The College has launched a national fund raising campaign seeking $12 million for faculty and for academic programs. The funds being sought include a $2.5 million addition as part of the Library, and for improvement of the campus.

Achievement of this objective, according to President Lockwood, "will sustain Trinity as a small college of the highest quality. Undoubtedly, our nation is in need of strong institutions like Trinity where students can come to grips with important moral, social, and intellectual issues. Our goal is the continued development of this College as a place where sound scholarship is grounded in a concern for the ethical values of man."

More than $4 million has already been raised toward the goal. At a campaign kickoff ceremony held Saturday, January 18 at the College, Robert M. Blum, a New York attorney and national campaign chairman, reported that $4,165,025 in advance gifts and pledges have been received. He said: "These gifts, totaling just over a third of our goal, are certainly a great expression of confidence in Trinity, especially in light of our nation's unfavorable economic situation."

The College expects to raise $5 million endowment for faculty and for academic program; $2.5 million endowment for scholarships; $1 million endowment for campus improvement; $1 million endowment for the library; and $2.5 million for construction of the new library wing. The appeal is being made not only locally, but nationwide to alumni, parents, philanthropic foundations, business firms and other friends of the College.

In announcing the start of this campaign, Dr. Lockwood said: "Trinity today enjoys an enviable reputation, not only for the quality of its academic program, but also for the responsible manner in which we have managed our limited financial resources. Our budgets have been balanced each year and we have increased the income yield from our existing endowment. We have done this at a time when many colleges and universities are facing deficit budgets. Yet we realize that if Trinity is to continue to remain competitive with the best educational institutions, and if Trinity is to continue to make a significant contribution to society through the quality of the education we provide, it is imperative that we now increase the endowment base supporting our academic program and facilities."

We are in a situation in which our faculty salaries are not fully competitive; in which our scholarship funds are not sufficient to permit us to help enough qualified students from the lower and middle economic levels, in which our library is severely overcrowded, and in which rising costs of maintenance over many years have more than doubled our annual operating budget," Dr. Lockwood said.

This is why the greater portion of this campaign will go into our endowment. Endowment funds, which are held permanently and invested by the College, provide an annual income yield which supports the operating costs of current programs. Endowment income, tuition, and annual gifts are the three chief sources of revenue in Trinity's annual budget, the chief source of which, however, is an essential resource which enables Trinity to maintain enduring programs of high quality without at the same time putting the costs of these programs beyond the reach of most students.

The College's endowment of about $26 million is modest when compared to the endowments of the other colleges with which we compete for students and for faculty talent," Dr. Lockwood said. "The new endowment we seek will put Trinity in a better competitive position with these institutions."

Recent figures show Wesleyan with $114 million endowment; Amherst with $79 million endowment; Williams with $69 million endowment; Williams with $58 million endowment and Swarthmore with $52 million endowment.

"Central to our academic effort is the Trinity College Library, which in recent years has become too small for the number of books it contains and for the increased number of library users. After careful study, we have determined that the library building must be expanded, and are therefore including a $2.5 million addition as part of this fund raising campaign," Dr. Lockwood said.

The present library building, constructed on the campus in 1924, when a basement floor was converted to provide additional shelf and seating space. However, this was not adequate to meet the unexpected increase of the collection and number of users. The planned addition, based on projections for the next 20 years, will create new shelf space for 200,000 volumes, will provide 250 additional seating spaces, and create additional work space for staff.

"We recognize," Dr. Lockwood said, "that economic conditions are not favorable for launching a campaign of this magnitude. But, in a real sense, we have no choice. As our campaign motto points out, this must be an extraordinary effort on the part of many people to sustain the values of a Trinity education. Trinity's needs are intractable needs, and we must act now to meet them. We believe our goal is realistic in light of its importance to Trinity and, by implication, to the community at large."

"During and after this capital campaign, we will be continuing to maintain our unrestricted gifts to our Annual Giving Funds, which in recent years have raised $500,000 toward the annual budget."

Present at the announcement were trustees, members of the National Campaign Committee, faculty, stu-

Barber, professor and director of the program in music and Ms. Judith Rohrer, instructor in fine arts, conducted a dialogue on music and art with slides and music as illustration in the Austin Arts Center in January. The program which was co-sponsored by the College's Arts Department and the Hartford Symphony Auxiliary also included an exhibition of paintings loaned by friends of the Hartford Symphony and a concert performed by the Hartford Harp Trio.

Seventy-nine Trinity students are studying in foreign countries during the present academic year. Students are in Italy, France, Denmark, Israel, England, Spain, Austria, Greece, Scotland, the Netherlands, Sweden and Puerto Rico.

Trinity and the Connecticut State Department of Education recently co-sponsored a one-day seminar on Secondary School Computing at the College. Participants were secondary school students from Connecticut and Massachusetts. The seminar was directed by Theodore E. Blakelee, associate professor of engineering, assisted by Ms. Sharon J. Lackowski '76, Ms. Lackowski, a mathematics major, plans graduate study in computer sciences.

Blakelee also conducted a computer workshop in January for the Bureau of Elementary and Secondary Education of the Connecticut State Department of Education. The College's computing facilities were used heavily during the workshop. Mr. Blakelee was assisted by David Ahlsgren, lecturer in engineering, and Ms. Lackowski.

Dr. Donald D. Hook, associate professor of modern languages, reviewed "Kritische Gespräche" by Crean/Berghahn for the German Quarterly.

Trinity's Individualized Degree Program (IDP) was recently discussed on "From the College Campus" on WFSB-TV. Dr. Frank C. Kirkpatrick, director of the program, and Ms. Louise H. Fishber, assistant to the director of admissions for IDP and several IDP students were the guests on the program.

Letter to the Editor

Dr. Jerome P. Webster

As a student at Holderness School from 1964 to 1968, and at Trinity thereafter, I knew Dr. Jerome P. Webster well and greatly appreciated the fine obituary notice given him in the December 24th issue of The Trinity Reporter. (It's quite a coincidence that my first and last names are so similar.)

That obituary should be supplemented, I believe, by some mention of the Dr. Jerome P. Webster Library of Plastic Surgery in the Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital in New York. I know little of its history, but I do know that it is a remarkable, extensive, and almost priceless collection of the literature of plastic surgery. Some of the rare volumes in it date back as much as 400 years. That fact greatly surprised me, as I had no idea that this surgical specialty had its beginnings so far in the past.

Jerome showed me some of these books and other prizes of the collection during an afternoon's visit two or three years ago. He showed me also two of the many series of photographs which illustrate each step of his most notable plastic surgery operations; these carefully for me, occupied a considerable volume of filling space and, it seemed to me, should be immensely valuable to other plastic surgeons.

dents, and administrators. Dr. George W. B. Starkey, chairman of the board, read a resolution voted by the trustees at a meeting just prior to the announcement ceremony, which stated in part: "For more than 150 years Trinity College has sought to combine sound scholarship with concern for the moral implications of all learning. Believing this purpose to be in the best interests of society, and believing that Trinity can best continue this purpose by remaining a small college of the highest quality, the Trustees of Trinity College today announce, and give their wholehearted support to, a fund raising campaign for $12,000,000 to sustain the values of a Trinity education."

Chairman Blum pointed out that the campaign is now in process of soliciting "major gifts," of $10,000 or more, and that a general solicitation of alumni and friends of the College would not begin until this fall or later. Publications describing the campaign were also distributed, including a 16-page brochure outlining the scope and purposes of the campaign.

The campaign plans were prepared by a National Campaign Committee, headed by Blum, and including Henry S. Beers, '18, of Glastonbury, a trustee emeritus and retired chairman of Aetna Life & Casualty; Lyman B. Brainard '30, of West Hartford, a trustee and retired chairman, Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Co.; Otis E. Enders of Avon, a trustee emeritus and retired chairman, Hartford National Bank & Trust Co.; Mrs. Walter H. Gray of Hartford, a trustee and chairman of the Friends of Trinity Committee; Konrad Kruger '75 of Trenton, Michigan, chairman of the Students Committee; President Lockwood; Robert K. Help Trinity College

Trinity College is involved in a national campaign to raise $12 million for expansion of its scholarship program, for general campus improvement and for expansion of its library. The campaign is worthy of widespread support from the Greater Hartford community.

The college has already raised more than one-third of its goal, but collecting the balance will be no easy task in view of the state of the nation's economy, but it is the very state of the economy that has made the campaign necessary.

Trinity President Theodore D. Lockwood finds that Trinity is no longer fully competitive in faculty salaries; scholarships, the library and for improvement of the campus, has received considerable editorial support.

West Hartford News January 23, 1975

$12,000,000 Bravery

Trinity's brave announcement that it is going out after $12,000,000 to "sustain Trinity values," has more than an educational message for these parous times.

The decision puts into action the truism that the time to do anything is when it should be done. Undoubtedly the Trinity brass pondered whether this is "the time to ask for contributions." Their answer "yes" is fulfillment of the Trinity leadership's responsibility to its students.

The 151-year-old college on the hill in Hartford is conscious of its recognition of the nation's "great and continuing need for well-educated citizens who have also learned to apply their knowledge with integrity." Though Trinity claims this as a "distinctive purpose" of a Trinity education, such a questionable singular attribute does not have to be pursued literally. It is sufficient that the well-educated citizens who make the decisions at Trinity are applying their knowledge with integrity to the intellectual welfare of faculty and student body. They are going to get them the money needed to enable a small college, rich in its profession of the humanities, to keep on giving full value in the development of the young men and women entrusted to it.

The twin purposes of enlarging knowledge and sustaining ethical values cannot be advanced by short-changing the next generation. This calls for increased scholarship help to those unable otherwise to go to Trinity, for strengthening faculty salaries, for improving the library services and keeping up the campus environment.

Many colleges are taking the view that some of these things can go undone because the economy is currently tight. But everything is relative, and the decision by Trinity to plough ahead, even when the soil ahead may be a little rocky, is sound policy-making. It is an attitude which hopefully is contagious.

Printed below, with permission of the respective publishers, are several editorials which appeared in the Hartford area shortly after the campaign announcement was made.
