$475,000 is Goal for Anniversary Drive

An annual giving goal of $475,000 has been set for the anniversary year 1972-73, according to Judson M. Rees, Director of Development. The goal is similar to the $35,000 over the amount contributed in last year's successful drive. Contributions to the annual giving campaign will go towards balancing the College's operating budget, which is nearly $8.5 million for 1972-73.

President Lockwood, in a message announcing the campaign, observed that the College's 150th anniversary year is a milestone which "provides the opportunity for alumni, parents and friends to honor the College by contributing more generously than ever before so that Trinity may become an even more effective force for learning." He said he hopes that those who have not contributed in recent years will respond on this occasion.

Breakdowns of the various goals are: Alumni Fund, $275,000 ($248,944 contributed last year); Parents Fund $95,000 ($88,099 last year); Business and Industry Associates, $65,000 ($60,714); Friends Fund, $30,000 ($23,964 last year); and Foundations, $10,000 ($8,300 last year). A total of $440,421 was contributed last year.

Gifts of $5,000 or more will qualify the donor for membership in the Founders Society; a gift from $1,500 up to $5,000 qualifies for membership in the anniversary Club.

Members of the Alumni Fund Steering Committee are: Martin D. Wood '42, national chairman; James R. Glassco Jr. '50, vice chairman; Berton W. Harries '50, distinguished gifts chairman; Donald J. Viering '42, leadership gifts chairman; George H.M. Roumey Jr. '40, Arthur H. Tildesley '53 and Warren L. Linberg Jr. '63, special gifts chairman; S. Anders Yocom Jr. '63, promotion chairman; Samuel W. P. McGill '51, class agent chairman; Bernard F. Wilbur Jr. '50, participation and telethon chairman, and John Whalen M. S. '66, masters degree chairman.

Members of the Parents Fund Steering Committee are: Bruce N. Bendley, Morristown, N.J., national chairman; Rudolph M. Montgelas, Darien, Conn., vice chairman; C. Burrow, Ivy Jr., Rye, N.Y., special gifts chairman; Frank K. Griesinger, Gates Mills, Ohio, past parent chairman; Ralph Johnson, Philadelphia, Pa., Class of 1973 chairman; Pamela S. Crandall, Westerly, R.I., Class of 1974 chairman; John N. Fisher, Weston, Mass., Class of 1975 chairman, and Robert A. Lawrence, Westwood, Mass., Class of 1976 chairman.

John T. Wilcox '39 is chairman of the Business and Industry Associates; J. Ronald Regnier '30 is chairman of the Friends of Trinity Fund.

It is hoped that a successful completion of the campaign will be announced on May 16, the 150th anniversary date of the signing of Trinity's charter.

Chapel Marks 40th Year

The Chapel observed the 40th anniversary of the Consecration of the Trinity College Chapel on October 22, with a special Vespers service which included two musical selections by the Concert Choir. Members of both the Trinity and the Hartford communities filled the Chapel for the service. The choir, accompanied by organ and orchestra, sang "O Clap Your Hands," by Ralph Vaughan Williams, and Schubert's Mass in G. Philip Frohman, principal architect of the Chapel, on Oct. 30, as the result of an automobile accident last August (obituary, page 4).

Placement Office, 25 Years Old, Turns More and More to Counseling

The Trinity College Office of Career Counseling - the old "Placement Office" - observed its 25th anniversary on campus this year reflecting more and more its emphasis on counseling.

The office was established in March of 1947 as one of the first of its kind at a small college. Normal enrollment for Trinity at the time was 525 men, and the duties of the first director were "career counseling, including the undergraduates, and placement work for students and alumni." That first director was John F. Butler '33, who held the job for 23 years until his death in October of 1970. What made him perhaps unique among his contemporaries was his insistence that "I do not place; the students place themselves." While other institutions concentrated on providing an employment agency for their students ("the marketing of our product, men and women," was the way one Eastern college president put it), Butler was developing a counseling service which covered the student's entire undergraduate career.

Freshmen took aptitude tests and discussed their plans with Butler; sophomores and juniors met with him for informal talks about careers; seniors also discussed their plans with Butler, who arranged for interviews with potential employers or helped with plans for graduate school. As it does today, the office also served as a clearing house for part-time and summer jobs.

The philosophy which guided the Placement Office for so many years may have been well captured by the editors of the 1957 Ivy, who dedicated the yearbook to Butler with these words: "...he convinces us all very early that he places no one, that we place ourselves. He contributes, certainly more than he knows or would admit, to endowing our search for a vocation with richer meaning that he arms us, and he does not have a classroom in which to do so, with canons of judgment that spring from his own strong belief in true individualism and a deep personality."

While Butler would frequently intercede in behalf of a student, he never saw himself so much as an "agent for the employee" (as one placement officers group understood its role) as he saw himself a counselor. In the late 60s the name of the office changed to "Office of Career Planning," and finally, in 1970, to "Office of Career Counseling" - the same word which appeared in the job description back in 1947.

Butler's successor, Mrs. Paula I. Robbins, believes the emphasis on counseling over placement is justified by current trends in student attitudes, by the employment situation in general, and by the broad nature of a liberal arts education.

Trinity students, Mrs. Robbins has observed, tend to fall into one of three general categories: those who have specialized career goals and intend to go to graduate school or to professional school in law, medicine or some other (continued on page 3)

CAMPUS NOTES

Contrary to reports circulated by a major weekly news network, Trinity's undergraduates are not repeat, not scattered throughout the world on foreign study tours. A total of three and a half months at Windsor Castle on a biography of George III's consort, Queen Charlotte, completed this year's total of four courses at Trinity College.

ELLEN MIQUEEN, associate dean for student services, has been appointed to a Commission on the Status of Women for the Association of Women's Colleges in the United States, International, and a paper presented on a panel in May at a conference on women and the arts in Buenos Aires. Mrs. Miquelon, a native of Trinidad, is a recognized authority on the arts and culture of the Caribbean.

EDWARD W. SLOAN, associate professor of history, has written a paper on the Internal Revenue Service as a factor in tax policy. The paper was presented at a conference on tax policy and society, held at Bard College.

JOHN B. BLAU, associate dean for educational programs, has had a paper accepted for publication in the Journal of Educational Research. The paper examines the relationship between student achievement and classroom management strategies.

ROBBINS WINSLOW, dean of educational services, has been appointed by the Greater Hartford Consortium Board of Higher Education. He is also Trinity's nominee to the Regional Planning Group (Area B) for Higher Education, and is serving as secretary of the group. Winslow is also serving his first year on a panel of educators who have been selected to testify before the Connecticut Board of Education, to which he was elected last November.

KARL KURTH, professor of physics and director of athletics, is serving as chairman of the NCAA Committee on Athletics, is chairman of the Constitutional Committee, New England chairman of the national postseason tournament committee, and is a member of the ECAC, and secretary-treasurer of the New England Small College Athletic Conference.

MARY W. CARRUSO, director of the Center for International Studies, has had a paper accepted for publication in the Journal of International Affairs. The paper examines the role of the United Nations in world affairs.

FRANCINE D. BLAU, instructor in economics, has been appointed to the American Economic Association's Committee on the Status of Women in the Profession. She was also recently selected for inclusion in the Trinity Chapter of the American Association of University Professors, which recognizes women in economics, among other fields. Her work includes "The Political Economy of the Brazilian Education System" (with Richard Weiskopf) in Rosenbaum and Tyler, eds., Prospects for Education. }

'Career Counseling Is The Emphasis

field; those who have general but immediate goals and intend to go to work after graduation, usually in such fields as business, engineering, government, teaching, and those "who have no immediate career goals after college." The Office suggests that Ms. Robbins says constituted almost a third of the Class of 1972, appears to be part of a growing trend. Thus, "What seems to be happening," she says, "is that the career development of upper middle class students, especially those who are interested in the direction of personal employment only from the ages of 25-55, and we certainly do have the case among many of our students."

Compounding the problems of career development she says, is the fact that "students often receive a great deal of pressure from their parents and peers to make a career choice. Often students enroll in graduate school because this assuages such pressure without requiring any actual commitment. She suggests that "we may be better students in this situation to leave the academic world and try out a number of jobs" to test their degrees of satisfaction. "Some people simply take longer than others to find their own direction, and one obvious reason is that they may not have definite career goals by graduation," she says.

The job market also puts its pressures on graduates. "The placement function at a college like Trinity," Ms. Robbins says, "can be very effective except in a time of a boom job market, as was in existence five and ten years ago. We do not look forward to situations in a foreseeable future." Additionally, she says, "population trends show that there will be an overabundance of graduating college students for the next ten years," creating intense competition for the available jobs. Subsequently, recruiting by businesses and industry has declined.

The situation today is radically different from that of a year or two ago, she says, when a boom which made college students very much in demand, and helped the placement office flourish during its first 25 years. Added to student attitudes and the job market is the nature of a liberal arts education itself, she says. (reprinted in this issue of the Reporter.) Dr. Homer D. Babbidge of Yale remarks that "helping people prepare for jobs" is only one of more than a dozen different expectations which society has of the college or university. Mrs. Robbins notes that since the liberal arts curriculum "concentrates more on general knowledge and understanding than upon highly specific skill-training, the liberal arts graduate can approach the problem of career choice from a different and broader perspective than one who is highly trained for immediately useful employment.

She observes that while the liberal arts education may not initially be directly translatable into usefulness on the first job, it has significant long-run value," especially as it provides a personal, individualized and flexible education which equips a person with a variety of learning techniques.

For an individual with a broad liberal arts background, she says, "the process of career choice is an open-ended one. Few Trinity graduates seek the kind of career in which one starts out as an entry-level job, and some career, she says, "will probably have a central focus, depending upon interests and abilities, but the locale and manner in which it is pursued will undoubtedly change from time to time."

For these kinds of reasons, Ms. Robbins says, the Career Counseling Office "concentrates its efforts more upon long-range career counseling than upon services of an employment agency. In line with this, the office provides the following services:

- Assessment of interests and abilities. The office suggests ways to evaluate past accomplishments and aptitudes in terms of their applicability to possible career goals. Vocational interest testing is available free to students.

- Guidance on the preparation and submission of résumés and applications with the kinds of available jobs. The office maintains a library of career information, as well as information on various fields, information regarding various jobs. The office tries to help a student decide "among a number of fields which he might have varying chances of success."

- Assistance in finding jobs. The office has on its initial staffs a good amount of information on existing jobs in specific fields. The office also has requests of jobs available, particularly in the area of teaching and for businesses in Southern New England. "While we are often able to "place students in jobs," Mrs. Robbins says, "we cannot promise to do so."

- The office does offer advice on job-hunting and interviewing techniques, as well as assistance with resumes and locating contacts among alumni, faculty, and friends.

- Graduate and Professional School. The office maintains a library of graduate and professional school catalogs in a variety of fields, information regarding fellowships, and application forms for a variety of graduate examinations. The office also provides a credential service whereby students can keep on file the service may be used in applying to graduate schools or, if necessary, for employment. Regarding post-graduate study Mrs. Robbins says, the office endeavors "to be as helpful as possible to students before they apply to school, in assisting them to obtain all the necessary information before they apply and to help them to present themselves in as favorable a light as possible through letters of evaluation. However, we are not able to assume responsibility for 'getting a student into graduate school.'"

The services of the Career Counseling Office are also available to alumni. About 185 alumni consulted the office last year, both for job placement and for advice about post-graduate study. "Many alumni who were undecided at graduation are coming back to inquire about programs in business, law and even medicine," Mrs. Robbins says.

Career counseling itself has become a professional career. In its early years, placement officers were frequently men who held a bachelor's degree and came to a college with a wide background in business or industry. Frequently, as was the case at Trinity in 1955, the placement officer also wore the hat of assistant secretary. Mrs. Robbins, who was graduated from Waver College, holds an M.Ed. degree in counseling, and is currently working toward a doctorate.

Students, Alumni May Obtain Info On Fellowships

The Career Counseling Office has information on a variety of fellowships available to alumni, including the Danforth Foundation Fellowships for students pursuing a Ph.D. program and planning an eventual career in teaching. Trinity may nominate one recent graduate each year for this fellowship in addition to the two senior nominations. Alumni may also be interested in the White House Fellow Program under which applicants between the ages of 23 and 35 may be nominated for a year's service as an assistant to a member of the Cabinet or to a senior member of the White House Staff.

Alumni interested in either of these programs or other graduate fellowships may obtain information from Ms. Paula I. Robbins, Director of Career Counseling, Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. 06106.

MITCH PAPAS IN RETROSPECT—An exhibition of representative works of the late Mitchell N. Pappas, associate professor of English, is on view in the Art Center. The show featured more than 50 works and included oils, watercolors, drawings, etchings and collages. The range of mediums and styles employed by the artist prompted one reviewer to write: "The astonishing things about the exhibition...is the revelation of his versatility."
Philip H. Frohmohm, Architect Of College Chapel, Dead at 84

Philip H. Frohmohm, 84, architect of the Trinity College Chapel, died Monday, Oct. 30, in Washington, D.C.

Considered to be a genius of Gothic design, Mr. Frohmohm was the architect of the Washington Cathedral. He died of complications resulting from injuries received when he was struck by a car Aug. 7.

He had designed some 50 Gothic churches in the United States, including the Episcopal cathedral in Baltimore, the Roman Catholic cathedral in Baltimore, the Roman Catholic cathedral in Los Angeles, and several in Washington, including St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Annunciation Roman Catholic Church, Wesley Methodist Church and St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

However, he considered the Trinity College Chapel to be his best work.

He was also an inventor of electronic organs, and held patents on several such instruments.

Mr. Frohmohm was descended from a French Catholic family of architects, civil engineers, and inventors. One of his forebears was Director of Works under King Louis-Philippe; another built the first Liverpool-to-Manchester Railway, and another designed New York's famed Chelsea Hotel.

A Roman Catholic, Mr. Frohmohm spent more than 50 years of his life planning the Washington Cathedral. The work was a lifelong dream, for although he was appointed its architect in 1921, he had been interested in the Cathedral since 1909.

He was a perfectionist in his work, and believed that Gothic architecture is "art not architecture. Gothic is the only modern style that is logical and functional."

In a statement after Mr. Frohmohm's death, the Very Rev. Francis B. Sayre Jr., dean of the cathedral, said that "since the Middle Ages, there has not been an architect of Gothic to compare with him, nor is there likely ever to be another."

KRIEBLE SCHOLARSHIP—James A. Larrabee '75, recipient of this year's Kriebelo Scholarship from the Loctite Corporation, has expressed gratitude to Mrs. Laura Krieble, widow of former department chairman Vernon K. Krieble, and to Dr. Robert Krieble, president of Loctite and Dr. Krieble's son.

Scholarships have been awarded at Trinity since 1961, and are in memory of Dr. Vernon Krieble, who taught at Trinity for 35 years and who invented Loctite, a chemical sealant, in Trinity's laboratories.

He is survived by his wife, Zoe Ann Naylor of Phoenix, Arizona; and four sons: John H. Naylor, Jr., Randolph Lawrence, Christopher, and Bruce.
TRINITY SPORTS

Football Season Ends 4-4; Duckett Stars as Receiver

Trinity's varsity football team dropped its last two decisions of the year to Amherst (34-7) and Wesleyan (33-28) to finish the 1972 campaign with a 4-4 record. In the season's final encounter, played in Middletown, the Bants found themselves trailing Wesleyan 27-7 with a little more than 13 minutes left in the game. The remainder of the contest typified the erratic play that was seen throughout the 1972 campaign.

Quarterback Sean Wiezenthal teamed up with split end Ron Duckett for two touchdowns within a three minute period and Ed Raw's placements closed the gap to 27-21 with 10 minutes left on the scoreboard. Trin gained possession of the football once again after a Wesleyan punt but Wiezenthal was intercepted for a third time that afternoon on the Trinity 26 yard line and the Cardinals pushed its lead to 33-21 with 33-21 with 4:40 left in the game. Trin took the next kickoff and quickly moved to the Wesleyan 35 yard line before Wiezenthal was intercepted a fourth time. The Bants made one last drive in the closing minute of the game and marched 80 yards in seven plays with Wiezenthal hitting Paul Gossling with his fourth touchdown pass of the day from seven yards out. Ed Raw's fourth consecutive placement of the day brought the score to 33-28. An onside kickoff failed and Wesleyan left the field with its first win over Trinity since 1969 and its first on Andrus Field since 1964.

The Wiezenthal-Duckett pass combination had its best game of the year in spite of the loss with Wiezenthal completing 16 of 23 passes for 317 yards and four touchdowns and Duckett catching 10 of those passes for 180 yards and two scores. On the debit side, Wiezenthal was intercepted as many times as the Cardinals scored in the game. The remainder of the contest typified the erratic play that was seen throughout the 1972 campaign.

Ron DUCKETT goes high in the air for one of his seven receptions against Amherst this fall. The fleet-footed junior finished the season with 46 catches for 723 yards and seven touchdowns.

Varsity Soccer Falters; Freshmen Win 6 Games

After two initial victories over MIT (3-1) and Tufts (5-3), Trin's varsity soccer team was able to maintain one score advantage tie with Coast Guard for the rest of the ten game season.

The Bants first loss came against cross-town rival, University of Hartford. The Bants rallied from a 3-1 deficit as upfield Pete Mindich scored all three of the team's goals before losing on two penalty kicks to the Hawks who finished undefeated in the regular season.

Trin was unable to produce a victory against any of the Little Three teams this fall, losing to Williams (44-0), Amherst (20-0) and Wesleyan (8-2). High scorers for Trinity were Pete Heimann (5), Roger McCord (4) and Pete Mindich. All seven members, along with four other starters, will be back next fall. Trinity will lose co-captains John Saroviaik and Don Burt, halfback Scott Fitzgerald and fullback Dave Schemper.

FRESHMAN SOCCER

Help may be on the way for the varsity soccer team as Rob Shults' freshman team won six of eight games this fall.

The freshman defense held several foes off against Williams and MIT before losing to Springfield. The Team's other loss came against a junior varsity squad from Wesleyan. Other Bantam wins were registered against Central Connecticut State V.C., Coast Guard, Manchester Community College and Amherst. High scorers for this year's team were Chad James (seven goals-4 assists) and Bob Fernald (6-1).

Cross-Country Wins A Meet

The cross-country team broke into the win column for the first time since 1958 on their sixth try of the season with a 15-48 victory over Quinnipiac College. Senior captain Bob Haff led the way, finishing first in the dual meet, and was followed by Trin freshman Jim Forbes and senior Rick Ricci. The team had one other close encounter this fall, losing to Wesleyan 24-32. Bob Haff was the leading Bantam in the match taking second place while Ricci was the next Trinity runner in sixth place.

The Bants lost three straight races to complete this year's schedule.

The freshmen were led this year by tri-captains George Niland, George Rose and John Wiggins who alternated at quarterback. Rose finished the season with 20 completions in 40 attempts for 338 yards and four touchdowns although he was quarterback for only two games, Wiggins completed 14 of 28 passes for 186 yards for the same number of starts.

The Bants leading ground gainer was Bill Mellis, an Elkhart, Indiana native, who rushed for 379 yards while East Windsor, Conn.'s John Howley rushed for 305 yards and was on the receiving end of 14 passes for an additional 184 yards.

Trinity's freshman football team recorded its second consecutive undefeated season this Fall by coming from behind to tie Amherst 14-14. The Bants combined an explosive offense with a tenacious defense in dominating its other three opponents. Trin's other victories came against Springfield (56-0), Coast Guard (34-0), and Worcester Tech J.V.'s (24-19). Wesleyan was forced to cancel when their fresh squad was TRINITY'S WOMEN'S CREW defeated Yale, Connecticut College, and the University of Massachusetts in its first year of outside competition. The above picture was taken on the Connecticut River as the crew rows out to meet UMass in its final race of the season. Wesleyan won by two lengths. In other sports during the season, Trinity women continued to show their athletic prowess, recording 8-2 season in field hockey and a 3-1 mark in fall tennis.
