Campaign in Final Months
$114,590 Short of Goal

With three months remaining in the 1971-72 Annual Campaign, $114,590 must be raised to meet the $425,000 goal.

A report dated March 20 from the Development Office indicates a total of $310,410 has been raised in gifts and pledges. This is the identical amount raised last year at this same period. Goal of the successful 1970-71 drive was $400,000.

Of the five categories comprising the Annual Fund, two have already exceeded their goals - Friends of Trinity and Foundations (non-corporate). Alumni Fund is at 68% of goal and the Parents Fund at 65% of goal. Last year at this time, the Alumni Fund was at 93% and the Parent Fund was at 94%.

The number of contributors in the current campaign--2,136--is 370 more than last year, an increase of 21%.

“The sharp increase in number of givers,” said Judson Rees, director of development, “indicates that alumni, parents, and friends recognize the importance of making gifts to buttress the quality of the academic program at Trinity. Morever, as impressive as this increase may be, to date 84% of the alumni have not yet contributed to the 1971-72 Alumni Fund.”

Rees also pointed to the increase in the number of contributors who qualify for membership in the Anniversary Club ($150 to $999). To date, 323 have qualified as compared with 285 at the same time last year.

“This generous response,” Rees said, “demonstrates that Trinity is also receiving many more larger gifts. Although gifts in any amount are needed and most welcome, achievement of the $425,000 goal would be assured by a greater number of larger gifts before the deadline of June 30.”

Details of the March 20 report:

ALUMNI FUND (goal $250,000) - $169,161 raised from 1,632 givers (last year at the same time - $186,832 from 1,322).

PARENTS FUND (goal $85,000) - $55,231 raised from 380 givers (last year - $62,715 from 364).

BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY ASSOCIATES (goal $50,000) - $48,354 raised from 72 givers (last year - $43,378 from 44).

FRIENDS OF TRINITY FUND (goal $15,000) - $18,964 raised from 48 givers (last year - $17,783 from 30).

FOUNDATIONs, non-corporate (goal $15,000) - $15,700 raised from 4 givers (last year - $9,883 from 3).

Mathematician's Archives
Housed in Austin Arts Center

A collection of geometric art objects, assembled by the late Edwin M. Blake, former head of the mathematics department of the University of Arizona, is being permanently housed in Trinity's Austin Arts Center.

The Blake Collection was officially opened to the public on March 14, when Sir Roland Penrose, an authority on Picasso, delivered the first of three important lectures on contemporary artists. The three Blake Memorial Lectures, given from March 14-16, were on the topics: "Picasso: Beauty and the Beast;" "Max Ernst: The Elephant of the Celebes;" and "Three Spaniards: Picasso, Miro and Tapiés."

The Blake Collection was displayed at a special exhibition in the Wadsworth Gallery, and in the Blake Room on the second floor of the Arts Center. It represents 40 years of scholarly labor, and contains manuscripts, microfilm, photographs, models, slides and other materials related to Dr. Blake's theory and research. Also included in the collection are objects such as textiles and ceramics, the design of which seem to embody some aspect of Dr. Blake's method of artistic design.

That method, called "A Method for the Creation of Geometric Design Based on Structure" was devised as a "justification" of abstract art, a systematic attempt to classify and delineate the elements of abstract art that are based on geometry.

It was in the early part of the 20th Century, when cubism was emerging in France and expressionism developing in Germany, that Dr. Blake began to develop his language of forms which the nonobjective artists could draw (see BLAKE, page 5).

COMMUNITY AFFAIRS

A Dialogue with Hartford

"Mutual benefit!" for school and community is the principle which guides the work of Trinity's Office of Community Affairs, according to Ivan A. Backer, director of the program since its beginning 2½ years ago.

Backer, who came to Trinity in the fall of 1969 to organize the College's relationship with the Hartford community, says he has tried to develop the potential for two-way relationships, in which programs would result in positive effects for both the city and its people, as well as the College and its students.

Today the program involves placing students in volunteer and field work situations, working with faculty and administration as resources for the community, establishing regular programs such as the series of Community Educational Workshops and summer athletic activities, sponsoring events on campus with community groups, and further developing contacts with public and civic organizations.

More than 100 students have been involved in volunteer programs through the Office of Community Affairs; 70 more are doing field work in conjunction with academic courses; another 25 are engaged in independent study and Open Semester work in the city, working as Legislative interns or participating in the work-study Urban Corps of Hartford, on the job for the city.

1972 REUNION PLAN

The Executive Committee of the Alumni Association has voted to reverse its 1966 decision concerning reunions. At that time, the plan adopted scheduled reunions for classes which had been contemporaries during undergraduate days. Beginning this fall, the traditional plan that was in effect prior to 1966 will be followed.

Gettier Heads Department Of Religion

Dr. John A. Gettier, assistant professor of religion, has been appointed to a two-year term as chairman of the department. He succeeds Dr. Edmond Lafi Cherbonnier, currently on a sabbatical and leave of absence in England.

Dr. Gettier, who has been acting chairman of the Department during the absence of Dr. Cherbonnier, joined the Trinity faculty in 1966. He was promoted to the rank of assistant professor last fall.

Dr. Cherbonnier, who has been chairman of the Department of Religion since 1955, is stepping down under a policy of chairman/rotation initiated by the Board of Trustees in 1967.

Dr. Gettier, a 1956 graduate of Wesleyan, taught at the Gilman School in Baltimore for one year before attending Yale Divinity School, where he received his Bachelor of Divinity degree in 1961. He received a Th.D. degree last year from the Union Theological Seminary in New York.

He has also studied at the University of Chicago and Princeton Theological Seminary, and is the contributor of many book reviews to the Union Seminary Quarterly Review. His specialty is the Old Testament.

Dr. Gettier's term as department chairman will expire June 30, 1974.

Students Confront Politics of Today

In a quiet, wood-paneled lounge, a class of Trinity College men and women debate the issues which disrupted campuses nationwide during the '60s and which remain critical issues for most Americans in the '70s.

"The purpose of this analysis is to provide the data for a study of the possible elimination of non-violent and violent forms; what the role of the university should be and what part students should play in its decision; what a rational United States foreign policy would be like; what is the rationale for Women's Lib, and whether a professional Army is more compatible with democracy than a conscripted one.

Larry Woods' Philosophy of Helping Others

Larry J. Woods, a 25-year-old Trinity College junior, will tell you that one of life's purposes is "to help other people." He'll tell you how he put that belief to work in Vietnam, how he applies it in Hartford's North End, and how it influences what he wants to do with his education.

Woods, who transferred to Trinity from Greater Hartford Community College last year, has been named Trinity's first recipient of a special Aetna Hartford's North End - as a part-time grant from Aetna Life and Casualty. The remaining $500 will go to Trinity's Fund for Disadvantaged Students.

An urban studies major, Woods has long been using the city for his laboratory. Born in Outuman, Ga., he came to Hartford in 1965, and latched onto the Inner City Exchange - a non-profit community center in Hartford's North End - as a part-time helper.

He joined the Army and returned to Hartford in 1967 after a two-year stint, including a year in Vietnam. He went back to the Inner City Exchange, where he still works as Program Director part-time during the academic year and full time in the summer.

He started his own television show - "Unabridged," on Hartford's independent Channel 18 - he says it developed out of the Inner City Exchange. The "public service" program, new things is old, brings people together "to discuss differences," Woods says, and "helps people help themselves." One thing his show has done, he says, is make people "aware of the different types of services available in the city."

As a field work project for his Urban Studies major, Woods is involved in the city's Higher Horizons project, for Spanish-speaking and black ninth-graders at Hartford High School.

He is also involved in an Independent Study program with Mrs. Sandra Klebanoff, president of the Hartford Board of Education. Part of his work involves an evaluation of Project Concern, a program under which Hartford inner-city children attend schools in suburban towns.

Some of his spare time he spends helping a family in a public housing project, and working with ghetto children "on an individual basis." It's something he likes to do: when he was in Vietnam, he spent time teaching Vietnamese children to speak English.

Woods, a minister's son, is at the Inner City Exchange every Tuesday and Wednesday from 3 p.m. on, is there on weekends or for special events, "Whenever I get a chance I try to be there," he says.

The Exchange is a community center "designed to help people help themselves through recreational, educational, and social activities," he says. It also provides counseling services, assisting people on welfare or unemployment, or with housing problems. It is also, he says, "designed to bridge the gap between inner-city people and suburbanites, developing interaction between people of different racial backgrounds.

The Rev. Herbert Smith, director of the Inner City Exchange, says Woods "has not been concerned about hours, but rather people," during his years at the Exchange. He says Woods has "done a very good job, and shows a definite dedication to the inner city."

For his own part, Woods says he finds his work "quite rewarding because you're using your time to help other people - and that's very important today."

At Trinity, he says, he is "really being made aware of life," and is taking advantage of the new interdisciplinary major in urban studies which the College offers. He says he hopes to "venture into law," and return to the inner city. He says he "would like to see the political system more responsible," and eventually wants to find himself "in a policy-making position to help the people of the city."

He says the Aetna scholarship is "a wonderful thing to happen to me: it shows that you who helped you, that people do care, and that people will come to your aid when you need them."

And Woods, who never stops smiling, adds: "It's my job - it's my life - to meet people and help people wherever I can. It's more or less a trademark of mine."

"Why should a person just live and exist?" he asks. "We are all here to live for a purpose - to help other people."

Workshop Tells Teachers about a New Way to Teach

Faculty from eight colleges in Connecticut spent two days on campus in late February learning about the "Keller Plan," a new teaching method in which the student works at his own pace with self-study material prepared by the instructor.

The workshop on the Keller Plan was led by Dr. Ben Green, senior research scientist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was assisted by Dr. Mark Shamamy, assistant professor of engineering at Trinity who was coordinator of the event.

In addition to Trinity, which hosted the workshop, other colleges represented were: Wesleyan, University of Hartford, St. Joseph's College, University of New Haven, Fairfield University, Southern Connecticut State College and Thames Valley State Technical College.

Participants included faculty in physics, mathematics, chemistry, biology, psychology, engineering and economics. Trinity faculty representing all of the physical and life sciences took part.

The Keller Plan, developed by psychologist Fred Keller, is now being used by more than 300 instructors in colleges and universities nationwide. Dr. Shamamy used a modified Keller Plan course at Trinity in 1970 and reports most of the students involved said they preferred the new method.

Under the plan, material in each course is divided into short units, and mastery of each unit is the criterion for progress to the next unit. A student may take a test in a particular unit as many times as is necessary without prejudicing his grade.

He may complete the course in weeks or months, according to his needs. The instructor sets out the goals of the course, assembles materials, writes examinations and supervises tutors who provide individual help to each student as needed. Lectures are given sparingly and for motivational purposes only.

As a result of the workshop, the Keller Plan will be used in four Trinity courses next semester, as well as in other college classrooms across the state.
Community

In addition to keeping faculty and administrative staff as close to people for the city, Backer's office is working with the College's Urban-Environmental Studies Program to develop internships and field work placements, and with the Admissions Office to encourage more qualified applicants to come to Trinity.

The Community Educational Workshops — there have been seven so far — are for people on campus from every section of Hartford. They include parents, students, teachers, school administrators, and concerned citizens who meet to discuss educational issues. About 100 people attend each of the sessions, and Trinity faculty partake in various ways.

Topics of the workshops have included: "Responsible Involvement in Hartford Schools," "Issues in Accountability: Who is Responsible for What?" "School Busing: Are There Any Alternatives?" and "The Budget and Budgeting Process."

Last summer Backer sponsored a language and cultural appreciation program for 15 Hartford school teachers. For five days, they went, for example, to the Commission on Aid to Higher Education, the program included intensive workshops in Spanish at the Puerto Rican idiom, and in "Puerto Rican Culture." Trinity faculty from the Modern Languages and Educational Department as well as members of the Hartford Puerto Rican community were instructors. One phase of the program was conducted in Puerto Rico, and a concluding part took place in the Puerto Rican community in Hartford.

Funding for the second year of the program is being sought now, Backer says.

Many events are held on campus in cooperation with community groups, such as the Inter-institutional Courses in last December in conjunction with the Greater Hartford Community Council and 13 other civic groups.

In addition, the Community Affairs Office has arranged for use of the athletic facilities by the students in the Hartford school system's Alternate Learning Center, as well as use of the athletic facilities by the students at the Shanti School, an experimental regional high school.

Backer's time is also taken attending public meetings and hearings at the State Legislature, the City Council, Board of Education and communities. He is a member of the boards of the Greater Hartford Community Council, the Community Council's Information and Referral Service, the Greater Hartford Campus Ministry, the Shanti School, and the Blue Hills Housing Services Corporation. He is also a member of the Voluntary Action Center, sponsored by the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce.

This catalog of activities, Backer says, reflects his view that "colleges and universities have a crucial role to play in response to the urban crises," and defines Trinity's stance in terms of "mutual advantage."

Backer says that when he began to explore the ways in which Trinity could "positively respond to community needs," he found that "being the College's major resources were the following: students who work and learn in the community, the facilities of the College, the especially the athletic Center's gymnasium, were interested in urban problems, and the reputation of Trinity as a college of excellence.

At the same time, Backer says, he "discovered that the community had many resources which were highly useful to Trinity's academic program" and he believed that "if these resources could be tapped creatively they would augment the quality and variety of the College's offerings."

Thus, he says, he formulated the "important criterion which was to be the basis of Trinity's college community relationships: any program or activity had to be a trade-off relationship, based on a quid pro quo, which has mutual educational value to both the community and to the College."

For example, a field work assignment "has to be a good learning experience for the student, and has to result in some useful work for the organization to which the student is assigned," he says.

Similarly, a research project, "must be constructed not only as a useful teaching device, but the results must have some applicability to some group or individual in the city. The results of surveys and studies by members of the Trinity community must be shared with the larger community."

The educational forums and other conferences, Backer says, are of interest to both the College and the community, and "to bring together students, faculty and community people in a fruitful interchange of ideas and varying viewpoints, to the benefit of all involved."

He observes that since Trinity is an "educational institution, most of the programs planned by his office relate to educational issues."

A native of Czechoslovakia, Backer got experience in urban work while serving as rector in a church in East Rutherford, N.J. He came to Trinity at a time when, nationally, campus unrest and "a growing concern for the plight of the cities forced educators and those in urban centers -- to become more involved with their surrounding communities."

In short, he says, such involvement "can help to ameliorate some of the pressing problems of the communities in which the College is located. The long-term result is to educate students to be more sensitive, more knowledgeable, and more prepared to assume leadership roles in an urban society."

SKi At Any Age

By Merritt H. Stites, M.D. and Robert D. O'Malley '38, M.D. Award House, 115 pages

Reviewed by Paul H. Stacy

"Ski at Any Age" is a pleasantly enthusiastic exhortation for everyone to exercise, or, more exactly, for older people to go skiing. The basic message of his short book — short, but nonetheless padded is that skiing is an exercise.

The author is both doctors, one (O'Malley) a director of the Mount Tom Ski Area. They offer a great deal of encouragement to people over 50 to start skiing. First they allay fear of injury — 80 per cent of all disabling ski injuries occur under the age of 30. Also, do not fear brittle bones — brittle bones comes from inactivity, not old age, and apparently offers no real disadvantage (Still, "Avoid high stuff boots like the plague.")

Second, they claim that active exercise is more important in adult years than in youth, "a pattern unfortunately reversed in the typical American male."

"Vigorous physical training began in middle age may enable an almost complete reversal of the effects of 40 years of sedentary living." (Surprisingly enough, the doctors go out of their way to state that they do not recommend moderation.)

In short, skiing does not strain the heart; it revitalizes it. "The benefits of this sustained, vigorous sport are great, particularly for the cardio-vascular system if all children could be taught to ski at an early age, and if they were able to continue skiing on a year-round basis on into their mature years, there might well be so marked a reduction in coronary heart disease as to be a real society."

Everyone who skis will welcome the doctors' conclusions, a conclusion skiers fanatically believe, but enjoy seeing confirmed: Skiers have a "longer, healthier, and happier life."

PROFESSOR JIM
C.H. Proctor, Class of 1873
Published by Robert F. Craze, 79 Pages

Reviewed by Ralph M. Williams, Professor of English

This little biography has as its subject one of the first founding fathers, and for thirty years the head janitor, at Trinity College. Born a slave in Yonkers, New York, about 1770, Jim Williams ran away about 1810, taking a boat to New London, Conn. From there he shipped on a West Indian trader and began his sea life which was later to entertain the undergraduates of Trinity College so much. After serving on the vanguard of the War of 1812, and various other ships, he settled down in Hartford, ultimately becoming a servant in the household of Bishop Brownell, the first President of Trinity, when that gentleman came to Hartford in 1821. With the founding of Trinity in 1823, Jim's domestic duties were extended to those of bellringer at the College, a post he held for over fifty years. For fifty years he served the college in these and other capacities, becoming a great favorite with the students.

This biography was written by a graduate of Trinity in the class of 1873 and published that same year by C.S. Lockwood, and Brainard in Hartford. It is now republished by a great friend of the College, C.H. Proctor, Class of 1873, Williams, John F. Robert of Yonkers who was Jim's first "owner." With the reprinting of this book, his birthday, December 19, this little book can take its place as an interesting account of a man who, for over fifty years was a well known citizen of Hartford. His practical, simple philosophy of life, the wisdom learned from experience, doubtless influenced many of the young men at Trinity, so that he deserved the nickname which he acquired early in his career at the college, "Professor Jim."

Consortium Projects Under Way

Several projects are already in progress through the Greater Hartford Consortium for Higher Education, according to President Lockwood, who is chairman of the Consortium's governing board.

The Consortium, a cooperative venture announced in last month's Reporter, involves Trinity, the University of Hartford, St. Joseph's College and Hartford College for Women.

Students have begun taking inter-institutional courses under the auspices of the Consortium, which has provided a mini-bus to transport students from school to school.

In addition, President Lockwood says, cooperation has been arranged with the Hartford Seminary Foundation and Reissner Polytechnic Institute's Hartford Graduate Center on the possibility of joining the Consortium.

The four founding schools are also gathering information about courses which are under development and planning to put together a schedule which would alleviate both problems. The schools are also collecting general information about each other.
upon. He looked upon all abstract art from the viewpoint of the mathematician, as a mathematical problem which could be solved by applying the strict visual logic of geometry.

His collection includes his geometrically-inspired structures made of wood, plaster and paper. They range in complexity from the simple ovoid or egg form, to the highly complicated forms of dodecanuloid. His concerns were with the basic underlying structures as well as the infinite variations of forms which he could derive from them by geometric means. In addition to the structures, he was concerned with isotonics, the scientific application of color and design, as well as the geometric patterns found in textiles. According to the noted art expert Thomas J. Munro, former head of the Cleveland Art Museum and editor of the Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, Blake's work "is full of original and important ideas."

The opening exhibition of Blake's works was prepared by William G. Arthur '73, an art history major working on the Blake Collection. The Blake manuscripts were edited by Arline B. Tehan of West Hartford, who also collaborated in preparing the exhibition and memorial room.

The collection was presented to the College by Dr. Charles H. Blake, son of Dr. Edwin Blake, and former professor of biology at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

President Lockwood, noting that Edwin Blake "was an academician during his entire life," said at the opening of the Blake Memorial that "It is appropriate that the Blake archives and collections now reside on a college campus. We at Trinity are honored that the Edwin M. Blake Memorial now resides here in the Austin Arts Center, where scholars, younger and older, may work with this collection."

VASE WITH THREE HANDLES - a form of tetranuloid
Chairman Dies: Invited For Devotion to Trinity

Barclay Shaw, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the College, died February 20 at his home in Mt. Kisco, N.Y. Mr. Shaw, 58, had served as a member of the Board since 1957, and was elected chairman in June.

A former member of the Trinity College Board of Fellows and once an active member of a number of alumni committees, Mr. Shaw was also chairman of Trinity's 1970-71 Annual Giving Fund, which brought over $350,000 to the College.

In addition to presiding over Trinity's 27-member Board of Trustees, Shaw was chairman of the Board's Development Committee and a member of the Executive and Law committees.

President Lockwood said "Barclay Shaw was a distinguished and devoted alumnus of Trinity College. Over the years he played a vital role in advancing the interests of the College. On the Board of Trustees, as chairman of the development committee, he audaciously sought new funds for Trinity and directed the efforts of others in raising sums giving to records. Most recently as chairman of the Board he contributed compassionately to planning for this decade.

"To all these efforts he brought extraordinary energy, patience, and good will. An infectious sense of humor always obscured his determination to assure Trinity the brilliant future about which he never had any doubts. Sympathetic and understanding, he had the uncanny knack of prodding while still supporting, of questioning (with a lawyer's keenness) while still conveying confidence. I can add from personal experience that seldom have I known anyone with whom it was both more fun and more inspiring to work. For all those reasons, as well as for his extraordinary humanity, Trinity will greatly miss Barclay Shaw. We share in the sorrow of his family and friends."

The former chairman of the Board, Lyman B. Brainerd '30, said "The news of the sudden death of Barclay Shaw has been received with great sadness by his fellow Trustees. Mr. Shaw was elected chairman of the Board at a most critical period in the history of higher education. His devotion to the College and his able leadership have been an inspiration to us all. Although his tenure, measured in time, was brief, Trinity will be the beneficiary of his far-sighted policies for many years to come."

Mr. Shaw who received his LL.B. degree from Harvard in 1938, was senior partner in the New York law firm of Townsend and Lewis. He was past chairman of the Republican Town Committee of New Castle, N.Y., and former member of the executive council of Pi Upsilon fraternity. He was a member and former vestryman of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Mt. Kisco.

He served with the Navy in World War II as a lieutenant. A former secretary of the National Association of Insurance Brokers, Mr. Shaw also wrote a number of articles on tax law for professional journals.

He is survived by his wife, Marion Webb Shaw; two sons, Barclay Jr., a senior at Trinity College and Gregory W., at home; and a brother, Ardern Shaw of Greenwich, Conn.

Memorial donations may be made to the Memorial Fund of St. Mark's Church or the Heart Fund.

The hockey club finished its season with its second loss of the season at arch-rival Wesleyan (6-4). The Cardinals built a 3-1 lead through the first two periods of play and then matched the Battants with a three goal third period to take the victory.

In its best game of the season, Trim scored its first victory even over the Yale J.V.'s 6-3. Although outshot 55-20, the winners combined some excellent goaltending by junior captain Carl Norris with a scoring barrage from six different players to defeat the Bulldogs who fielded a sizable contingent of Canadian players.

Fencing Club (2-6)
The fencers placed 5th in the New England Intercollegiate Fencing Championships held at Holy Cross. Senior co-captain Paul Mayendorf led the Bantams in a solid effort to win state second place in the foil competition while sophomore Neil Glassman took a fifth place in sabre.

In the Class C competition, junior Mal MacColl, next year's captain, reached the third round before being eliminated and Gary Flagher of '73 was knocked out in the third round.

Harvard won the team competition with 37 points followed by U-Penn with 26. Both teams finished 1-1 with 133 points - only one half point behind Dartmouth and one and a half points behind Yale.

Recent Bequests and Memorial Gifts were extremely disappointed that more able-bodied sinocrees (Ed: Note: able-bodied WHAT?) of our June Commencement failed to show. However, quite a few did write in to JIM ENGLISH expressing disappointment over their inability to attend. Sorry, that I do not have the list of names. Jim English took some excellent flashes of the faithful few and their names at the 16 table. And if any of you want a print, I might have some made up. Also, some of the 1950 reunion pictures are available showing about 20 in front of Northam in June 1965, Jim English also took pictures for slides and prints. It occurs to me that any class out 50 years or more should be blacked to have a table the "Immortals" dinner on Friday night. And let’s go back to June reunions. Let me hear from you about that and other items.

FRANK LAMBERT, YOUR NEW SECRETARY, Dutch Smith, and WARREN HALE, all members of the World War I Overseas Flyers Inc., are considering joining another reunion of the group, this time in France in October 72. Let’s go Frank and Warren, there’s not many of us left.

Recently, several alumni have made bequests and memorial gifts to the College.

We hope and pray ALEX MACMURRY, and his wife, are continuing to have a happy and healthy time in Hawaii—the same we say for Dr. PETE ROUGH in Nova Scotia and all of you wherever you are.

How many of us, even around the Hartford area, know or know about BUD KREUBER is a nephew of the great and famous Daily Times Columnist Charles Toomey of Woodland, California.

Now all we know he is doing a great job as co-creator of the history of our Hill St. School in St. John's Creek, Alabama. We are grateful for Dick and his wife, Ber, that they are so fortunate to be vacating their Brim (blue with gold trim) instead of down which we fumed up all around (like a navy white gunboat) too fast-hand-d to try to catch a bunch of Bert's busters thereby averting the game. Bert had the winning run on third base at the time.

FRED BOWDIDGE, is dean of Drury College, Springfield, Mo. and as such is in charge of their Athletic Department.

The Rev. JACK GREENFIELD of Waterbury, Ct., was a guest on the last Spartan WCNX's WCNX's VITAMIN PROGRAM "Mike Line," February 29.

Bert and his wife, Harriet, are making quite a change from surgery at Hartford Hospital.

The Rev. STU COMBS writes he is enjoying a very nice time of it in Hawaii—the same we say for PETE RUSH in Nova Scotia and all of you wherever you are.

Women’s Collegiate Squash Championships Held at Trin

The Bantam varsity basketball team finished second in the tourney, and Miss McAdoo, who was seeded second in the tournament, reached the quarter-finals before being eliminated.

Winter Sports Finals

The Bantam varsity basketball team finished off one of its poorest seasons ever with a spirited but losing effort against cross-town rival, University of Hartford (91-87).

The heavily-favored Hawks, who were subsequently invited to the NCAA college division tourney, proved too strong for the home team and raced to a 55-41 halftime lead. After intermission, Trin lead by senior Sam Merrill, who finished the night with 26 points, outscored Hartford 11-2 to close the gap to 52-57.

The most spectacular individual effort of the season came a few games earlier in the 91-79 win over Kings Point in which sophomores center Bill Fensel poured in 41 points—the second highest total ever by a Trin player—and grabbed 21 rebounds. Fensel was named as one of the top five players on the ECAC’s Division II Weekly All-Star team for his performance and finished the season leading the varsity in scoring (17.3) and rebounding (12.2).

The freshmen clubbed the U. Hartford JV’s 76-54 to finish their season with a 6-8 record. Jim Sanser, a 6-foot 6-inch center from Springfield, Mass., scored 26 points in the winning effort followed by Rod Boldon (Hollind, Ohio) and Dave Lewis (South Hadley, Mass.) with 13 points apiece.

OTHER WINTER SPORTS

VARSITY SQUASH

The racquetmen ended their season by taking 12th place out of 28 teams at the National Intercollegiate Squash Rackets Championships held at the United States Military Academy March 3-5.

Senior Dick Palmer and sophomore Mal Davidson represented the College in the Class A bracket featuring the top two players from each of the participating schools. Palmer, who was seeded sixth in the tournament, was upset in the second round of play by Bob Smart of Western Ontario (3-0) while Davidson, having lost his first round match to Bob Rodgers of MIT (2-7), came back in the consolation to defeat Bill Sexton of Bowdoin (3-0), Wade Judge of Dartmouth (3-0), and Charlie Berry of Yale (3-1), before losing to Navy’s number two player Jim Dunn (3-1).

Seniors John Huppe and Jay Davis were entered in the Class B bracket for numbers three and four. Davis was named to the All-Tournament Team.
