Annual Report Examines The Future

In an unusual and revealing Annual Report this year, President Lockwood outlines with charts and statistics the kinds of academic and financial pressures facing Trinity and other independent colleges today. Issued as a background paper to help Trinity in its future planning, the 1973 Annual Report reviews the kinds of trends which have influenced Trinity and other schools, and makes projections based on "reasonable expectations for the balance of this decade."

Commenting on the report, Dr. Lockwood said "It is time now, while Trinity is on a firm financial ground, to talk about where we wish the College to be academically in 10 years. Such a discussion involves an understanding of what's happening in admissions, financial aid, faculty salaries and library space, items which could affect our commitment to attract a truly diverse student body. From this discussion we can begin to sort out our priorities."

Trinity, he predicts, will need to increase its endowment substantially over the next 10 years if it is to continue to compete with the best liberal arts institutions. Among his projections are that the College may need:

- New endowment funds for scholarships. Scholarship "endowment currently totals $3.2 million, income from which is supplemented by money taken from annual operating funds. Market value of Trinity's total endowment funds is approximately $31 million.
- Endowment to provide at least one endowed professorship in each department, helping the College bring faculty compensation "to a truly competitive level." Endowed professorships and other instructional endowment now totals about $4 million.
- More endowed funds to cover projected increases in Library expenses. Current Library endowments total about $95,000.
- Funds for physical improvements to the Library.

Dr. Lockwood estimates that these needs could total as much as $40 million, but says $10 million of this can be realized through continued careful management of the College, through better use of the College's stockholdings, and from anticipated bequests. The remainder would be "new money" which might be needed over the next 10 years. "These are our expectations," Dr. Lockwood explained, "but like any long-range plans, they may have to be revised as conditions change. One important variable is the government's (continued on page 3)

Annual Giving:

Trinity Seeks $505,000 in Fund Drive

In his "Core of Conviction" address last May, President Lockwood proposed that Trinity "become the pace-setter among the smaller liberal arts colleges in America in providing education in which the question of values is central."

That proposal is the theme of the 1973-74 Annual Giving Campaign, which for the first time in Trinity's history, has a goal of more than a half million dollars. The announced goal of $505,000 for this year's drive is $80,000 more than the 1972-73 goal. However, it is only slightly more than what had been contributed as of June 30, 1973 in gifts and pledges — $503,185. The 1972-74 campaign will run from October through June 30, 1974.

Commenting on the "pace-setter" theme, President Lockwood observed that there is today a "desperate need for well educated men and women inspired by a moral sensitivity to use their knowledge with intelligence, integrity and compassion."

"The level of support in last year's campaign," he said, "was a remarkable achievement. We are confident that alumni, parents and others will continue their support so that we can reach our objective of the pace-setter in value-oriented learning."

Trinity's operational budget in its 151st anniversary year is $9,057,300. The total paid by students and their families is $6,783,000.

Income from endowment provides approximately $1,450,000. The balance of $819,300 must come from other sources, including the Annual Giving Campaign.

"Achieving the goal," President Lockwood emphasized, "is vital to the financial stability of the College. The amount has been budgeted as anticipated income." (continued on page 3)

Panelists Share Views of Trinity

"Virtually none of Trinity's freshman class expect to be in the bottom two-fifths of their graduating class."

This kind of optimism, revealed in a survey of freshmen made by Trinity's department of sociology, was among the information told to some 400 parents and guests during a Parents Weekend panel discussion October 27.

Whether or not the students can meet that goal — a statistical impossibility — remains to be seen, but according to Dr. Norren Dulz, assistant professor of sociology, Trinity's freshmen do come to the College with high expectations of success.

According to Dr. Frank M. the current questions, she said, are whether the College should maintain a quota of 1,000 men; how the number and role of women faculty can be improved, and the questions—"many of them unanswered by some faculty, administrators and parents"—about the expectations of women students regarding their roles and professional development.

Peter Bausch ’74 argued that most learning "occurs outside the classroom," and said that a student "goes to college to grow." In the hours outside the classroom, he said, students come to terms with themselves, re-evaluate the parent-child relations, understand themselves sexually and emotionally, and learn to relate themselves to the world at large. If learning also occurs in the classroom, he quipped, "it's a valuable by-product."

This view was disputed by Robin Landy ’75, who transferred to Trinity. She said that there is a necessity for students to understand why it is they want to take particular courses, whether it's to satisfy a requirement, to "check off something you wanted to learn in your lifetime," even if it's of no immediate use, or to follow a particular professor who can, for example, "make public administration have a spirit of excitement."

She said she feels the smallness of Trinity is worth the price of the tuition, and said she finds Trinity's teachers have a "profound desire to instruct." The classroom, she argued, "is still a viable springboard for the greater world of education.

Dr. John A. Gettier, associate professor of religion and chairman of the department, observed that in the College’s 150 years, the changes which have taken place in the past five have been the most significant. He pointed to the new departments which have been added to the faculty, the Rome Campus, and the "flexibility" of the new curriculum. Three important aspects of the new curriculum, he said, were the elimination of all requirements except those in the major, the institution of Freshman Seminars "which introduce students to the academic life of this College," and the chance for independent study. Two important thrusts of the curriculum, he said, were that students assume more responsibility for determining their education, and the faculty's commitment "to provide time and advice to help in the exercise of that responsibility."

Water Polo
In Tourney

October 26 and 27 the Trinity College Water Polo Team competed in a round robin tournament at Brown University. Trinity with a (4-3) season was chosen along with Southern Connecticut State College to represent the New England Conference Division II against Boston College and Bowdoin of the Northern Conference. Trinity lost in each of its three matches by only one goal; B.C. 5-6, S. Conn. 5-4, and Bowdoin 5-4 in double overtime. The Bantams finished fourth in Division II, seventh overall in New England among schools from Division I and II and with five men on the tournament all-star team.

Bill Brown ’76 and Dave Teichman ’77 both made the all-star team with Greg Shenk ’76, Ted Stelle ’74 and Jim Bradt ’77 all honorable mention. No other team in either division had as many men honored.

PROFILES OF CLASS OF ’77

Findings of the sociology department indicate that about 60 percent of Trinity’s freshman class expect to be in graduate school five years from now. The remaining 40 percent expect to be working, according to Dr. Noreen Dulz, assistant professor of sociology, who gave the survey results as part of a presentation at a Parents Weekend panel discussion Oct. 27.

Concerning campus activities, the survey showed 57% interested in athletics; 16% in student government; 36% in publications; 10% in religious organizations; 54% in social activities; 18% in student political organizations, and 59% in special interest clubs.

The survey was answered by 65% of the class of ’77.

"The majority of the students (58%), choosing with perfect freedom, would choose Trinity as their first choice of schools," she said. Some 29% would choose another college.

Concerning expected majors, 13% favored biology; 12% history; 10% political science, and 8% psychology. But, she said, "most agree this is at least somewhat tentative."

For 30% the most important criterion of a job is the chance to work with people rather than with things. Next in importance is the chance to be creative and original (25%). She observed that these two criteria were of greater importance three years ago, but in reverse order.

She said 12% expected to go into teaching; 19% into research and 8% into administration. Some 43%, she said, hoped to be in a job where they served patients or clients.

Most also felt, she said, that two or three children is the ideal number to have, and the number they expect to have in later life.

stance on aid to education. Others are student expectations, public interest in higher education, and the general economy. Dramatic trends in these areas would naturally bring about changes in our planning. The ideas contained in this Report are based on what we can observe at the moment.

National trends, he says, indicate that independent colleges are "unlikely to experience enrollment growth of any significance in the near future," and that "the demand for higher education, in which we have become accustomed, may not persist." These trends and Trinity's recent experience, he says, indicate the College "faces an increasing challenge in attracting and enrolling qualified applicants."

Competition from public colleges and universities, "and from those schools with which Trinity traditionally vies for the exceptional student" will continue to grow, Dr. Lockwood says. Moreover, "fiscal constraints may limit financial aid," thereby discouraging many scholarship candidates from applying and many not-accepted applicants from enrolling.

Financial aid is also important because it makes American commitments to open our colleges and universities to all qualified candidates regardless of their ability to pay.

This commitment, Dr. Lockwood reports, "has put an unavoidable strain on Trinity's finances, an experience "illustrative of prevailing trends nationally among private institutions."

During the last three years, he says, the College had to reduce the amount of money taken from current operating funds for scholarships. In 1968-69, some 31 per cent of the student body received financial aid, in 1972-73, the College could provide aid for only 22 per cent of the student body.

"Since tuition costs have risen while the total amount of financial aid has remained constant, we are helping fewer students than in the sixties," Dr. Lockwood says. "Furthermore, we have had greater difficulty attracting competent students from our own Connecticut income levels. And we have similar difficulties in maintaining our commitment to the poor."

Unless this situation can be reversed, Dr. Lockwood says, "we shall reduce the diversity of our student body and put us in a situation between affluent and the needy. In the process the student body will come from the middle income body with a much financial need is being squeezed out."

To offset these trends, and assuming no federal action is taken on scholarship aid, Dr. Lockwood estimates the College will need $6 million to endow the presently unfunded portion of Trinity's financial aid budget; another $7 million "to regain the percentage we once helped and to assure Trinity a depth of highly competent students from outside the high-income levels."

Regarding the Library, Dr. Lockwood observes that "costs for books and periodicals have increased twice as fast as inflation would forecast. If we are to maintain the quality of our holdings, we must raise approximately $3,000,000 in endowed funds to cover projected increases in Library expenditures." There is also, he notes, a need for additional seating capacity," requiring perhaps $5 million more for physical improvements.

On another front, Dr. Lockwood observes, "maintenance costs have risen at a rate greater than the national budgetary item. We shall not succeed in completing repairs and further renovations unless future contributions exceed and move beyond those provided from the annual operating budget, that is, that the College needs $3,000,000 in endowed production to an income sufficient for us to care for the facilities in a way alumni and Friends would regard as necessary."

In the annual budget, Dr. Lockwood notes, Trinity now "depends heavily upon tuition income." This means, he says, that without new endowed money and wider support by alumni to the Annual Giving Campaign, "colleges like Trinity might otherwise price themselves out of the market."

Colleges were caught short, he says, "when the financial growth which characterized the sixties ceased and left us with commitments that traditional financing could not cover. Trinity first experienced the consequences in 1969 and 1970 when, in common with other colleges, we ran deficits. Fortunately, we were able to reverse that situation and move quickly to a stable financial condition through (1) careful management of our expenditures, (2) gifts from alumni, parents, friends, foundations and corporations, (3) expansion of our student body and (4) increases in tuition. Nevertheless, we were so effective that we were able to pay back the expended endowment, a virtually unique accomplishment."

Now he says, expenses have been cut to the point where "there is no 'fat' which can be cut away," and adds that many costs -- like fuel prices -- are externally controlled.

Thus, he says, analysis leads to three conclusions.

First, that "Trinity will not, . . . retain a talented, diverse student body by allowing tuition to bear too heavy a share of rising costs."

Second, that "good planning requires Trinity to hold down the rate of growth in expenditures to a reasonable annual increase--approximately 4 per cent."

Third, "that Trinity's ability to substantial more than sustain our present position and programs requires substantial new money."

The challenge, he says, "is to ensure through effective planning that our revenues match those expenditures which are necessary to fulfill our mission."

Commenting on the Report, President Lockwood noted that "institutions are generally reluctant to talk about adverse trends, such as those that have affected Trinity and other Colleges recently. While other colleges -- including some that might be considered similar to Trinity -- have found these forces out of control, Trinity has included them in her perspective, and the College can confidently say that all of us are planning for the next decade."

Dr. Lockwood says the report is a "first step" for the College and "the results... are no less grim. Some universities have made public material like that contained in this year's Annual Report. But it is different, he believes, by any other small, independent college.

PLAQUE IN LIBRARY--President Lockwood stands with members of the family of the late Lloyd E. With the president are Mrs. Lloyd Smith, and the Smith's two sons, Leighton L. Smith '69 (left) and Elton L. Smith '50. Mr. Smith died in 1971. He was a charter member of the Trinity College Library Associates, and gave more than 4,000 books to the Library, including some special collections housed in the Watkinson Library. His hobby was salvaging and restoring used books. The plaque is located on the first floor lobby, near the main desk.

UPWARD BOUND -- Vice President Thomas A. Smith (left), Assistant Professor of English James Miller, and Ivan Backer, director of the Office of Community Affairs, congratulate Angel Fuentes (right) a Hartford Public High School junior who received the top Student's Award in the Twin Valley Upward Bound Program sponsored by Trinity and two community colleges. Fuentes was one of 54 high school students from Hartford and Waterbury who received matriculation certificates and prizes during a banquet October 5. Miller and Backer both serve on the board of directors of the program, which continues through the school year from an office and classroom in Severn. Commitment of the Upward Bound program is to help students with low achievement, but high potential, to enter college. Fuentes, who came to Hartford from Puerto Rico last year and spoke no English, is now taking college-oriented classes in English, and hopes to become a doctor or a lawyer.

The Varsity Football team (as of this writing) has a season record of three wins and three losses. In the opening game, Williams defeated the Bantams 15-10. The next three week-ends Trinity beat in turn Bates 22-15, RPI 30-6, and Colby 13-6. On Parents Weekend, Rochester took the Bantams 24-7, and the following Saturday, Coast Guard nipped Tri-Captain 11-0.

September 29 against Williams, Trinity was unable to make good on several field goal attempts in the first quarter. Trinity dominated the first half but was unable to score with the exception of one field goal, a 41-yarder by Mike Maus. Williams capitalized in the second quarter on a safety, catching Maus in the end zone punting and then scored on a 10-yard run by MacMillan. The Ephs played the second half conservatively and held off a furious Bantam drive in the final six minutes of the game. Both teams scored again in the fourth quarter but Trinity’s last drive was blunted and time ran out.

The Bantams traveled to Lewiston, Maine to play Bates October 6th. In a tight game tied 7-7 at the half and 15-7 at the third quarter Trinity took advantage of three interceptions in the fourth quarter to drive 80 yards for the winning score.

Tri-captain, split end, Ronald Duckett made seven catches for 150 yards vs. the Bobcats and a 64 yard kickoff return. Chris Max, at safety, had two interceptions, both inside his own 20, to stop Bates’ only scoring threats in the fourth quarter. Max set up an 80-yard drive including a 49-yard pass, Harold Gray to Duckett, leading to a touchdown by running back John Wholley closing the game 22-15.

RPI visited Jesse Field on October 13 and added another loss to their streak of 10 in a row. The Bantams came from behind 6-3 at the half in a second half surge to win 30-6. Trinity scored 20 points in the fourth quarter. The Bantams had 20 first downs to RPI’s 10 and 317 yards to 169. Sophomore quarterback George Rose in the second half threw two touchdowns passes to Tom Melkus for 14 yards and Ron Duckett for 14 yards and set up a Wholley one-yard run for a third touchdown.

John Wiggin captured aNous inside kick for Trinity and the Bantams scored again to insure the win 30-6.

Against Colby October 20, Rose completed 13 of 18 passes for 244 yards including an 80-yard touchdown pass to Duckett to beat the White Mules 14-6. Rose also scrambled with Tom Melkus for a 62-yard pass. This set the first quarter touchdown by Wholley from the one. All the scoring was in the first half as Trinity again had fine running offense was held to only 118 yards.

Before a Parents Day crowd the Bantams fell to the Yellowjackets of Rochester 24-7. Trinity’s only successful drive led by junior quarterback Harold Gray marched 85 yards, in 11 plays, six of them passes. The Bantams recorded 69 yards to end in a 7-yard touchdown pass. Duckett finished the day with 13 catches for 118 yards to tie the record of 13 in one game he set in 1971 against Rochester.

Trinity played all three of its quarterbacks: Rose, Gray, and senior Saul Wiesenthal but gave up a total of four interceptions. Three passes were flipped by Ralph Gebhardt for Rochester. Rochester led 14-7 at half. After a second half defensive avalanche that tallied an insurance touchdown and field goal in the fourth to win 24-7.

The Coast Guard Academy used a two-year-old game plan as the Cadets snatched a victory on a field goal with 22 seconds on the clock. Cadet Memorial Field saw two teams compete to a standstill 7-7 tie until Steve Ciccalone kicked a 34-yard field goal. Eighteen seconds later, on the last play of the game, Mike Maus of Trin attempted a 41-yard field goal in the wind, trying to tie it up. The wind and a slight deflection gave the win to Coast Guard.

Trinity’s performance was excellent against the Cadets. Rose completed 19 of 29 for 199 yards and a touchdown. Duckett ran for a third touchdown. Trinity’s passing game was held to 118 yards. The Bantams total offense was 286 yards to the Cadets 215.

Both teams fought a tenacious defensive battle. The Bantams defense stopped the Cadets inside their 10-yard line twice, on the eighty-yard line and once for 24 yards. Trinity’s goal line defense forced two interceptions, 2 by Trinity and 1 by Colby cut off any threatening drives in the third and fourth quarters.

Before a Parents Day crowd the Bantams fell to the Yellowjackets of Rochester 24-7. Trinity’s only successful drive led by junior quarterback Harold

Frosh Football at 4-0; Won Last 18 Games

The Trinity Freshman Football team is undefeated (as of this writing) with a season record of 4-0. The Baby Bantams have been victorious in their last eighteen outings. They have defeated WPI, 25-7, Springfield College, 18-14, Coast Guard Academy, 46-14, and Wesleyan, 28-6.

Again WPI October 8, Robert O’Leary (6-4, 175), a defensive back, took an interception 87 yards for the game-winning score. After this Roger LaCharme (6’-4, 165) at tackle scored two touchdowns. Fullback Patrick Heffernan (6-3, 218) rushed for 161 yards on 31 carries. Overall the Baby Bants had 376 yards rushing and 24 in the air.

October 19 against Springfield, Heffernan had 119 yards on 32 carries. Primarily a defensive battle, with co-captain linebacker Mike Levenson (6-0, 185) and end Jon Thompson (6-0, 210) as standouts, Springfield’s running game was limited to negative yards, while the secondary picked off three interceptions.

Both Donald Daugnac (5’-10, 185) and Dan Valdossi (5-11, 170) grabbed Springfield passes.

Twice the Bants caught the Springfield quarterback in his own end zone for safeties; once by Charles Rees (5-11, 195), middle guard and again by David Jancarski (5-10, 175), defensive end.

On Parents Weekend against the Cadets of Coast Guard Trinity had a balanced attack, with 148 yards on the ground and 140 yards passing.

Heffernan picked up another 104 yards on 27 carries. O’Leary had 2 passes for 93 yards, one a 45-yard TD pass from Charlie Cowing (6-3, 220). John Brucato (5-10, 195), a linebacker, recovered a Cadet fumble in the end zone to score the final touchdown for Trinity.

Tri-captain, split end, Ronald Duckett set up another TD on a quarterback sneak by Cowing.

The Women’s Tennis Team finished its 1973 season with six wins and four losses. For the first time all the women’s tennis was scheduled in the fall rather than a split fall-spring dual season. The Lady Bants therefore had a concentrated season of ten matches in one month.

Trinity lost its first three matches to Yale 5-4, Williams 6-3, and Brown 5-4, all very closely fought. The Bantams then rallied to win their next four against Smith 6-3, Bridgeport 5-0, Mont. Holyoke 6-3, and Conn. College 5-4. They then came back to win their last two, defeating U. Conn. 5-4 and Wesleyan 6-3.

Ladies Captain, Gail Andrews ’77, was pleased with next season’s prospects. Trinity’s last two opponents are Amherst and Wesleyan.
