Annual Giving Outlook Good

Prospects for a successful Annual Giving campaign look good as evidenced by the many gifts and pledges received by Trinity's Development Office through January 20. The Alumni Fund has received $139,015 in gifts or pledges from 1,413 sources, or 46% of its goal of $300,000. Last year during the same period, $119,147 had been received. Forty-six per cent of the funds sought for the national fund raising campaign had been pledged or received from business and industry donors.

Business and Industry Associates have already given $23,791, or 37% of the $65,000 sought. The largest contributions percentage-wise to date are from 62 donors to the Friends of Trinity Fund, who have given or pledged $21,075, or 70% of the $30,000 desired.

New contributors include 255 alumni; 98 parents, nine friends and 10 business and industry donors.

The Anniversary Club, whose membership includes those giving between $150 and $900, has 413 alumni, parents and friends as members this year. There are 110 new members.

Thirty-eight persons have joined the Founders Society for 1974-75 contributing $1,000 or more. Six of these members are new.

Applications Rise

Applications for admission as freshmen to the College are up slightly from last year. To date, 2,880 applications have been submitted.

Last year at this time, 2,826 applications had been received. In 1973, 2,302 persons applied.

Topic for the event was "Cartesian Coordinates." The colloquium is sponsored by the Philosophy Department, the lecture committee and the dean of faculty. Participants included faculty from Harvard, Princeton, Columbia, Brandeis, Northeastern and the University of Iceland.

Saturday's program began at 10 a.m. with a presentation on "Valuating Reason: A Locked-Room Mystery." At 2 p.m., "Cartesian Dualism" was the topic for a second discussion. The evening program was on the topic "Dualism in Descartes: The Logical Ground." Sunday's program began at 10 a.m. on the subject "Descartes' Denial of Mind-Body Identity." The "Representational Character of Ideas and The Problem of the External World" followed at 1 p.m. "The Beast Machine" concluded the colloquium.

Editorial Support

Considerable editorial support for the national fund raising campaign has been received from Hartford area media. Reprints of several of the articles appear on page 4.

This is why the greater portion of this campaign will go into our endowment. Endowment funds, which are held permanently and invested by the College, provide an annual income yield which supports the operating costs of current programs. Endowment income, tuition, and annual gifts are the three chief sources of revenue in Trinity's annual budget, the chief sources of revenue in any college's annual budget. However, is an essential resource which enables Trinity to maintain enduring programs of high quality, by which to do the same thing in the future. The College's endowment of about $26 million is modest when compared to the endowments of other colleges with which they compete for students and for faculty talent. DR. Lockwood said, "the new endowment will put Trinity in a better competitive position with these institutions.

Recent figures show Wesleyan with $114 million endowment; Amherst with $79 million endowment; Williams with $69 million endowment; Williams with $58 million endowment and Swarthmore with $52 million endowment.

"Central to our academic effort is the Trinity College Library, which in recent years has become too small for the number of books it contains and for the increased number of library users. After careful study and determination that the library building must be expanded, and are therefore including a $2.5 million addition as part of this fund raising campaign," Dr. Lockwood said.

The present library building, constructed in 1957, was expanded in 1967 when a basement floor was converted to provide additional shelf and seating space. However, this was not adequate to meeting increased demand, nor the collection and number of users. The planned addition, based on projections for the next 20 years, will create new space for 200,000 volumes, will provide 250 additional seating spaces, and create additional work space for staff.

"We recognize," Dr. Lockwood said, "that economic conditions are not favorable for launching a campaign of this magnitude. But, in a real sense, we have no choice. As our campaign motto points out, this must be an extraordinary effort on the part of many people 'to sustain the values of a Trinity education.' Trinity's needs are intractable needs. And we must act now to meet them. We believe our goal is realistic in light of its importance to Trinity and, by implication, to the community at large.

"Daring and after this capital campaign, we will be continuing to maintain the same unrestricted gifts to our Annual Giving Funds, which in recent years have raised $500,000 toward the annual budget," Dr. Lockwood said.

Present at the announcement were trustees, members of the National Campaign Committee, faculty, stu-
Dr. Sonia Lee, assistant professor of modern languages, recently delivered a lecture in French, at the University of Rhode Island entitled "The Image of the Mother in the African Novel of French Expressionism.

Alfred C. Burford '64, editorial consultant in the Development Office, has joined the Board of Directors of the Greater Hartford Campus Ministry. The Campus Ministry is an ecumenical program serving several colleges and universities in the area. He is also on the Board of Directors of the Connecticut Council of Churches.

Ms. Stephanie Woodward, acting director of the Trinity dance program and Ms. Wendy Perrone, guest artist in dance, have been awarded grants. Ms. Woodward has received $2,500 from the Connecticut Commission on the Arts in collaboration with Ms. Katherine Gallagher of the New Haven Dance Ensemble. The production which will result from this grant will take place February 13 in Crowell Concert Hall, Center for the Arts, Wesleyan.

Ms. Perrone has been awarded a choreographic fellowship by the National Endowment of the Arts.

Ms. Judith Davenport, instructor in dance at the College, appeared on a program on Channel 30 television in December. Entitled "Women, Dance, Women," Ms. Davenport was interviewed and presented two original works.

Dr. Clyde D. McKee, associate professor of political science, has been appointed to the Public Policy Committee of the American Society for Public Administration in Washington. The purpose of the Public Policy Committee is to assist the National Council in defining and addressing a set of problems and issues concerning public administration and to promote an awareness and concern of the role of public administration in the service of the nation.

Dr. Richard P. Burton, associate professor of English, is the editor of "Poem as Literary Creation," studies on modern languages. A Symposium which will be published by Transnational Books in the Spring.

Dr. J. Bard McNulty, professor of English, has been appointed Secretary of the Faculty as of January 15, 1975.

Dr. Clarence H. Barber, professor and director of the program in music and Ms. Judith Rohrer, instructor in fine arts, conducted a dialogue on music and art with slides and music as illustration in the Austin Arts Center in January. The program which was co-sponsored by the College's Arts Department and the Hartford Symphony Auxiliary also included an exhibition of paintings loaned by friends of the Hartford Symphony and a concert performed by the Hartford Harp Trio.

Seventy-nine Trinity students are studying in foreign countries during the present academic year. Students are in Italy, France, Denmark, Israel, England, Spain, Austria, Greece, Scotland, the Netherlands, Sweden, and Puerto Rico.

Trinity and the Connecticut State Department of Education recently co-sponsored a one-day seminar on Secondary School Computing at the College. Participants were secondary school students from Connecticut and Massachusetts. The seminar was directed by Theodore R. Blakeslee, associate professor of engineering, assisted by Ms. Sharon J. Lackowski '76 and Ms. Lackowski, a mathematics major, plans graduate study in computer sciences.

Blakeslee also conducted a computer workshop in January for the Bureau of Elementary School Computing at the Connecticut State Department of Education. The College's computing facilities were used heavily during the workshop. Mr. Blakeslee was assisted by David Abshagen, lecturer in engineering, and Ms. Lackowski.

Dr. Donald D. Hook, associate professor of modern languages, reviewed "Kritoschi Gesprache" by Cretz-Berghahn for the German Quarterly.

Trinity's Individualized Degree Program (IDP) was recently discussed on "From the College Campus" on WFSB-TV. Dr. Frank G. Kilkpatrick, director of the program, and Ms. Louise H. Fisher, assistant to the director of admissions for IDP and several IDP students were the guests on the program.

Letter to the Editor

Dr. Jerome P. Webster

As a student at Holderness School from 1934 to 1938, and at Trinity thereafter, I knew Dr. Jerome P. Webster well and greatly appreciated the fine obituary notice given him in the December Letter to the Editor issue of The Trinity Reporter. Jerome (known simply as Jimmy in his prep-school days and as Dan in college) was one of Trinity's truly great alumni.

That obituary should be supplemented, I believe, by some mention of the Dr. Jerome P. Webster Library of Plastic Surgery in the Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital in New York. I know little of its history, but I do know that it is a remarkable, extensive, and almost priceless, collection of the literature of plastic surgery. Some of the rare volumes in it date back as much as 400 years. That fact greatly surprised me, as I had no idea that this surgical specialty had its beginnings so far in the past.

Jerome showed me some of these books and other prized of the collection in the course of an afternoon's visit two or three years ago. He showed me also two of the many series of photographs which illustrate each step of his most notable plastic surgery operations; these carefully for and occupied a considerable volume of filing space and, it seemed to me, should be immensely valuable to other plastic surgeons.

ents, and administrators. Dr. George W. B. Starkey, chairman of the board, read a resolution voted by the trustees at a meeting just prior to the announcement ceremony, which stated in part: "For more than 150 years Trinity College has sought to combine sound scholarship with concern for the moral implications of all learning. Believing this purpose to be in the best interests of society, and believing that Trinity can best continue this purpose by remaining a small college of the highest quality, the Trustees of Trinity College today announce, and give their wholehearted support to, a fund raising campaign for $12.000,000 to sustain the values of a Trinity education."

Chairman Blum pointed out that the campaign is now in progress of soliciting "major gifts," of $10.000 or more, and that a general solicitation of alumni and friends of the College would not begin until this fall or later. Publications describing the campaign were also distributed, including a 16-page brochure outlining the scope and purposes of the campaign.

The campaign plans were prepared by a National Campaign Committee, headed by Blum, and including Henry S. Bees '18, of Glastonbury, a trustee emeritus and retired chairman of Aetna Life & Casualty; Lyman B. Bainbridge '80, of West Hartford, a trustee and retired chairman, Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Co.; Ostrom Enders of Avon, a trustee emeritus and retired chairman, Hartford National Bank & Trust Co.; Mrs. Walter H. Trinity College enjoys an enviable reputation, not only for the quality of its academic program, but also for the responsible manner in which we have managed our limited financial resources.” And it is worth noting that Trinity has maintained balanced budgets at a time when many colleges and universities are facing severe budget deficits.

The college has already raised more than one-third of its goal, but collecting the balance will be no easy task in view of the state of the economy that has made the campaign necessary.

Trinity President Theodore D. Lockwood finds that Trinity is no longer operating on donation both large and small — and more are too small. It is a worthy campaign deserving of total community support.

Trinity College is involved in a national campaign to raise $12 million for expansion of its scholarship program, for general campus improvement and for expansion of its library. Help enough potential students from diverse backgrounds has made the campaign necessary.

The twin purposes of enlarging knowledge and sustaining ethical values cannot be advanced by the time to ask for contributions.” Their answer has more than an educational message for the Hartford community.

So the library is overcrowded; the library services and keeping up the campus environment. They are going to get them the money needed to enable a knowledge with integrity to the intellectual welfare of faculty and students.

The purpose is simple — to provide new gift capital for the following needs: Faculty; $5.1 million; scholarships; $2.9 million; library; $3.5 million, and campus; $1 million. These priorities, we are assured, have been carefully allocated and the distribution is the best judgment of the college administration and trustees. So much for the money.

What will really matter in the response to the fund-raising campaign is the measure of endorsement of its purpose. Nothing could be more rewarding, nor better for the future, than to have the campaign succeed because givers felt they were contributing as much to the intellectual welfare of faculty and students as they do to knowledge.

Printing below, with permission of the respective publishers, are several editorials which appeared in the Hartford area shortly after the campaign announcement was made.

Help Trinity College

Trinity College is involved in a national campaign to raise $12 million for expansion of its scholarship program, for general campus improvement and for expansion of its library. The campaign is worthy of widespread support from the Greater Hartford community.

Help Trinity College.

Trinity College enjoys an enviable reputation, not only for the quality of its academic program, but also for the responsible manner in which we have managed our limited financial resources.” And it is worth noting that Trinity has maintained balanced budgets at a time when many colleges and universities are facing severe budget deficits.

The college has already raised more than one-third of its goal, but collecting the balance will be no easy task in view of the state of the economy that has made the campaign necessary.

Trinity Presidential Theodore D. Lockwood finds that Trinity is no longer competitively in faculty salaries; scholarship funds are insufficient to help ensure potential students from the diverse backgrounds that add much to the college; the library is overcrowded; and rising costs of maintenance cut ever more deeply into the school’s annual operating budget.

Dr. Lockwood, in announcing the campaign said, “Trinity College today enjoys an enviable reputation, not only for the quality of its academic program, but also for the responsible manner in which we have managed our limited financial resources.” And it is worth noting that Trinity has maintained balanced budgets at a time when many colleges and universities are facing severe budget deficits.

When the community has needed assistance that Trinity could offer, Trinity has been there. Now, as in the past, when Trinity needs assistance, the community, too, will be there to provide it.

The success of the campaign will depend on support from both large and small — and more are too small. It is a worthy campaign deserving of total community support.

Trinity’s Extraordinary Effort

As Hartford’s own Trinity College publicly embarks on a national effort to raise $12 million for its expansion, the thought occurs how confidently we could face the future if only money were needed to shape and assure it. Suddenly, we are reminded once again that money is now and evermore will be only the means to an end. It is important that Trinity reaches its monetary goal but it is infinitely more important that its purpose be attained.

The objective can be spelled out more succinctly than the purpose. The objective is simply to provide new gift capital for the following needs: Faculty; $5.1 million; scholarships; $2.9 million; library; $3.5 million, and campus; $1 million. These priorities, we are assured, have been carefully allocated and the distribution is the best judgment of the college administration and trustees. So much for the money.

What will really matter in the response to the fund-raising campaign is the measure of endorsement of its purpose. Nothing could be more rewarding, nor better for the future, than to have the campaign succeed because givers felt they were contributing as much to the intellectual welfare of faculty and students as they do to knowledge.

Youth and many of the teachers of today give hopeful signs that society at last is stirring to the magnetism of selflessness, if not to selflessness. It is to this end that Trinity and other colleges of its nature and tradition direct their resources and energies. That we have institutions so dedicated and that we have the means to insure their continued existence give us our best hope for the growth and spread of precious endowed men and women in whom integrity and responsibility are among the chief endowments.

The need for American and world citizens in whom basic human values and academic disciplines are inextricably combined cannot be overstated. Trinity itself describes its course of study thusly: to enable students to perceive the inherent value of knowledge and reason, free from bias, to佣 or despise, to encourage the joy of learning, and to discover the importance of ethical values in living their lives.

Society cannot buy such recruits. It can only seek them from sources such as Trinity, through thoughtfully rigorous training of young minds, the inculcation of values whose high worth is the worth of the individual, and the final development of character which can well mean the difference between a world of darkness and one of light. Such a goal and product are worth not only generous support but eager sacrifice.

$12,000,000 Bravery

Trinity’s brave announcement that it is going out after $12,000,000 to “sustain Trinity values,” has more than an educational message for these parcous times. The decision puts into action the urisim that the time to do anything is when it should be done. Undoubtedly the Trinity brass understood whether this “is the time to ask for contributions.” Their answer “yes” is fulfillment of the Trinity leadership’s responsibility to its students.

The 151-year-old college on the hill in Hartford is conscious of its recognition of the nation’s “great and continuing need for well-educated citizens who have also learned to apply their knowledge with integrity.” Though Trinity claims this as a “distinctive purpose” of a Trinity education, such a unquestionably singular attribute does not have to be pursued literally. It is sufficient that the well-educated citizens who make the decisions at Trinity are applying their knowledge with integrity to the intellectual welfare of faculty and student body. They are going to get them the money needed to enable a small college, rich in its profession of the humanities, to keep on giving full value in the development of the young men and women entrusted to it.

The twin purposes of enlarging knowledge and sustaining ethical values cannot be advanced by short-changing the next generation. This calls for increased scholarship help to those unable otherwise to go to Trinity, for strengthening faculty salaries, for improving the library services and keeping up the campus environment.

Many colleges are taking the view that some of these things can go undone because the economy is currently tight. But everything is relative, and the decision by Trinity to plough ahead, even when the soil ahead may be a little rocky, is sound policy-making. It is an attitude which hopefully is contagious.
