Student Services And Community Life Merge Under Spencer

By Melissa Everett

J. Ronald Spencer, dean of students, said the old Student Services and Community Life offices have merged under his leadership. Spencer explained that the departmental reorganization was occasioned by the departure last May of Del A. Shilkret, former Dean for Student Services. He continued that this arrangement, involving fewer employees, also has "budgetary advantages.

The department includes Mohammad Jibrell, assistant dean of Students; David Lee, associate dean for Student Services; Ralph D. Arcari, associate dean for Student Services, in the directorship of Mather Campus Center and the Resident Assistant program. She described her job as "the personal relationships with the students. Th"is year, Mulqueen served as associate dean of Student Services, in charge of Matzer Campus Center and the Resident Assistant program. She described her new role as "more administrative," but expressed hope that she would not lose touch with the students.

Development

Alfred C. Burfeind is serving as editorial consultant to the Development office, according to associate director of Development Constance E. Ware. Burfeind is in charge of director of the News Bureau. Ware explained that the Development Office is "in the preliminary stages of a capital campaign." She said that the office is studying a Presidential report "assessing our strengths and weaknesses." Burfeind, she continued, is "writing, researching, and preparing proposals for individual campaigns."

Library

Ralph D. Arvai has been promoted to the position of Assistant Librarian. Arvai, formerly Chief of Readers' Services, has an adjunct faculty position at Southern Connecticut State College. He holds a Master's Degree in Library Science from Cornell University and a Master's in Political Science from Trinity.

Excerpts From Lockwood's Address

"We should be more confident about our intellectual concerns, express them more openly, and cultivate a love of learning."

"We could easily drift and just be content that we are one of the better institutions, and relax."

Garafolo Urges Tighter Security

By Merrill O'Brien

In a letter to the student body, A. A. Garafolo, director of campus security, has requested that students "think security." Hartford's crime rate increased 42% last year and Trinity suffered losses. Of the 37 reported thefts, compared with the 17 of the previous year, it were perpetrated through unlocked doors and windows. To fight theft and facilitate the returning of stolen items, campus security recommends identifying expensive personal possessions by engraving serial numbers on them. This technique would permit the identification of stolen articles. Other dormitory improvements include paint jobs, new lounge furniture, repair of damages, and electrical improvements, added Garafolo. The renovation of the third floor of 70 Vernon Street for office use, and the addition of a ladies' room to Hallden Engineering Laboratory were other indoor improvements.

"It's been a wild summer", remarked Riel Crandall, director of buildings and Grounds (B&G), referring to improvements made on campus over the summer. According to Crandall, the major difficulty was obtaining the necessary materials. Some items ordered in June still haven't arrived, he added. Because of the deadline, B&G was limited to a choice of colors and items which could be available for use by September, explained Crandall.

Despite difficulties, there are a few noticeable improvements this year. Five full-size washers and a laundry have been added to the third floor of Jarvis, and new carpeting has been put down in the halls. The hallways in North Campus, 316 New Britain, and the lounges in Jones and Jackson also sport new carpeting. The money that was able to be used has new life on the serving line and will also have new clothes in the near future.

Combination locks were installed throughout South Campus as an additional security measure. According to Crandall, janitors will no longer carry keys to open student rooms. This would also prevent the suspicion of janitors in cases of theft.

Other dormitory improvements include paint jobs, new lounge furniture, repair of damages, and electrical improvements, added Crandall. The renovation of the third floor of 70 Vernon Street for office use, and the addition of a ladies' room to Hallden and college courses offered, taught by professors from Trinity, Wesleyan, Columbia, and Princeton faculties, as well as high school teachers from the Hartford area.

According to Blanks, the program is funded from the state office of Education, and the federal department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Of the budget of $152,000 annually for the operation of the program, $112,000 comes from the Office of Education, and HEW; the rest is funded by individual contributors to the program. Blanks said that even though the goal of the program is basically academic, he feels it is necessary to offer a type of "therapy" which can enhance the students' development, academically and socially.

Blanks described the ultimate goal of Upward Bound as a "spillover" effect. He said, "the whole reason why we send kids to college is so that they can go back to their own community and use their talent toward the betterment of their own community and society." If we have deprived communities, the method of transferring these communities into viable and independent communities includes developing leadership and reevaluate of talent from that community's immediate ranks."
Voter Registration Drive Succeeds

The vast majority of newly registered student voters are freshmen, most of whom only recently turned 18. Approximately 80% of those registering to vote were doing so for the first time, while the other 20% were switching their registration from elsewhere to Hartford. The new voters will vote in Connecticut’s Second Assembly District, First Senatorial District, and First Congressional District. They are also members of the Eight Voting District in the City of Hartford.

Jim Gomes, Co-ordinator of Young Democrats, was pleased with the results. "This brings to about 350 the number of registered Democrats in Hartford, which is the only way to get full utilization of the franchise. Obviously, it would have been nicer if more had registered Democratic, but I’m still content with the results."
"Intellectual And Moral Responsibility"

For years President Lockwood has been telling audiences at the fall convocation that a liberal arts education involves more than preprofessional training. He has said that Trinity is committed to providing students with a sense of intellectual and moral responsibility along with the hard facts.

Unfortunately, this dimension of a liberal arts education has been subverted to some extent in recent years by the growing competition to gain entrance to graduate schools, particularly in law and medicine. This competition has compelled students to cheat or refuse help to others before exams, as revealed in the Tripod article last year and investigations by the Amherst Student. This is not the stance toward learning and life in general that the founders of Trinity and other liberal arts colleges wished to encourage.

The potential danger of this kind of stance was illustrated by the events which took place in Washington almost a year ago. Ex-President Nixon put the country in constitutional crisis by abusing the powers of his office. Fortunately, the country was strong enough to absorb this crisis, but at a different time this could have been disastrous.

It's another year and we're back at school. Yes, it was a short summer, even being on the choir tour in England and working in camp. I enjoyed myself and got back in shape to begin the grind.

I didn't seem normal.

It's another year and we're back at school. Yes, it was a short summer, even being on the choir tour in England and working in camp. I enjoyed myself and got back in shape to begin the grind.

Since the heat wasn't turned on in Javits, I didn't have one of my clues to see it. Everything was normal. I looked around the campus and saw the marvelous repairs that B&G has accomplished since the end of school in May. It was great seeing the widened paths, growing green grass (no, the grass should be subverted to some extent in recent years by the growing competition to gain entrance to graduate schools, particularly in law and medicine. Vote

Whichever way you're inclined, we hope you'll involve yourself in the election. No more than 200 voters are expected to take part in the election. Including locally registered faculty, administration, and staff, Trinity's registered Democrats number over 200, probably enough to determine the outcome either way with a full turnout.

As you can see from today's mailing, Nick Motts has helped Trinity out. He's now appealing to Trinity College for some help.

A Letter From The Library

For the past several years, the Library has been faced with the problem of inadequate space both for seating and shelf space for books. In our continuing attempt to provide this service, some additional storage will be available, a storage area for lesser used material was established this summer in the Life Sciences Building. Over the summer, some 50,000 volumes were moved to this area.

These books are designated in the card catalog by a penciled “B” above the call number, or with a “Per” in materials in storage. Requests may still be periodicals, the more current volumes are still in the library proper. These “split sets” are also noted on the catalog cards.

Whenever one or more of the volumes in storage is needed, please apply at the Circulation Desk. Books will be retrieved daily and will be supplied to the requester on a twenty-four hour basis. We ask your patience whenever a book you need is in storage.

To fully utilize the space made available by this move, the entire book collection of the library was shifted over the summer. In general, all subject collections remain in the same general area, with one major exception: General Works, Philosophy, and Religion (LC classification numbers A and B, and Dewey numbers 006 and 008) have been moved to the B Floor. The Social Sciences, History, and Language and literature, remain on the A Floor, Music, Art, and Bibliography are on the Main Floor, and Sciences on the Second Floor.

All oversize books (stamped items or books too large to allow the call number) have been placed at the end of each classification schedule.

Since no new volumes are being added to the Dewey classification sections, these have been condensed as much as possible to provide ample growth in those areas where the books in the Library of Congress classification are shelved. It is hoped that this major shift will suffice for a period of at least five years and will eliminate the need for the annual shift of books which is expensive and also causes undue wear on the books.

We again ask your indulgence and patience with this project, which, with any luck, will be completed by the end of the summer.

Jesters Off and Running

By Wenda Harris

"Joan of Arc" died in the dark and Gertrude Stein can't write a line. "There's always time to learn a new thing, even if that thing can be as simple as an aphrodisiac. "Vell, don't keep us in the dark. That is?" It is Trinity Theatre presenting "Chamber Music" and "Gallow's Humor"—full steam ahead. On Friday and Saturday evenings September 6 & 7, the Goodwin Theatre of the Austin Arts Center was the scene for two delightful one-acts presented by the Jesters and Theatre Arts. An appreciative audience, consisting mainly of freshmen (due to the free admission), witnessed some absurd, some sad, some silly, some unintelligible, but nonetheless some exciting theatre.

Arthur Kopit's "Chamber Music" aptly directed by Mitch Karlan '74 was first on the agenda. Although the cast of girls in all shapes and sizes provided many laughs, the one-act actually plays it self without a tremendous amount of effort on the part of the cast members. Much of the effect seemed to come from without rather than from within. Each character, from Mrs. Mozart to Gertrude Stein, from Amelia Earhart to Joan of Arc, is so absurd and exaggerated that even mere appearance set the audience to laughing.

Perhaps some of the funniest moments in the play came when Mrs. Johnson (Judy Del Giudice) proposed a "plan of sufficient provocation": fasting for three days and then devouring the inhabitants of the men's bathroom. Of course, all the girls are unsympathetic listeners. It is during some of Walter's monologues that we note some difficult transitions in Lucy's character which are successfully carried through by Ms. Falk. Pratzon's character also grows visibly as he courageously learns not to emit any odors when he is in the presence of Grace and other women. Ms. Ewing's performance—a very funny performance with a beautifully consistent German accent—was outstanding.

Indeed the entire cast should be lauded for their performances. Ann Egidt played a silly Amelia Earhart, Wendy Wheeler, a persistent Joan of Arc, and Beth Page, a firm Susan B. Anthony. A very funny performance was given by Gwen Parry, and also by Josie Slutsky. Unusual for Trinity was the fact that only two men, James Furlong and Stephen Botkin had roles, and indeed the effect was very small ones at that.

The play itself progressed from one absurdity to another, and after the murder of Amelia Earhart, the players reached a crescendo which would have served as a better ending than did the lacedown monologue of the doctor's assistant. Queen Isabella was perched on the table dancing a semi-flamenco. Joan of Arc was mourning the death of Amelia. Ms. Stein was weeping snow, and Theda Bara swayed to the softly playing background music of Mozart.

The warden was played by Peter Arnott, who sometime this year we will maybe get to see in the role of a character who is not thirty or forty years older than himself. Maybe? One of the greatest pleasures of "Gallow's Humor" is that it is a short play which is not totally mind-boggling with far-out themes and preoccupations which are absolutely unfathomable. It is at once amusing and sad, yet highly refreshing.

Stars of the Bolshoi Ballet, starring prima ballerina Maya Plisetskaya, perform at the Bushnell Memorial Fri., Sat., and Sun., Sept. 13 - 15 at 8:00 p.m. with a special Sun. matinee at 2:30 for Dance At the Bushnell Series subscribers. Miss Plietskaya dances in all programs, with one performance of the long awaited U.S. premier of Carmen Suite.
Independent 1 Sweeps Intramurals

Participation in Intramurals turned up for the first time in several years and dramatically so with 352 more participants in 81 more contests. Alumni Point Trophy point totals were down reflecting fewer sports participated in (tennis and golf dropped, there were no entries to speak of in track, swimming, bowling, and squash, of all things) and the greater spread of interest i.e., one group interested in basketball but not entered as a group in softball and vice versa.

For the second time in Trinity Intramural history, an Independent team has taken the Alumni Trophy reflecting the continued disintegration of the fraternities as organized, disciplined units with an interest in athletics. The disinterest in individual sports was more pronounced this year than last with a notable drop in the aforementioned sports, all individual sports, laying eggs. With the recreational pressure on the facilities that we have, perhaps we should not frustrate ourselves with attempting the individual sports such as swimming, squash, and tennis in intramural competition. Certainly tennis has been tried at different times and in different places with no success. If there had been a large squash turnout, we could have had lead cries from the recreationalists who had been thwarted in their attempts to play squash as a result of our viable varsity programs in the sports. I can see pending disaster as far as basketball is concerned in the near future as the number of potential participants decreases.

BASKETBALL
Basketball was once again a success story with a goodly number of contests played in spite of this phenomenon—138 people participated. In view of the long season for intramural basketball, I do not feel that the forfeits in a potential 138 contests were exorbitant. The top six teams were:

1. Ind I
2. Frosh I
3. Ind IV
4. Hegel
5. Black House
6. Ind V

TOUCH FOOTBALL
Eleven teams participated in two leagues. Fifty-nine games were scheduled. As in the past, we have 30 or so teams can get anything done toward an organized play-offs. Time, fields, restrictions.

The top six teams were:

1. St. A
2. Ind V
3. Ind VIII
4. Ind III
5. Ind I
6. Ind II

VOLLEYBALL
Volleyball was a success. Sixteen teams in two leagues, each divided into two sections. Sixty-six games were played with 167 participants. Most of the scheduled games were played on four courts laid out in the fieldhouse quite a sight.

The top six were:

1. St. A
2. Ind VI
3. DKE
4. Psi U
5. PEA
6. Ind IV
