Music Department Chairman Dies

Professor Clarence H. Barber, who joined the faculty of Trinity College in 1954, was appointed Chairman of the Music Department in 1959. When he died of a heart attack in his study on January 7, he was 57.

Dr. Barber was a graduate of Harvard University and had spent time as a musicologist in Paris. He had been teaching at Trinity since 1954 and was known for his dedication to undergraduate education.

At Trinity, Dr. Barber's principal activities were the direction of the music program, coordinating the curriculum, and the coordinating of the curriculum. He also served as Chairman of the Committee of Chairmen of Music.

Dr. Barber's contributions included various articles and book reviews to musical publications in America and France. His transcription of an opera by Scarlatti and many part-time positions. While departments generally do their own recruiting, all faculty hiring must have the concurrence of the Dean. While each department chairman tries to achieve an appropriate variety of faculty for his department, it is the Dean of the Faculty who aims to achieve a good balance of faculty for the college as a whole. One of Dean Nye's immediate goals is to encourage department chairmen to see if their personal property was destroyed.

Dean Nye received his B.S. from New Hampshire and his M.A. from Harvard University and was appointed Chairman of the Music Department in 1959. In 1970 he was appointed Dean of the Faculty by election to the Societe Francaise de Musicologie, a rare honor for an American. Dr. Barber also took time to work on his Master's degree before serving in the U.S. Army during World War II.

The Dean of the Faculty's office is in Williams Hall, the office formerly held by the President of the college. This is the first in a series of administration profiles, which introduces Dean Nye and explains the responsibilities of the Dean of the Faculty.

The Dean of the Faculty is the chief academic officer of the college. He administers the budgets of the college and serves as the major academic advisor to the students. The Dean also serves as the President of the Board of Trustees.

The Dean of the Faculty is also in charge of all academic departments in the music department, including the Music Department, the Co-op Program in Music, and the Cooperative Program in Music.

the "Academic Affairs Committee" (which handles such things as student probationations), and the "Graduate Committee." The Dean of Faculty is also a member of the "Curriculum Committee" (which approves all courses and course descriptions). This year, along with the other newly created post of Dean of Studies, the Dean of Studies position has taken over the curriculum area, leaving the threat of the Dean of Faculty position in structural budgets and faculty personnel.

Finally, the Dean of Faculty represents Trinity College at several national associations such as the American Council on Education and the New England Association of Colleges. Here our Dean meets other Deans and engages in useful exchanges of information. Our Dean of Faculty also accompanies President Lockheed to such things as meetings of the Board of Trustees.

Security Guard Resigns
by Magda Lichota

Trinity College's only female security guard, twenty-one year old Mary Kmetetz, submitted her resignation on January 17. The resignation is effective as of this Friday.

Kmetetz resigned because she is not making enough money to be most important and viable. On July 1976, Kmetetz started at Trinity College as a part-time job to make it profitable for her to continue her studies at Western Connecticut State University. Kmetetz stated, "I'd make $25 more on unemployment.

Kmetetz explained another reason for resigning. "I feel like my job is on the line every day when I come in. Garafolo doesn't think that I'm doing my job. He doesn't seem that I'm equal to the other guards in Garafolo's attitude. He's looking for a reason to fire me.'" He also stated that Kmetetz had been on probation for the past six months.

When asked why Kmetetz's probation period had been six months, Garafolo refused to comment. He stated, however, that he was "very satisfied with Mary as a security guard. She has a lot more experience than Garafolo was when he decided to leave."

"I don't want to leave. I enjoy it here." She stated that she could not reconsider Security. "I have an interview next Thursday just to make sure I like the position."

Kmetetz had been offered another thirty day probation period, terminating either in a raise in salary or a dismissal. He didn't offer me more money and that's what I need."

Kmetetz plans to continue with police work after she leaves Trinity. "I have an interest in the police force and I'm going to apply to the State Police Auxiliary. I like police work and to be involved. I really regret leaving Trinity. I'd like to thank all the students for their support and their efforts to get me to stay. I've really enjoyed the students here."

Horizons Lecture

The 12th lecture in the "HORIZONS" series, entitled "A Statue of a Professor of Religion is effective. Security Update: Burglary and a New Car
by KennethCrowe

One burglary occurred at Trinity during the Christmas vacation period. The break-in took place at the Duke House on December 26th.

The three men and one woman who had broken into Deke were spotted by a neighbor who called the Hartford Police Department. The thief broke the glass door to the room while they were committing the crime. The four suspects managed to rob two rooms by the time the police arrived. Their loot included lamps, typewriters, stereo equipment, tapes, clock-radios, and men's clothing. If the four had not been spotted by a neighbor, it is felt that they would have been able to ransack the entire house.

The four suspects were caught in buildings after the deadline to report them. They were expelled from campus for three years. They are currently confiscated and given to the Dean of Students for further action if necessary.

This problem occurs every year. The students who are caught excuse for being in the dorms which range from coming back to pick up a few personal belongings to having no other place to stay. They cause trouble. Security because people are seen in supposedly empty buildings, leaving the impression that the building is being burglarized. The student trespassers gain admittance by breaking windows or arranging to fix doors and windows in such a manner that they can be opened from the outside.

Security's first test of the new semester came on Wednesday, January 19, when the fire alarms went off in Jayvee. The dorm was evacuated and the fire department responded to what turned out to be a false alarm. At first it was believed that there was actually a fire, as smoke could be smelled in the hallways. It later became apparent that someone had started a fire in one of the Jarvis fireplaces. Besides being in violation of school policy, Garafolo also stated that "there is no ventilation for the fire." He asks that no fires be started because they could result in a serious accident.

Kmetetz, for her part, Security has been allotted $4,000 to buy a new patrol car to replace the car that is being rented for that purpose.

Community Action

The sprinklers

Although Smith said he thought there was little chance of anything like this happening again, "He admitted that "It's not reassuring if you think they will go off for no reason."

He said that he is going to look into the possibility of installing safety meters in the system. They would set off an alarm if the water pipes are turned on, and a regular check. This would inform the plumber that a leak might be developing.

Several of the students displeased by the food remarked that the one encouraging aspect about their experience was the assistance they received from other students. As Tolman phrased it, "People didn't even know who helping dry things off."

Editorial

A Student Voice is Essential

The second semester is starting to take shape. The patterns of our daily lives are once more structured into the course of college life. Students, faculty, and the administration are setting the new existence that will carry them through the upcoming months. Before we fall too deeply into the complicity brought on by daily routine, let us, the students, ask ourselves what remains to us, and what should be changed.

This semester, prices in the bookstores have reached new heights. The lack of used books available, combined with the heavy book loads required by the curriculum, make it difficult to find any bargains. Students are forced to seek out stores that offer a greater selection of used materials. In some cases, the price of a course precludes a student from entering a class. Bookstores have become not only a process not of shopping for courses, but for affordable book loads as well.

Perhaps the most unsettling is the skyrocketing price of textbooks. If a course must contain an examination of both new and the possibly schedule different exams at different times, enabling students to share costs.

Another issue concerning the students is that of a pub on campus. Trinity was scheduled to have a Rathskeller (as it was originally named) in September, 1975. Difficulties in altering a zoning ordinance, protests with the State, and the Commission, and administrative misheaps have caused the delays. At present, the opening of the pub is being obstructed by a technicality in the application for a liquor license, and the college must reapply. Up until now, there has been very little pressure on the administration to act quickly on this issue. It is possible that the process could be ended if it is known that the opening of the pub is important to enough people.

The winter months, curfews in the parking area on Summit Street are vulnerable to theft and vandalism as well as weather conditions. Spreading salt may solve the problem of icy sidewalks, but does nothing to alter the lack of available parking space. A College Affairs Committee to expand the south campus lot. The proposal was tabled, it is one that deserves renewed attention.

The Administration is planning to install electronic clocks in North Campus. The area is being patrolled more often. The presence of women in North Campus becomes more pressing in the light of the recent situation by releasing a portion of the women into central campus dorms being considered for next year, interrupting men and women on the second floor is also a proposal for next year.

These issues will remain unanswered as long as students choose to let them. There can be little that will work to act against students voicing their opinions. Last semester, a group of students protested their opposition to the (Saxe- Deacon) President, whether or not they were right at this particular point. What is important is that they expressed their dissatisfaction. If we desire change, a student voice is essential.

"Repressive Tolerance"

Dear Sirs, to whom it may or may not concern:

It has come to my attention that Prof. Brent Harold has been renewed. I find this disturbing, ostensibly, not been renewed, I find this most other members of last semester's have fired Brent Harold for dishonourable discharge, a personal misstep. Prof. Harold is being relieved of his permanent leave of absence so to not concern:

Warmly encouraged. Deadline for articles, letters to the editor and other located in Seabury 34. Office hours: Saturday, 3-5 p.m., Sunday from 3

Barbara's been reading too many best sellers President "to be good with consciousness." Do any of the faculty members who hold falsely "objective" quantative measurements already have the power to eject students "input" and active participation? Do any of the students around here now remember when Prof. Frankel was reinstated because of the combined efforts of both students and faculty members? Has the college gone mad? People around here prefer to have Irwin Corey teach them literature instead of persons such as Brent Harold.

To learn the outcome of this affair, keep posted for the next exciting, excruciating episode in the course of next week. Try to take a break from Mary Hartman and Gary Gilmore for a while. It might do (me) some good.

Harold: Evaluations' Victim

To the Editors:

It has always been a belief in me that a course is a reevaluation of the professor's and student's judgments with Dr. Schultz's ideas as expressed during his recent Hartford presidency on the subject. But events of the last few weeks have caused me to reevaluate these views with respect to student evaluations as they are done at Trinity College. The charge has been made that the evaluations are irrespective of the students by their rush to pass through the pre-registration process. There may be much to be said for this statement, though I have been unable to find any specific bit of time at those grey desks in the Washington Room. There is a good chance that they were very few students are aware of.

As a student and the student evaluations and criticisms are used by the department chairman and administration, is it not true that this unfair, unprofessional and appalling. In the most important priority in the ranking process being the professor's competency, it has become clear that because of the pressure on students to achieve. Do any of the faculty members see this as being of any concern to them?

Professor's competency becomes a decisively determining factor. Is the administration interested in a thriving business whose consumers receive what they like, rather than a more profitable education? Are we going to determine our professors as the television industry decides what to broadcast: the lowest common denominator?

I would like to find a solution to this problem, if it is possible. If we desire change, a student voice is essential.

In hopes of change.

Security Needed in North Campus

To the Editor:

In the space of one semester's time, North Campus was the site of two separate attacks on women. Both girls escaped serious harm out of sheer luck. After each of these attacks, we who live in North Campus were naturally concerned, but we were assured that security would be tightened. Well, I saw a security guard patrol the halls for maybe two nights subsequent to each attack and that seemed to be the end of the matter. We were then told that sooner security system would be devised during Christmas vacation. This did not seem unreasonable. Four and a half weeks is not too short a time in which to come up with some sort of plan. However, upon returning to school, I found no security measures taken. As a matter of fact, all of the doors were propped wide open. Does the administration mean to tell me that after four and a half weeks we could devise was to make the doors so bitterly cold that no one could possibly dare anyone without doing it while being badly hurt? Seriously, I don't see why the administration finds it so difficult to do a simple fix to this problem. Every other college has managed to solve this problem, so why can't we? My college has to work harder for their students. Why can't Trinity? I didn't pay six thousand dollars to attend this absurdly beautiful city. Sincerely,

Beth Levin

Fellows Observe Trinity-What Next?

by Marc Blumenthal

As students returned to Trinity this past week after a break of over a month, the Board of Fellows, the governing body of the College, held its annual meeting. The Board was aware of the former fact, but not of the latter. Indeed, it seems as though the Fellows were here or were they at all? The "Fellow" is.

The resignation of security guard Mary Knetsch, submitted this past week, raises some interesting questions. Why, in Knetsch's case, was the customary three month probationary period extended to double that of students? Why, at the end of the second three months, was she offered another 30 days of probationary employment? Why was she never given or offered a raise in salary? And what finally caused her to submit her resignation?

In her interview with the Triod, Ms. Knetsch stated that her reason for resigning was that she did not make enough money to warrant her stay. Although she was only a sophomore at Yale, she was permitted to return to Trinity each day to work, and that it would be more profitable for her to find another job. The Board then decided to collect unemployment compensation for the last three months, a decision which Knetsch does not wish to state to the Triod, but which warranted an explanation from the Trustees.

That, however, would still not explain why at the end of the second three months, her employment was not terminated, or her probationary status removed, but rather another extension of probationary status was given. The other possible inference which can be drawn, which is according to Ms. Knetsch, is that "something happened there" during the third month which she does not wish to state to the Triod, but which warranted an extension of probationary status.

The resignation of Knetsch is a clear indication that the Board of Trustees is not prepared to observe various aspects of the College's life and respond to the actions of the Trustees.

The Fellows arrived on Thursday evening of last week and spent the next day conferring with students and faculty members. The morning was taken up with career counseling with certain students and officers, and was always supervised by Mr. Knetsch. The afternoon was devoted to observing various aspects of the College community and Fellows should be encouraged to participate in these activities.

The resignations of Knetsch and Garofolo, for his part, have demonstrated the Board of Trustees' lack of comprehension of the Board's implications, and most of all of the Board's responsibilities. Of course, the Board of Trustees must be seen in relation to the system which he defends and must be somehow involved in a serious discussion of the Board's responsibilities.

The resignation of security guard Mary Knetsch, submitted this past week, raises some interesting questions.

The death of Clarence Barber during Christmas Vacation was a tragedy for the school, a loss for his students, his colleagues, and his loved ones. He was not a saint, not even a scholar, but a human being, with his share of sadness in many friends. As a conductor of the Trinity Chamber Orchestra, Barber was well respected by his colleagues and students. He was a man who lived and breathed music, from the classical to the contemporary. He was a master of his craft, known for his expertise in dodecaphonic music and his ability to make even the most complex musical ideas accessible to his students.

Learn-for-Fun

The Spring semester of Trinity College’s learning-for-pleasure adult program will begin February 14 and registration is open immediately. The program is designed for those who want to continue to grow intellectually and no college degree is required. Senior citizens automatically receive a one-third discount.

Each course meets one evening a week on a trinity campus with ample parking available. Eight courses will be offered for the spring semester ending April 21, 1977, drawn from an examination of the options facing Hartford and the nation, taught by Costanza Holton.

Tuesday’s courses will include “Foundations of Western Thought,” an exploration of the dilemmas of our time through a “Foundations of Western Thought,” an exploration of the dilemmas of our time through a discussion of the psychology of women in literature. All courses will be taught by members of Trinity’s faculty. All courses are non-credit and no examinations or papers are required.

A course taught on Monday evenings will be “Dancing for the Deaf-Dancer,” an exploration of each student’s personal movement style from the application of those styles to technical concepts in ballet and other movement disciplines, taught by Costanza Holton.

Wednesday course oil “Fiction and Form” will examine six areas vital to the City’s psychological development, taught by Sidney L. Gardner, will examine six areas vital to the City’s psychological development, taught by Sidney L. Gardner.

Thursday courses will be “The Psychology of Women in Literature” taught by Dannel Hanne. She will explore the themes of Zionism, sexual identity and the psychology of self-image, marriage and motherhood. Judith Rohrer will teach “Contemporary Art: Where is It Headed?” in which she will make comments and in which she will make comments and explore the current questions in art for the last 25 years will be examined.

The fee for each course is $75.00. Registration forms and information are available from Ivan Backer, Director, Office of Community Education, Trinity College.

Financial Aid

Financial Aid Applications for the 1977-78 school year are being processed out by the Office of Financial Aid, located in Downson Memorial Hall. Students interested in applying or reapplying for school controlled assistance must do so before the first week of classes. Please call ext. 365 for additional information.

“Upward Bound”

A Hartford “Upward Bound” student at Trinity College has been awarded one of a limited number of national scholarships. Kevin DeLou, 17-year-old senior at South Catholic High School, has been studying college preparatory courses at Trinity College for three years.

The scholarship is for the “Presidential Classroom for Young Americans.” It provides an opportunity for high school students to explore the complexities of modern government during an eight-day stay in Washington, D.C. early in February. The “Upward Bound” program is funded by the U.S. Office of Education of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Stephen Wood will teach this introductory course in the “art of seeing” through drawing. Students will work in charcoal, pencil, pen and ink. “Can Hartford Make It?” taught by Sidney L. Gardner, will examine six areas vital to the City’s future and will include lectures by visiting experts.

Summer in Spain

Each year during the summer, a program is offered to students to travel and study in Spain. Last summer 126 students from 35 states departed from Kennedy Airport and flew to Barcelona. The group was lodged in Universidad Laboral de Tarragona, on the Mediterranean coast where they lived and attended classes. The University had its own private beach, tennis and basketball courts.

Courses ranged from Elementary Spanish to Literature and Culture.

Sixty students made a four-day tour to London. Once or twice a week a group trip was scheduled to visit such historical places as Tarragona, Messonerat, the interesting city of Barcelona, Valencia, etc. Some students visited the island of Mallorca, etc.

Students found that they had also more than enough time to do, see and learn whatever they chose.

As part of the trip, a program was planned to take the students to the opera a day in Madrid and fora day in Barcelona and a day in Seville and Cordoba. The program included television programs representative of a variety of organizations which are interested in providing the new services of evening prayer and referral to young people.

The Spring semester of Trinity College beginning on Sunday, January 30, at 4:15 p.m. continues through the following two months.

The Thursday Night Bum’s Club (TNNBC) will meet each week at 7:30 on Thursday nights in the Quinlan Room. It is an open discussion of all topics.

Volunteers Needed

A YOUTH LINE phone service for area youth will be opening in mid-February. The YOUTH LINE will be an extension of the services already provided by the Bridge, a multi-service youth center located in West Hartford. The Line will provide brief counseling, information and referral to young people.

Volunteers are needed to staff the phone on weekday evenings and weekend afternoons and evenings. Training for phone workers will touch on personal awareness and phone skills as well as various pertinent youth issues. Training will be held on eight evenings and one full session in January and early February, 1977. A six-month commitment is required of all volunteer phone workers.

Contact should be made by mail or phone with Bob Triffed, The Bridge, 12 South Main Street, West Hartford, CT 06107 (226-2979).

Round-trip fare is $355, but reservations must be made very early (probably in February) and be accompanied by a deposit of $125. Payment in full is due 60 days before departure.

Venture Program

Jobs for career exploration or for a term off are available through the Venture Program. Information on the Venture Program is available in the Office of Educational Services, the Career and Counseling Office, and the Office of Mrs. Mary Miller, Trinity campus representative assistant with the Venture Program. Mrs. Mann's office is Seabury 1-A (Tuesday and Thursday mornings), and her College Extension in 256.

Durham Program

Applications to participate in the Durham Program (with full integration into the University with British students) through the faculty photography exhibit in the Office of Educational Services just as part of the program.

Mystic Studies

The program is sponsored by the Mystic Seaport which is sponsored by Williams College and Mystic Seaport for the 1977-78 academic year. There will also be examples of other and/or feature stories. The students represented are Peter Edwards, a junior from the University of Texas, Oklahoma, and Lechton Berlin, a senior from Haverford, Pennsylvania.

Tentative plans are being made for a second show later in the semester. Persons interested in joining the Faculty meeting will be held on Tuesday, January 25, 1977, at 4 p.m. in McCork Auditorium. The agenda will include the following:
1) Reports of the Faculty Affairs Committee; 2) Reports of other committees; 3) Such other business as may be brought about after the meeting.

“Feed your Prof”

Did you know that you can invite a professor to either breakfast, lunch, or dinner at no cost? So why don’t you do it? The College Board of Trustees in soliciting "Feed your Prof" Week—January 31-February 4. Try it! You’ll like it.

Photo Exhibit

Members of the Trinity College faculty and students will be represented in a photograph exhibit which will be on exhibit to the public at the East Anglia Center from January 18 through January 28. The program is to view the photographs. The Center is open from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. daily.

Faculty photographers who will be showing their works are Dr. Randolph M. Lee, associate college counselor and associate professor of psychology; Dr. Norman Milner, professor of sociology; Dr. Michael P. Sacks, assistant professor of sociology and Dr. Charles B. Schultz, chairman and associate professor of education.

Exchanging?

How about Archaeology Seminar at Lincoln College, Oxford, organized by the Association for Cultural Exchange. We are attempting to ascertain if there are enough interested students. The academic credits can be earned from participating in this low-cost program which ends by three weeks work’s participation on digs in different parts of England and Scotland.

Write now for further details to Jan Lowson, SW West 112 St., New York, N.Y. 10023, or see the Trinity office.
