Graduates Honored at Indoor Ceremony

Spring showers ended a three-year streak of sunny commencements at Trinity this year and forced 313 bachelor and 100 master degree candidates into the Ferris Athletic Center to receive their diplomas.

The rains came shortly before baccalaureate exercises early on graduation day and had parents and friends of graduates armed with umbrellas and raincoats long before they packed into the Ferris Center gymnasium for the afternoon ceremony.

With no commencement speaker scheduled, the two-hour ceremony proceeded quickly to the awarding of honorary degrees and the highlight of the afternoon—the presentation of diplomas. The commencement address was dropped by the College to shorten the ceremony while preserving the tradition of personally awarding degrees to each Trinity graduate.

Not only were honorary degrees given to Connecticut's governor, Thomas J. Meskill, class of 1950, and Frank Stanton, the CBS president who has refused to release documents used in developing the controversial TV documentary "The Selling of the Pentagon," but without a word of forewarning, President Lockwood took the podium from Lyman Brainerd, class of 1930 and chairman of the trustees, and awarded the long-time Trinity supporter an honorary Doctor of Laws.

"Four decades of distinguished service to Trinity College," Lockwood told the red-faced executive, "merit the recognition we accord you on this occasion...You have brought calm and considered judgment to the well-being of Trinity."

Brainerd, the president of Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company and a former recipient of the Eisenberg Trophy, has been a Trinity trustee since 1937 and chairman of the board since 1963. He is retiring as chairman this year, but will continue to serve as a Charter Trustee.

Of all the dignitaries honored at the ceremony, Stanton was the one most enthusiastically received by members of the class of 1971. His citation was greeted with prolonged applause from the graduates and shouts of "bravo" from the bleachers who held their parents, relatives and friends.

Brainerd praised Stanton for insisting on "quality and excellence" in television programming and for personally making possible the Kennedy-Nixon TV debates.

Four Alumni Elected to Board of Trustees

Four Trinity alumni, including one official alumni representative, have been elected to the Board of Trustees in the first trustee elections since the Board was reorganized last November.

Thirty of the new trustees—Winthrop W. Faulkner, an architect from Washington, D.C.; William Polk, a teacher from Lawrenceville, N.J.; and William R. Peelle, a Hartford industrialist—were elected by Trinity trustees to fill board vacancies. They will serve terms of six, seven and eight years respectively.

The fourth trustee—Martin D. Wood of Simsbury, Conn.—was elected in a heavy mailballoting of alumni held during May. He will replace Herbert R. Bland and serve a six-year term as an alumni trustee. Bland has been an alumni trustee since 1965.

The practice of electing trustees for given terms rather than "for life" was established by Trinity trustees last November. Trustees said they hoped the move would attract capable trustees who might not be willing to commit themselves to life terms and would at the same time insure that each generation of Trinity graduates is adequately represented on the Board.

Under the new plan, there will eventually be no life trustees on the 27-man Board. Instead, the Board will be composed of 12 "charter members" who will serve until retirement; eight trustees elected for eight-year terms; six alumni trustees; and the president of the College.

Traditionally, all Trinity trustees, except the College president, and those elected by the alumni, served life-long terms.

Faulkner, a member of the Class of 1953, is a partner in Wilkes and Faulkner, an architectural firm which has been active in developing drug rehabilitation centers, neighborhood parks and child day care centers in the Washington, D.C. area.

He has served as a class agent and is also an alumnus of the Landon School in Washington.

Polk, a 31-year-old alumnus of the Class of 1962, is a religion teacher at the Lawrenceville School and one of the youngest trustees ever elected to the Trinity Board.

He has served on the Human Relations Council in Lawrenceville and has been a member of the Trinity College Board of Fellows.

Peelle, a vice-president of Arrow-Hart, Inc., was graduated from Trinity in 1944 and has served as vice president of the Alumni Association. He is director of the Greater Hartford Business Bureau and a former chairman of Trinity's Alumni Fund.

Wood, a 1942 Trinity alumnus, is second vice president of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company and a retired colonel in the Air Force Reserve. He defeated Hartford City Councilman Dr. Allyn Martin '53 and Karl E. Schielb '59, a psychology professor at Wesleyan University in a close race for the alumni trustee position.
HONORARY DEGREE RECIPIENTS - President Lockwood; Frank Stanton, President, Columbia Broadcasting System (Doctor of Fine Arts); Edward Allen Suisman, Hartford civic leader, philanthropist and industrialist (Doctor of Laws); Thomas J. Meskill ’50, Governor of the State of Connecticut (Doctor of Laws); Bradford Hastings, Rector of Christ Church, Greenwich, Connecticut (Doctor of Divinity); Lyman B. Brainerd, retiring Chairman of the Board of Trustees (Doctor of Laws).

Honorary Degree Citations

Lyman B. Brainerd

MR. BRAINERD, four decades of distinguished service to Trinity College merit the recognition we accord you on this occasion. Upon your retirement as chairman of the Board of Trustees but not as an active member, we commend you for the leadership you have provided our College. Seldom do men deserve such undoubted attention and concern to the well-being of the institution from which they received their undergraduate education. You have long brought your calm and considerate judgment to the well-being of Trinity and neither paddle-tennis nor bowling have diminished your enthusiasm for the College. As chief executive officer of the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company and as a director of numerous corporations, you have exemplified the requisite sensitivity to the judgments to the well-being of Trinity and which we hope all who graduate will display.

Bradford Hastings

The first graduate of Trinity College to become Governor of one state, you have served Connecticut with conspicuous success since you took the degree of Bachelor of Science at a relatively short time ago, in 1950. Six years as a lawyer and civic leader sharpened the skills, to which Trinity must certainly have contributed; and our neighbors in New Britain elected you mayor. Your youth and vigor and the esteem of your fellow citizens took you to Washington where you represented the Sixth District in Congress for two terms. Now, as Governor of Connecticut, you face issues which tax the abilities, imagination, and energies of men who hold office in many difficult times. You, among others, are matching worthwhile programs with available resources in a rational problem and your determination to face it has been a dramatic example of your willingness to meet the responsibilities of your high position.

Edward A. Suisman

Born and bred in Hartford, you have been a dramatic example of what happens when a man with a deep sense of obligation and responsibility becomes a leader in business and civic life. A graduate of Yale College in 1925, you have always retained a lively and active interest in higher education. You served as a trustee of the University of Connecticut under three governors. You were a founder of the University of Hartford and have been a member of the Yale Alumni Board. Your support of scholarships at Trinity and your invaluable counsel as a member of the Capital Area Scholarship Committee at the College are instances of your concern for young people and of the imaginative generosity that makes it possible for many of them to continue their educations. As a member of the Board of Directors of the Hartford Hospital and of St. Francis Hospital and of the Greater Hartford Community Chest you have given countless hours to the betterment of your fellow citizens. Under this guidance, Hartford has been deeply committed to the spiritual riches of Judaism, which you have done much to preserve and extend through your support of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. I present to you the honor to present to you a distinguished clerk in union with Trinity...Bradford Hastings.

Thomas J. Meskill

The Rev. Bradford Hastings delivers baccalaureate address.

"eclectically domesticated" and "just another piece of the institution." But young people with "special insight" have been trying to "break out of the shackles of our depersonalized life" and need not fall into the same rut, he said.

"I hope you will put on with your concern for the person and your person, always bending and shaping the institutions and patterns of society," Rev. Hastings said. At the commencement exercise itself, Professor John Danlo, marshal for the ceremony, provided light touches of humor as Trinity seniors filed up to the graduation platform to receive their degrees.

The first came after Danlo announced a senior "in absentia" only to watch, as he had in two earlier cases, the student walk in front of him to receive his degree. "Must be a ghost," Danlo quipped into the microphone.

Later, the veteran English professor and TV personality had to read three names in a row before finding a senior who was present to receive his degree. When he found one, he joked, "Glad you could make it, son."

Then, as parents were eying a long-haired dog walking up the aisle toward the graduation platform, Danlo announced: Norden Scott Gilbert and Jessica. And the long-time Trinity mascot pranced across the stage with her master.

Moments later, Danlo’s mood changed and he read three times the name of Charles Z. Greenbaum, a former physics major from Marblehead, Mass., died of cancer a week before graduation.
Lowen K. Hankin, valedictorian of Trinity's 1971 graduating class, with Trinity's first woman salutatorian, Laura Sohval. Hankin, an economics major, will attend Yale Law School in the fall while Miss Sohval will pursue her study of French in Paris.

Hankin, Miss Sohval Head Class Two Others Receive Four Degrees

Two young scholars who earned master's degrees in record-setting time, a precocious 21-year-old coed and a budding economist from Abington, Pa., were the center of attention as degrees were granted at Trinity's commencement exercises this spring.

Lawrence L. Bruckner, 20, of Thomson, Ill., and David Sarasohn, 20, of North Bergen, N.J., were singled out by commencement marshal John Dando as they walked to the graduation platform to receive their bachelor's degree and then returned five minutes later to accept master's diplomas.

Bruckner, a political science major who will attend Yale Law School next fall, received both degrees after only three years of college. His record-setting performance stemmed from studying summers, spending time at Trinity's Rome campus and studying on a world tour.

Sarasohn received his B.A. and M.A. degrees in history after four years at Trinity. He expects to attend law or graduate school in September.

The coed, Laura S. Sohval of New York City, did not have to be singled out. She was the second student to mount the graduation platform at commencement ceremonies and the first woman ever named salutatorian of a Trinity graduating class.

A French major who transferred from Beaver College, Glenside, Pa., after her sophomore year, Miss Sohval will study at a number of Parisian universities under the auspices of New York University next fall.

The budding economist honored at the ceremony is Lowen K. Hankin, valedictorian of the class of 1971. Hankin, a teaching assistant in economics during his senior year, is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and a member of Pi Gamma Mu, social science honorary society. He plans to attend Yale Law School in September.

Four other students, all engineering majors, received a bachelor's degree at Trinity's commencement and a M.A. less than two weeks later at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y.

The students--David Agerton of Chatham, N.J., Daniel Drury of Sheffield, Mass., Hugo Luke of Okinawa and Al Lem of London, England--earned the degrees in a five year engineering program worked out between Trinity and the BPI Graduate Center in Hartford.

Last Oaths Taken As AFROTC Ends

Two Trinity seniors were commissioned second lieutenants in the Air Force Saturday May 29 in a final commissioning ceremony honoring the 23rd anniversary of AFROTC on the campus.

By mutual agreement last summer between the College and the Air Force the program is being terminated this week because of dwindling AFROTC enrollments on campus.

Receiving their gold bars were Mark B. Macomber of Albany, N.Y., and William F. Fuller of Gales Ferry, Conn.

Macomber also received the Lawrence G. Silver Memorial Award which annually has gone to the outstanding cadet and Fuller received a savings bond for exceptional academic achievement.

Jonathan E. Miller of Wilmington, Del., was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps by Marine Capt. Clifford G. Blau at the same ceremony. Miller completed the Corps' special off-campus program.

Air Force Major Richard I. Bruhaker, professor of aerospace studies, delivered the charge to the new air force officers and Trinity President Lockwood presented the commissions, all of which became effective following graduation from the College the next day. Air Force Capt. Lawrence D. Flynn administered the oath.

The Air Force ROTC program was first established at Trinity in 1948. At the height of its enrollment in 1953 there were 533 students--or more than half of the undergraduate student body participating. For many years there has been an annual review that was one of the spring highlights on the campus.
Thoughtful Advice

I have just had the latest issue of the Trinity Reporter and, having read the editorial, want to give my opinion of it. I enjoyed the quarterly Alumni Magazine. But I must say I think that the new publication serves us better. As the editorial said, it carries a greater sense of immediacy and conveys a better new publication serves us better. As the make sense for a special, slick-paper time. I see something that would carry hands) and remains so though to a lesser extent. And finally participation in such contributions, he said. parents and alumni gave to the program. This year 2,339 contributed, he said.

Curran Promoted To Full Professor

Dr. Ward Curran '57 of West Hartford has been promoted to full professor of economics.

Curran, who has been on the faculty since 1960, is a specialist in institutional finance and price theory. He is the author of the book "Institutions of Financial Management," which will be sequel this year.

This brings to 20 the total number of years Curran has been a professor at Trinity. He is the last among the original nine instructors who are still teaching at the college.

GIVING

More alumni are giving more than before," Rees said. Last year 2,089 alumni gave to the program. That year 2,539 alumni contributed. This year 2,608 alumni contributed $79,698 or about $20,000 more than last year.

The record annual giving funds came from three new categories of donors: Business and Industry, $53,174; Foundations, $3,078. Prior to this year, gifts from alumni and parents were record and part of the annual Annual Giving Program.

TESTIMONIAL: Dr. Arthur H. Hughes, retiring after 36 years at Trinity, is shown with Mrs. Hughes and President Lockwood at a testimonial held in his honor at the Hartford Hilton, May 18. Some 200 colleagues and former students attended the gala affair honoring Dr. Hughes' long service as administrator and teacher. Among the many citations and tributes was an Alumni Medal of Excellence voted by the Board of Fellows. Dr. Hughes holds an earned master degree and an honorary degree from Trinity. He and Mrs. Hughes plan to reside in Ormond Beach, Florida.
The page contains text about a variety of topics, including academic achievements, career highlights, and educational initiatives. Here is a structured summary of the key points:

Campus Notes
- Mitchell N. Pappas, associate professor of fine arts, was named Fine Arts Chairman for the Hartford Civic Arts Festival held June 6-13 at Constitution Plaza sponsored by the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce.
- Two members of the faculty have been appointed to the rank of associate professor, effective in September. David Viner, who was appointed assistant professor for the American Foundation for the Blind, and Robert D. Slaight, associate professor of liberal studies, have been appointed to the rank of associate professor.
- Dr. Clarence H. Barber, professor of music and coordinator of the Trinity-Hart Program in Music, gave a pre-opera lecture for the Hartford Opera Theater's Gold in March entitled "Puccini and his Music." The lecture was held at the University of Connecticut.

New Initiatives
- Eleven Trinity students, including three coeds, have been elected to the Trinity chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the second-highest honor accorded with Trinity trustee Henry S. Beer, chairman of the Trinity Beta chapter, (far right) are (from left) William Graff, Laura Sobol, Norma Schreiber, Jacqueline Volk, Noah Stanley, Kenneth Brownstein, Spencer Knapp, Louis Binini, Gary Rosen, Thomas Wiswall, and Russell Kelley. All of the new members graduated this year except Miss Volk who expects to finish work on her bachelor's degree (after only two years) in August.

TEGA Holds Lively Conference
- Education has been held over in this country. Industry has been forced to hire beyond the education level required for the job anticipated. Once hired, these "over-educated" individuals become disillusioned with the type of work for which they were employed. Liberal arts-oriented institutions ought to own up to the fact that they have always been involved in career preparation. This fact would encourage internships in industry, more cooperative work-study programs, and assistantships in the field.

Interview with Donald D. Hook
- A father of two children who received his law degree from Harvard Law School after leaving Trinity, Shaw has been active in New York politics, serving at various times as chairman of the Republican Town Committee and a member of the Westchester County Republican Committee.

Reported Appointed News Bureau Head
- Paul J. Gallagher, an education writer for the Hartford Times, has been appointed Executive Director of the News Bureau. He succeeds Robert M. Sailer, who has held the post since 1967.
Trinity has received a bequest of over $2,000,000, the largest single bequest in the College's 148 years. The bequest was left by Charles A. Lewis of the class of 1893, formerly of Ridgefield, Conn., who died in Atlantic City in 1957 at the age of 86.

In announcing the large bequest, President Lockwood said: "By this magnificent gift to his Alma Mater, Mr. Lewis has made a lasting contribution to assist us in maintaining the high standards of education which he so cherished as a student some 80 years ago."

"The College is deeply grateful for this generous gift which will become a living endowment in memory of his parents. This bequest is a splendid example of the kind of support and genuine conviction from alumni and friends which is so vitally necessary and upon which a distinguished private college so much depends to continue to make its contribution to young men and women."

At the time of his death, Mr. Lewis left the income from his estate to his sister, Miss Annette Lewis of New York City, with the stipulation that upon her death the principal would come to Trinity. Miss Lewis died in April of this year.

Mr. Lewis, who spent much of his life in farming and forestry in Ridgefield, Conn., spent his later years residing in Atlantic City and New York City. A graduate of St. Paul's School, Concord, N.H., he attended Trinity, where he was captain of the track team and played football. He received a masters degree in forestry from the University of Washington in 1918. Mr. Lewis was a graduate of Trinity, class of 1896, and served the college as a trustee from 1896 until his death in 1890. He was president of the Uncasville Cotton Manufacturing Plant in Montville, Conn.

Charles Lewis, who inherited much of father's cotton buildings, invested in oil stock at the turn of the century and spent most of his life in farming and conservation.

The Lewis bequest is the first received by the College in excess of $1 million. The previous largest estate received by Trinity was that bequested to the College by Louis Downes in 1956 amounting to $915,000. The Downes Memorial Clock Tower and administration building was built with those funds along with the establishment of the Downes Endowment Fund which has been used to improve faculty salaries. Mr. Downes was the class of '88 and a trustee of the college from 1948 until 1953.

There are at least two very heartening things to be said about this bequest of two million dollars Trinity College has just received.

One is primarily factual. Trinity President Lockwood has described the gift from the late Charles A. Lewis, Class of 1893, as "magnificent." And of course it truly is. It is the largest single bequest in the 148-year history of the college—more than twice the amount of the previous biggest estate. In addition, it comes at a time when private colleges all over the country are feeling an acute financial pinch, making it all the more welcome at the college 'neath the elms.

The second heartening point also finds its text in Mr. Lockwood's words: "Mr. Lewis has made a lasting contribution to assist us in maintaining the high standards of education which he so cherished as a student some 80 years ago."

One would like to suppose that all colleges and universities, private or public-supported, are striving to maintain high standards of education. Yet one wonders sometimes how well that supposition or hope is being borne out. Not alone for want of money, either Willy-nilly, in many cases education is being reduced to a quantitative rather than a qualitative thing due to the irreplaceable need for mass production of college students.

Then too, winds of change are blowing across college campuses in these turbulent times. Innovations are being demanded or offered, the value of which is uncertain, to put it mildly. Whole concepts of education are being redefined, their validity still existing only in theory.

Thus it is most comforting to hear President Lockwood again speak of maintaining high standards. It is also comforting that Mr. Lewis not only cherished them, but took such a magnificent way of securing their continuance. The finest tribute, memorial and thanks to Mr. Lewis reside in Trinity's intention to push ever on for quality education. So, gratitude to all.

Carillon Concert Series Renewed

Hundreds of Connecticut residents—some armed with picnic baskets, others pushing baby buggies—will be coming to sprawl on the Trinity campus again this summer as some of the nation's leading carillon players return to play the massive bells which stand 163 feet above the College Chapel.

The first carillon player will weave his way up the long, spiral staircase to the tower where the 30 gigantic steel bells are housed on June 23, at 7:15 p.m., beginning a series of evening concerts which will be held every Wednesday for the entire summer.

The practice of holding free summer carillon concerts began at Trinity in 1957, some 18 years after the John Landon Plumb Memorial Carillon was cast in the College Chapel Tower, and has become a tradition cherished by residents of the Greater Hartford area.

Guest carillonneurs for 1971 will be: June 23, David M. Angelica '70, former master carillonneur, Trinity College; June 30, William R. Carlson '66, former master carillonneur, Trinity College; July 7, Diunno Lind, St. Martin's Episcopal Church, New York City; July 14, James R. Lawson, First Presbyterian Church, Hartford City; July 21, George F. Mail, Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts; July 28, Robert Grogan, The National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Washington, D.C.; August 4, Robert Brainard, Hon. '46 and '59, bringing the total bequest to $250,345.85, which was designated for retirement of indebtedness.

A bequest of $5,000 has been received from the estate of Edward M. Day for the Watkinson Library. In addition, gifts have been received in memory of the following alumni:

Connecticut Public Television
Moving to New Headquarters

by Sue Conner
CTV Promotion Department

This summer Connecticut Public Television, a non-profit independent corporation, will take another big step in its continued rapid growth of serving the state when it moves its headquarters and main studio from Boardman Hall to a new building located in 1 1/4 acres of land formerly part of the campus.

The following story from CPTV relates the part Trinity has played in the development of this corporation from an idea in 1958 to a significant communications medium which reaches thousands of school children daily with in-school programs and blankets most of the homes in the state through a network of four channels. Daily offerings literally run from A to Z in subject matter and include both locally produced programs and those emanating from the Public Broadcasting System, the nation’s fourth network--Ed.

In 1967, the Connecticut General Assembly allocated funds for the construction of a new building to house Connecticut Public Television (CPTV), and a site was needed and was found; The Trustees of Trinity College offered to sell 1 1/4 acres at the edge of the campus for that purpose.

This most recent event is an example of the strong relationship and spirit of cooperation that has existed between Trinity and CPTV since the inception of noncommercial television in Connecticut. During the summer of 1967, the Connecticut Public Television Corporation (CPTV) had allocated three educational television channels to Connecticut, a commitment to educational television already existing as a part of the state activating ETv. The project was found to be too costly, but the state did agree to give permission to apply for the educational channels.

In 1958, a committee of private citizens undertook a nationwide study of the educational television stations then in operation, and explored the possibility of putting ETV on the air in Connecticut. The result was the formation in December 1959 of the Connecticut Educational Television Corporation.

The new corporation opened negotiations with a variety of organizations for support and assistance. First among these was Trinity College which offered space on campus for offices and later for studios. The offer was gratefully accepted and Connecticut Educational Television Corp. amended its bylaws to state that two representatives of Trinity were to be appointed to its board of trustees by the College.

Over the years, these representatives have included Dr. Albert C. Jacobs, past president of the College; Thomas A. Smith '44, vice president; and the late Robert S. Morris '16.

The basement of the Library was an early home of Conn. ETv. In the summer of 1962, a small studio, control room and offices were constructed there. In 1966, space in Boardman Hall was made available, and the production and programming departments of what is now Connecticut Public Television still operate there.

This summer CPTV will move its headquarters and the Channel 24 staff into new quarters located on New Britain Avenue. The new $1.2 million building, which will be dedicated sometime in the early fall, contains some 24,000 square feet and provides for a multi-part television studio as well as office space for the corporation which operates four television channels; 24-Hartford, 49-Bridgeport, 53-Norwich and 71 in New Haven.

These students have long been involved with the Connecticut Public Television, even before it went on the air, working as part-time employees on construction and in production.

Their dedication over the years is legendary. When CPTV covered the state political conventions after the close of the school year, one student part timer drove from Philadelphia to Hartford two weekends to continue his work behind the cameras.

Two Trinity graduates who started with Connecticut Public Television when it was operating in the Library basement are Andrea S. Yocom '63 who is today program manager and Alfred Steel '64, now production manager of CPTV.

Producer Smokey Forester '69 and production assistant Jay Millard '70 and also producer John Congrove '66 began their careers as part-time workers. Many other student part timers have gone on to careers in communications.

This new year is an internship program for academic credit awarded to Richard T. Markowitz '73 for the study of television production techniques. Professor John Dando of the Trinity English department is faculty advisor for the internship.

NEW QUARTERS for Connecticut Public Television.

Student Finds Public TV Internship Rewarding

by Richard T. Markowitz '73

Alan Neithor of the Connecticut Consumer Association was in the Newsroom being interviewed by anchorman Pat Sheehan. Just before the interview the floor manager informed me through the intercom that Pat was dropping a segment we had taped earlier that night. One of the participants from a local bottle collector's exhibition had brought some of his interesting liquor bottles to the studio. But I could see that Pat wanted to keep Neithor on longer than we had planned so I told the tape engineer that he could take the tape down. At 10:58 the live interview was over and I thought Pat was going to close the show. Instead he read a piece of copy from the UPI wire and then went into the intro for the tape which was now back in the can. "Tonight Connecticut Newsroom looks at a new fad for collectors...a new sort of hobby."

I spoke quickly into the intercom, "Tell him no, wave your hands, it's not up." The floor manager ran over to the camera and signaled to Pat. In the control room the tape engineer jumped— he switched the focus back and grabbed the tape. Pat had just read past the roll cue when he caught on and went into a stretch, "We'll have that for you shortly," a sign to me that he still wanted it and would have to know when it was ready. The tape was ready in about twenty seconds and I called it to roll right away. I told the floor manager to give Pat five seconds so he would stop his introduction when our tape was ready to show. Pat stopped his introduction just in time and I took the tape.

"Newsroom" is not an ordinary news show when it comes to directing. It's full of unexpected things which demand that the director be able to think on his feet. But it's also a good show from which to learn directing which is what I did during the past semester with Connecticut Public Television. When Pat was through with the script I would go over it with the floor manager and audio man to decide where to seat the guests, when to bring them in, and how to utilize any visual materials they might have brought along.

At the director I was responsible for coordinating everything that got on the air—cameras, videotape, slides, and film. When the semester began in January, I had experience as a cameraman and floor manager from working part-time for the station since my freshman year. A director, if he's going to be cool and consistent, must be thoroughly familiar with all of the components which make up the television program. The first part of the internship consisted of learning the operation of master control from where the station's broadcasts originate. After this I served as a video switcher for All Steel (Trinity '64), the production manager who is coordinating the internship in line with Trinity's Open Seminars Program.

After four weeks of switching "Newsroom" and other shows as well as doing a few interview segments, I was considered ready to direct "Newsroom" almost by myself. For one more week All or another staff director stood behind me while I sat at the switcher with the script and directed the show.

Once the basic fear of directing was overcome, I began to concentrate on using the camera more effectively. I tried to find news shots other than the established ones in addition to cutting with more impact. This was a good way to learn directing because the shots offered so many different types of things to cover. There was a good combination of the scripted and unexpected—many times we found that someone would appear on the show—only a few minutes before air or else they just show up as Jimmy Breslin did when he spoke at Trinity.

The Open Seminars Program and the opportunity to gain exposure to a career I am contemplating after college. The internship has given me a background in television exposure. I experienced a completely different type of pressure that would never be found in a college atmosphere. As brief, because of the professional responsibility that rested on my shoulders this past semester, I will welcome and appreciate returning to classes in the fall.

I received a note from LUTHER BRONNING in which he says that he and Mrs. Browning recently spent a weekend at a KAM on in Charlotte, NC, 44 and has an opportunity to renew his memories of Trinity College. Andy showed me the very much impressed with all the new buildings which Andy showed around and a good crowd was there. You 25'ers back in town? Let's meet up in late 1971 and have a good time and perhaps a 25th Reunion.

Our Alumni SECRETARY JOHN Neyl informs us that we are scheduled to hold our next reunion this fall along with 1976 so make your plans now to be on campus November 12, 13 and 14. We'll have a zoom and most likely a jaunt to the New England Plantation Museum of the 1940's. Your chairman, ANDY FORRESTER and yours truly, JOSIE (I'll bet you accept the chair-shipmanship of this, our 44th reunion. We'll have posted as plans develop and would appreciate any and all suggestions you would have for us.

Hearing had reached my level of incompetence after 44 years minus six days, at the same time, his appointment as editor is reappointed on July 1, 1971 to search for greener pastures. Future plans are still, send him a bottle.

Having reached my 45th weight of advancing years. He is convalescing after undergoing surgery at the Hartford Hospital in Hyannis, Massachusetts. He had lived for years in Oriental where he was a member of the Greenville Men's Club and of the Congregational Church. He is survived by his wife, Bencine Potter Jensen, and three sons, Jon, David and Thomas, and three grandchildren.

Congratulations to BILL SMYTH who was elected to the 1971 Connecticut General Assembly from Stratford.

SARA L. GREENBERG is the President of Lawrence Multifamily Corp. of Beverly Hills, Calif. Her title is Project Closing Coordinator. Good job! Address: 4623 Natwick Ave., Apt. 105, Sherman Oaks, Calif. 91403.

FRANK FASI is still the hard working mayor of San Diego (and, I believe, he is also the leading candidate for the upcoming election). His eighty-five percent vote is a reflection of the positive changes he and his team have implemented in the city. The Mayor is trying to get a one car one family situation by 1976.

Before reporting on the items which have been consolidated over the past few months, I would like to send a couple of lines about you and what you are doing. Do it now, because you won't need to do it next week.

I am going to a couple of days in Mexico City last February and had an opportunity to visit with some of my friends there. I met with BARRY and KAREN ROYDEN. Barry has been serving as Chief of Staff to the Governor of the State of Arizona and is now serving as the chief of staff to the Governor of the State of Oregon. I met with him and he and KAREN simply could not have been more hospitable.

And I had the opportunity to meet with BOB BRITTON who has been a major force in the development of the U.S. Air Force and is now serving as the Deputy Secretary of Defense.

JEROME KERHO has returned to San Francisco where he is currently serving as the chairman of the Board of Directors of the San Francisco-based Bank of America. He is responsible for the oversight of the bank's operations and is a key advisor to the executive team.

At the end of the quarter, the bank's earnings were strong, with a 10% increase in net income compared to the same period last year. The bank has been successful in expanding its customer base and increasing its market share in the region.

The bank plans to continue its growth strategy, focusing on expanding its presence in key markets and improving its efficiency. The bank also plans to continue its focus on innovation and technology, with the aim of enhancing the customer experience and increasing operational efficiency.

In the coming quarter, the bank will be looking at opportunities to increase its loan portfolio, particularly in the commercial and industrial sectors. The bank also plans to expand its investment banking and wealth management services, with a focus on providing tailored solutions to its clients.

The bank's comprehensive risk management framework will continue to be a key focus, with a strong emphasis on ensuring that the bank remains wellcapitalized and well-regulated. The bank is well-positioned to continue its growth and success in the coming quarters.

Crew Bound for Henley

The varsity heavyweight crew, winner of the New England Championship, will again represent the United States in the Henley Royal Regatta in England.

Since Commencement, the Trinity oarsmen have been working out twice a day on the Connecticut River in preparation for the Bantam's second assault on the Ladies Plate at the famed Henley Regatta which will be held this year from June 30 to July 3.

The 1969 crew, the first Trinity eight to go to Henley, fought its way to the finals before losing to Nereus of Holland. The Regatta having been added in 1845 went to Henley with the 1969 delegation. Three members of the present crew have tracing back to England, and Good Luck.

The present crew won the New England Championship, and competed in the American Henley June 5 on Lake George and will compete in the Royal Henley Regatta in England June 30.

Jeff Parker of McLean, Va., the bow oarsman for the freshman eight, received the David G. Wicks Award for the first year man "who best exemplifies the spirit of the founders of the Trinity College Rowing Association." Jeff Clark, a senior from Villanova, Pa., a stroke of the JV eight, received the Torch Award "for doing most to foster and perpetuate crew," while Doug Lake, a sophomore from Dedham, Mass., and a varsity oarsman, received the Hartford Barge Club Rowing Award "most improved rower trophy."

A new award, "The Coaches Award," went to John Tyner, a senior from Alexandria, Va., and a lightweight crew member "for exhibiting exceptional merit." Outstanding crew captain, Steve Lines, presented his varsity letter and a vase to Fred Ho, an outgoing co-captain of the Friends of Trinity Rowing. The lacrosse team, which compiled a 6-3 record has elected James Nelson of South Wethersfield has been reelected captain of the tennis team while junior Richard Denham of Mahopac, N.Y., a shot putter and hammer thrower, received the coaches sportsmanship award.

One of the individual highlights of the season came at the New Englands where freshmen Ron Dukett of Philadelphia placed second in the 220 and third in the 200-yard dash. He set a Trinity record of 21.6 in the longer sprint. In all, counting qualifying heats he had to run seven sprints in one day.

JUNIOR Richard N. Palmer of Wethersfield has been reelected captain of the tennis team while junior Richard Palmar of Quogue, N.Y., won the Craig Most Improved Player Award.

CREW SUPPORTER HONORED - Fred Houghton (right), outgoing president of Friends of Trinity, received a letter sweater from Steve Lines (center), captain of this year's crew team. Lines, who earned the letter as a varsity rower, made the presentation in appreciation of Houghton's efforts in boosting the crew among Trinity alumni. Looking on is Bishop Walter H. Gray, Hon. '41, the new president of the Friends.
