed into athletic prominence beyond their achievements at Trinity. Headed by FRANK LUBY, a consortium of 55ers has sponsored and participated in an annual Memorial Day golf event that will undoubtedly rank among as long as they shall live, of the Chandelier Classic and Bow Jones Open in Eastern golf tournament annals.

The field of star-studded performers bidding for the top 112 spot of such matches the exact figure was not revealed for security reasons was headed by former champ, "banana ball" B. SCOTT PRICE. Other notable wrestlers included MURRAY BENNETT, 2622 E. 107th Way, Denver, CO; NATASHA JENKINS, 10705.

Kenney '59  Jones '83

This "best ball tournament" contest was won by the team of ALLEN R. PARKER (Class of '45) and Ann Price, spouse of the above. This was without a doubt and great stretch drive by Phil Trudy who finally succeeded in managing to place a total score that would have pleased hazards (there were two). "Babe" Luby who had a twoway winning streak broken was helped to a last place finish by long-ball-hitting Dean Price.

The football team opens the fall sports season Saturday, September 26 with the 29th renewal of its series with rival Williams College. It is reunion weekend at Trinity, and that fact could help the Bantams in this traditional battle.

The soccer team, which will be seeking its first winning year under Coach Roy Dath, will be taking a final pre-season tuneup also on the 26th before the Ephmen have a downstate Quinnipiac visiting Hartford. The cross country team, which doesn't go into action until October 3, Parent's Day, against a strong Bates squad will be trying to build a winning combination around Coach John Durand.

College, department at Ferris Center. The Ephmen will be coming onto Although Maitland's graduation leaves Don Miller, in molding his fourth Trinity team as head coach, has 24 returning lettermen in the offensive line back on which to build. But Catuzzi at Williams, Miller has some big shoes to fill, particularly in the backfield with passing star Jay Bernardoni now graduated.

Halfback Dave Kiarus, who averaged 6.9 yards per carry last fall is the only running back backfield. Co-captain Mike James will be converted from end to wingback where he played as quarterback.

For a quarterback, Miller will be looking to George Matava, a senior defensive back who played quarterback in high school and as a freshman, Bill Foster, who was Bernardoni's backup as a sophomore, and Erich Wolters, who guided the freshmen to a 4-1 season last fall.

Co-captain Jon Miller, an offensive senior offensive line while Bill Saritoffo is the only returning starter to the defensive line where much rebuilding has to be accomplished. Some experienced defensive backs and sophomore prospects up from the freshmen eleven help brighten the defensive picture.

The grid schedule is the same as last fall except for the University of Rochester replacing PMC Colleges. Rochester defeated both Amherst and Williams in 1969 and should be a real challenge for the Bantams in 1970.

There have been two changes in the physical education department which also affects the football coaching staff. Jack Daniels, former head coach at Mt. Carmel High School in Auburn, N.Y., will assist as line coach, and Williams Sferro, a former assistant at the University of Virginia, will work with the defensive secondary.

Daniels and Sferro replace Terry Herr, who has joined an investment firm, and Joe Wilson, who will be studying law at The University of Southern California.

The soccer team will be seeking to continue winning ways but will be more demanding schedule with only six lettermen back. Two strong New England soccer teams, Brown and Middlebury, have been added to the schedule, replacing two college division teams.

Trinity is in the major university division in soccer.

Returning this fall are co-captains Jeff Clark, halfback and Ron Megna at inside left. Lettermen Douglas Snyder and Megna will be the only veterans returning to the forward wall which will have to be rebuilt. Some bright sophomore candidates should help here. Besides Clark, experienced backs include Bayard Feichter and William Abendroth where Richard Wood will be back in the goal.

With few veterans back, a more demanding schedule and overall lack of experience and depth, the 1970 soccer team faces a real challenge to keep the long string of winning seasons going.

Cross Country, which has to run in the shadow of football and soccer popularity, has been an exercise in determination and perseverance on the Hilltop.

Lean years have befallen this courageous band of runners and last fall the team captain, Charles Hosking, was injured before the season. This year Captain Durand will have three veterans with him on which to build for 1970. A volunteer coach of last fall will not be back because of business pressures and much of the pre-season preparation will fall on Durand and the individual dedication of his teammates.

With Durand will be veterans Michael Gibbons, Robert Geiser, and William Zachary. Sophomores up from the freshman team will be depended on to round out the squad.

The seven-meet schedule will be rigorous. It will be an uphill battle this fall. But this game squad could start the road back to better days for cross country at Trinity.

On a typical day each youngster received instruction and practice in three activities, in this case, track or her choice of a demonstration on grooming for drugs, a demonstration on grooming, and, when there were learning. The intensity to which they became involved in an activity perhaps is best demonstrated by an 11-year-old boy who was waiting in line during a basketball drill. A local reporter approached him and asked if he could talk to him about his views of the program. "Wait a minute," the boy said. "I don't want my memory to fade away, so I want to talk to you later." Another group of youngsters were given the chance to Universal Health (multi-station exercise machines) a work-out in the weightroom. Bill James struggled to lift some metal weights, and Bill James struggled to lift some metal weights, and though he finally raised more than he had on the day before, he didn't feel lightweight," he said afterwards. "I can't do this at home."
