English Assumes Presidency

The board of trustees of Trinity College unanimously elected James F. English, Jr., the sixteenth president of the college last June. English assumed the presidency on July 1, 1981, succeeding Dr. Theodore D. Lockwood, who had been president of Trinity since 1968.

In making the announcement, Dr. George W.B. Starkey, chair- man of the board of trustees, said, "We are delighted that James English has been chosen to lead the College in this crucial era for higher education. He brings to the position an unusual combination of talent and experience in the business and educational sectors. His intimate knowledge of the Greater Hartford area will be a particular strength to both the College and the community."

English has been vice president for finance and planning at Trinity since 1977. He has also had a long and distinguished career in the business world. A Connecticut native and graduate of the Looms School, English earned his bachelor's degree from Yale College and holds a master's in English from Cambridge University. He was awarded a J.D. degree from the University of Connecticut Law School in 1956.

English has served as president, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of the Connecticut Natural Gas Company, Connecticut General Insurance Corporation, Emhart Corporation, Heublein, Inc., and the Hartford Hospital. He is also a trustee of the Wadsworth Athenaeum. He is past president of the Connecticut Bankers Association and the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce. He is a former director of Lockwood's Corporation and the Institute of Living. He was chairman of the board of trustees of the Looms Charms School, and vice chairman of the Connecticut Board of trustees of Connecticut College. He has also served on the Connecticut Commission for Higher Education.

According to college tradition, this year's graduating class will present the Lemon Squeezer "Extracts" Class Spirit. The arrival of another school year has brought more than just students back to Connecticut's second oldest college. September has also seen the return of a tradition almost as old as the ivy-covered walls of Trinity — the famous lemon squeezer.

On Thursday, September 3, as students and faculty rose in honor at the college's annual convocation, college archivist Peter Knapp ceremoniously entered the Chapel bearing a gold-brocaded pillow upon which rested one of the school's most treasured possessions—a battered, 126-year-old wooden lemon squeezer. A lemon squeezer you say? You're not alone if you've never heard of what is supposedly one of the most popular traditions in the history of Trinity College. In fact, the majority of students surveyed were not even aware of the ancient relic.

Just what is a lemon squeezer and what is significant about Trinity's model? A hinged, paddle-shaped tool, the lemon squeezer is the symbol of class supremacy at the College. The ancient relic played a major role in extracting the juice of lemons for Trinity's customary lemon "Punch" provided at 19th Century commencement exercises held in the best of the summer.

Yet last Thursday marked the first public appearance of the revered utensil since 1969. On that day, President James F. English presented the precious heirloom to Daniel D. Cave of Clinton, CT, the first president of the Class of 1982 with the highest academic standing. Mr. Cave ceremoniously entered the chapel bearing the precious relic, while his classmates and other Trinity students stood in awe of the ancient tool.

In making the presentation, President English said, "The Lemon Squeezer is a symbol of class pride and tradition at Trinity. It is a cherished heirloom that has been passed down through generations of students. The fact that it continues to remain such a beloved tradition is a testament to the enduring spirit of our College."

The Lemon Squeezer "Extracts" Class Spirit continued on page 4
Announcements

Arts Calendar
A program of modern and mainstream jazz will be presented by members of the Hartford Conservatory Jazz Trio on September 20th, at 3:00 p.m. This concert will be the first of six concerts to be presented by the Trinity Arts Center. Members of the trio are Lee Callello on piano, Dave Samuto on bass, and Larry DiNatale on drums. Joining the trio for his concerts to be presented by The Trinity Tripod, September 15, 1981.

Duties will include coding data, skill is desirable. Psych imajor research project in psychology.

Careful attention to detail. Typing person hired must have meticulous and other research tasks. The-year-long group of individuals at Trinity who share a common sexual preference. Being gay at Trinity is not without issues that are relevant to students. With little or no support from most of the campus, CWS unable student at 4:15 pm., in Alumni Lounge. First meeting on Tuesday, September 15, at 9:00 p.m. in the Trinity Arts Center. Anyone interested in joining the W.A.A., but cannot make Tuesday's meeting, will be provided. If you are interested in joining the W.A.A., but cannot make Tuesday's meeting, please contact Beth Dempsey at Box 545.

Debate
Debating is the regulated discussion of a given proposition between two matched sides. Anyone interested in debating either formally or informally please contact Topher Brown, Box 47, 524-6870.

World Affairs Association
For anyone interested in international affairs, there will be a World Affairs Association international and organizational meeting on Tuesday evening, September 15, at 9:00 p.m. in the Washington Ballroom. Refreshments will be provided. If you are interested in joining the W.A.A., but cannot make Tuesday's meeting, please contact Beth Dempsey at Box 545.

Student Loan Changes — Effective Oct. 1
Important changes in the Guaranteed Student Loan Program which limit student eligibility will be effective for all loans submitted to the Financial Aid Office on or after October 1. Consult Financial Aid for details.

Priority Period Ends Sept. 18
Financial Aid students are reminded that the Priority Period for on-campus jobs ends Friday, September 18. If you cannot find a job, contact Kathy Mills in the Financial Aid Office for additional information and referral.

Student must be Work-Study eligible.

Wanted
Guy/Gal
Part-time position available for dependable college gal/boy to perform general office duties. Must have typing ability, enjoy phone contact, and work well with minimal supervision. Responsibilities include editing registration forms, helping in preparation of matchlists, and keeping accurate filing system.

Sterling date will be early September. Our office is conveniently located within walking distance of campus. If interested, please contact Melody at The Sharehouse Company at 527-4472.

Information — Study Abroad
For all those who are interested in considering study abroad for next term or in the future, there will be a general information meeting in Alumni Lounge on the following dates and at the following times:

- Tuesday, 15 September
- Wednesday, 16 September
- Thursday, 1 October
- Friday, 9 October

Please obtain the blue information sheet and four attachments in the Office of Foreign Study Advising (Williams 118) if you have not already done so. Each of the meetings listed above is identical to the others; a student need only attend one.

The Hartford Ballet
Joining the trio for his concerts to be presented by The Trinity Tripod, September 15, 1981.

"Mesa Espanola"
La "Mesa Espanola" se celebrara los miércoles a las 6 de la tarde, en el "White Room" del comedor. Pueden assistir todos los interesados.

Computer Seminar
Professor David Henderson, Chemistry Department, will present "An Introduction to Use of the Computer in the Laboratory," on Friday, Sept. 15, at 12:30-1:15 p.m. in Halden 110.

Math Review
Yes, there will once again be a Math Review Workshop for seniors planning to take the GRE's or GMAT this year. It will cover topics in arithmetic, elementary algebra, and geometry. The first session is Wednesday, September 15, at 7:00 p.m. in McCook 106. There will be a charge of one dollar per person for materials. Please call Lucy Deephouse ext. 369 or Karen Miller (249-4333) to obtain further information.

Research Assistant-community health agency serving greater Hartford seeks student to assist in research studies. Should be comfortable working with data. Excellent opportunity for students interested in health fields. Easily accessible by bus. Student must be Work-Study eligible.

Volunteer Services Assistant-Mount Sinai Hospital would like to hire a student to work at the information desk and to supervise and schedule volunteers for patient information services. Hours: any day, 4-5:30 p.m. Person must be able to communicate well with diverse groups, and should have interest or experience in healthcare facility. Typing helpful but not necessary. Bus and airport service available. Student must be Work-Study eligible.

Volunteer Services Coordinator-Corporation for Independent Living, a private, non-profit agency that provides services for the physically handicapped, seeks student to work 7-10 hours per week. Person will maintain current data on available housing, refer people to appropriate units, and learn housing regulations. On bus.

T.G.A.
The Trinity Gay Alliance is proud to announce that at last there is a contact sexual preference. Being gay at Trinity is not without its challenges and we talk about the issues that are relevant to students. We need support from many of those around us (including family and "close" friends) our weekly meetings and social activities planned are an ideal time to let the barriers down, stop having to "pass" and be ourselves. We are a support group for gay, lesbian, and questioning students. Confidentiality is given; contact the Trinity Gay Alliance, Box 1372 or Ext. 448, 495 for more information.

Bellman,
the concert will be saxophonist George Santoro on bass, and Larry DiNatale on drums. Our rates are much, much cheaper than the saga-shuffle, then give us a try. Box #918. If you're tired of doing the same-old routine, why not give us a try.
New Assistant Dean Of Students Chosen

by Charlotte Milholland

Over the summer, Paula Chu-Richardson, Assistant Dean of Students, was present, she is “dividing up duties” with Deputy Assistant Dean of Students. Her office is located next to Winer’s in Hamlin Hall.

Chu-Richardson is a native of Pearl Lake, an auxiliary liberal arts college in Indiana very much like Trinity. She then went on to receive her M.A. in counseling from nearby University College, and most recently to the University of Wisconsin, where she is now an assistant professor in psychology. Her work in counseling has taken her to Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and most recently to Trinity. Chu-Richardson’s office is located next to Winer’s in Hamlin Hall. She then went on to receive her M.A. in counseling from nearby University College, and most recently to the University of Wisconsin, where she is now an assistant professor in psychology.

Students. Her office is located next to Winer’s in Hamlin Hall. Chu-Richardson says that she is “on campus more than an assistant dean of students” and then as a counselor in the department of Residential Life.

Over the last year, Chu-Richardson has held a number of important appointments, including: New Assistant Dean, Assistant Dean of Students, and then as a counselor in the department of Residential Life.

College Welcomes Class Of 1985

by Mary Ann Corderman

The 465 members of the class of 1985 officially entered Trinity College last Wednesday at Matriculation. In the Austin Arts Center, Regina C. Kennedy, Assistant Director of Admission and Coordinator of Marketing, announced several important appointments. Stanley Salvatore C. Santucci, Assistant Dean of Admissions, was appointed to the new freshman class and discussed the orientation program. The freshman class consists of 248 males and 216 females. Forty percent of the students came from independent schools while sixty percent came from public schools. Traditionally, the majority of candidates come from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, and nearby New England. The majority of candidates will be “a little sharper. There were a number of outstanding candidates in the class of ‘84 that are here,” Kennedy noted, but “there are still a number of very good candidates in this year’s freshman class.”

Using SAT scores as one basis for comparison, Kennedy reported that the class of ‘85 had a larger number of candidates with scores near the higher end of the spectrum. “While the class of ‘85 exhibited a slight disparity at this end of the SAT spectrum, there was not a big drop off in quality,” he added. Of the 132 students who were admitted as Guided Studies candidates, 34 chose to enroll in the program. Guided Studies candidates are selected on the basis of academic performance at the secondary school level, their overall record, their expressed interest, and to some extent standardized test scores. “The most important factor,” according to Kennedy, “is a combination subjective/objective rating by the Administration.”

When asked to comment on the diversity of this year’s freshman class, Kennedy expressed his disappointment due to the homogeneity of the students as well as the lack of minorities. “The college can’t always attract an applicant pool that represents the diversity of students,” Kennedy explained, “but we’re going to have to work on that.” He used the analogy that Trinity is like a storefront who conducts business with the same people, and while we would like to do business with a different kind of clientele, we can’t tell the “regular customers” to go somewhere else.

In order to attract candidates from a broader spectrum of society, Kennedy speculated that the college might have to come up with some new innovations. “I would hope that there will be some sort of change over from the new orientation so that we don’t get people here who just work toward a degree and don’t use both their head and their heart,” he commented.

Kendall evaluated the class as “a class with some potential, some ability, and some people who can really play the game. People who have, those and the resources are here,” he added, and how the two coexist is what is important for the college.

“You hold your breath for each class for four years to see what they do here, what they do not do, and it’s kind of like a,” he concluded, “and that’s how you can tell whether you’ve done a good job.

Conscious-Raising Orientations Initiated

by Elizabeth Davis and Anne Carol Winters

This year, Freshman Orientation took a different approach from those of the past. For the first time, discussions of social issues and academic concerns were included.

The orientation lasted from August 30 to September 2. The first day’s activities showed little change from those of previous years. Such necessary tasks as preregistration and familiarizing themselves with the campus took up the better part of the day. In the evening, the new “85s” attended a welcoming dinner with their Resident Coordinators and Resident Assistants. The dinner speakers were Tom Hefner, President of the Student Government Association, and Don Jackson, Chairman pro tem of the Student Government Budget Committee. The evening concluded with dorm meetings and roommate orientations.

The first radical change in orientation did not occur until late the next day. After having spent the day taking placements exams and attending orientation sessions, the Freshman Seminars and Guided Studies Program, the class of ‘85 convened at dinner by Trinity’s new president, James F. English, Jr. “Killing Us Softly - Women and Advertising” was the location for a thought-provoking talk, “My Real Problems and Yours,” given by Bobby Knab, Dean of Students at Tufts University. Knab’s seminar on the subject of advertising in society at large, as well as her own experiences with racism as a subject, was well-received.

Dorm discussions followed Knab’s address, revealing various reactions from the new students. The quality of these discussions was high, evidenced by the fact that the “girl-gets-carried-away is-a-little-too-far, reluctant to prolong the evening’s activities” ever further, other sessions remained involved in ignited sessions.

The next evening, students viewed part of a film called “Killing Us Softly - Women and Advertising.” Coordinators of this aspect of orientation called for the film from among several screened. Members of the administration and ad- missions supplied a panel, which led a discussion with the audience. Two members of the film, Panelists included Debra Bergard, Paula Chu-Richard- son, Janet Curtis, Frank Kirk- patrick, Pat Miller, Cathy Mills, Gerald Mosheil, and David Wiser. Orientation was brought to a close with a talk focusing on academics, entitled “The Faculty and Their Expectations.” Andrew DeRocco and Drew Hyland offered their views of the roles and attitudes which students and faculty should ideally uphold. They emphasized the fact that students should not be afraid to take risks, or to let the possibility of failure stifle their endeavors. They also stressed the need for students and faculty to de- mand the best from each other.

Dr. Hyland stated that the new approach to orientation “taught us more week by week.”

This view was shared by the majori- ty of those involved in the day’s activities.

The shortening of orientation to four instead of seven days and the added lectures and discussions gave each day more detail. In the eyes of the enrolled Trinity community, these innovations also gave orientation a greater sense of pur- pose. It is the intent of the co-ordinators to continue in this consciousness-raising vein for future freshman orientations.

Although many freshmen could not grasp the relevancy of such issues as racism and sexism to their lives at Trinity at this early day, many found the points raised “very thought provoking.” However, they expressed their desire for a few lighter activities such as volleyball games and a dance in order to get to know one another socially.

The College is very saddened by the death of Mark Boulanger, Class of ‘82, early in June. Boulanger was struck by an automobile while he was riding his bicycle in Farmington. He was an expert bicyclist, in the summer of 1980, he biked out to Virginia and back: He was active in cross-country, and was a computer supervisor. A memorial scholarship fund in Boulanger’s name has been established; contributions may be made through the Development Office. A memorial service will be held at an early date.
by Joeanna Matzen

Those who frequent SAGA's campus dining hall may have noticed an improvement in the food service program this year. This year, the students who were the most vocal about complaints were the ones who were the most satisfied with the service. Those who were the most extreme in their complaints were the ones who were the most satisfied with the service. In a recent interview with The Tripod, Wilson promised that the present improved quality of the food and dining facilities will continue throughout the year.

Several small improvements Wilson and his managers have made include new juice dispensers, whereby they promptly went to escape with the downpour to avoid "the squeezer"; whereby they promptly were the more popular and spirited classes. Vague threats and rumors circulated for "a seizure of power" and of engaging in "an antisocialist and anti-Semitic referendum on the topic. Following the referendum, workers at the Kaz太少, palmist, the largest and iron factory in the country, favored disruption to the present order. It was called "illegal and unjustified" by the Minister of the Steel Industry. In a related action, the Soviet Union accused the Polish union of preparing to "capture" "important atomic secrets." The union denied the charges.

In a nationwide referendum, the Egyptian government ordered President Anwar el-Sadat's crackdown on political dissent in the democratic country. The measures on the referendum referred to the imprisonment of 10,000 people, the shutdown of several publications, and the removal of political activists from power. Shemuda II is the largest of the Copitic Church. The ballot simply stated, "Do you agree to the present political situation in Egypt?" Egyptians are required to vote, lack of enforcement resulted in voter apathy.

In a related incident, Sadat ordered the expulsion of American reporter Chris Harper of ABC News after the tapes of Harper's interview with an outspoken critic of Sadat's policies were seized at Cairo Airport. The interview was recorded by government agents. Referring to the expulsion order, Harper stated, "I'm really sorry this has happened. Obviously, I don't have too many examples of it." Meanwhile the Egyptian President assured the foreign press on Tuesday that there would be no censorship of its news coverage.

The Colorful Tradition of Lemon Squeezer Revised

The Class of 1857 is responsible for the beginning of the Great Trinity Lemon Squeezer. At their Class Day exercise on May 25, the Class of 1857 claimed that the Class of 1857, having access to the pre-theological student of the Class of 1955, having access to the Chapel vaults, discovered the new occupant and proceeded to pilfer the "late 40's it was once again a mechanical area in the basement of the building of the wooden paddles, simply an attempt to rightful possession of the relic.

As the squeezer comes out of retirement after more than a decade, the tradition of the squeezer has been revaluatated. Childhood of this cherished wooden object is also resurrected.

The Class of 1857, for example, had drained the students of the Class of 1853 worthy of the coveted lemon squeezer. Members of the graduating class presented it to the juniors by the graduating class, thereby stirring up a lively rivalry among the juniors for the trophy in the course of time.

Yet in 1969, the long-absent and elusive Lemon Squeezer #4 and Squeezer 5. Were the more popular and spirited classes. Vague threats and rumors circulated for "a seizure of power" and of engaging in "an antisocialist and anti-Semitic referendum on the topic. Following the referendum, workers at the Kaz太少, palmist, the largest and iron factory in the country, favored disruption to the present order. It was called "illegal and unjustified" by the Minister of the Steel Industry. In a related action, the Soviet Union accused the Polish union of preparing to "capture" "important atomic secrets." The union denied the charges.

In a nationwide referendum, the Egyptian government ordered President Anwar el-Sadat's crackdown on political dissent in the democratic country. The measures on the referendum referred to the imprisonment of 10,000 people, the shutdown of several publications, and the removal of political activists from power. Shemuda II is the largest of the Copitic Church. The ballot simply stated, "Do you agree to the present political situation in Egypt?" Egyptians are required to vote, lack of enforcement resulted in voter apathy.

In a related incident, Sadat ordered the expulsion of American reporter Chris Harper of ABC News after the tapes of Harper's interview with an outspoken critic of Sadat's policies were seized at Cairo Airport. The interview was recorded by government agents. Referring to the expulsion order, Harper stated, "I'm really sorry this has happened. Obviously, I don't have too many examples of it." Meanwhile the Egyptian President assured the foreign press on Tuesday that there would be no censorship of its news coverage.
Residents Are As Crowded As Ever

by Alison Limpitlaw

After a one-year hiatus, a housing problem reappeared on campus this year. Over the summer, Trinity was forced to revert back to its policy of turning doubles into triples in some rooms in Elton Hall. As a result, the already overcrowded five freshmen were tripled up in what is generally acknowledged to be the least attractive dorms on campus.

The THIPDAV talked to Kristina Dow, Director of Residential Services, to discover just what happened with the freshmen this year. Surprisingly enough, freshmen were tripled this year not because there were so many freshmen, but because a greater percentage of upperclassmen wished to reside on campus.

Each year, Trinity estimates the approximate number of freshmen who will enter in the fall. This year, Dow explained, the estimates for the freshman class were right on target in terms of the male/female ratio, and in terms of the number of entering freshmen.

The problem of housing arose, according to Dow, at the completion of last spring's housing lottery, where 13 women failed to receive on-campus housing. The solution procedure is this, Dow explained: to wait until summer and place people in rooms that were free for some reason or another. However, with three women without rooms, Dow says that this could not be done on this option. Accordingly, she opened up spots that were normally reserved for freshmen, instantiated the triples. This was sufficient to relieve congestion, but as Dow stated, "We've got a point now where we're as crowed as we ever could be...we have to make compromises on campus than we should.

The reasons for overcongestion are many, Dow pointed out. Roommates in Hartford have been steadily rising and most students are not able to meet the increased costs. The security of living on campus is certainly not immune to criminals, especially around Trinity. Finally, Dow states, more and more students are choosing to remain on-campus in order to be more involved in campus life.

Besides the problem of housing, the number of freshmen has not been any serious problem yet, and the majority have made the adjustment to smaller living spaces quite smoothly. Still, the housing problem remains and will have to be dealt with again next spring unless new facilities are opened or existing ones are improved.

Cheryl Ives-Smith

Ives-Smith Announces Resignation

Personal safety and security are the responsibility of both the community and the individual, and for this reason it is important to be aware of what the college Security Office provides to its students.

The Security Office offers an escort service to students wishing to travel from one point to another within the campus, between the hours of dusk and dawn. The brothers of the social clubs and service operates are Summit Street, New Britain Avenue, Broad Street and Allen Place.

According to Michael J. Schweiighoffer, Director of Student Personal Safety, there are two vehicles on campus to service the needs of the escort system. However, the campus is extensive, and the system was widely used. This year, however, it appears that utilization by students has been cut off. Schweiighoffer urges all students to take advantage of the free service because it is there for their benefit.

Another activity Schweiighoffer likes to caution students about is jogging around campus. He stresses that women should always jog in groups, and if jogging alone, there is less likelihood of something happening when running in groups. He also suggests that students stagger the hours when they run, so as to avoid the possibility of being an isolated assault.

A further security problem that develops in the library last year and Schweiighoffer expects will recur again is the theft of cash and wallets. All of them were taken from bags or pocketbooks owned by women and left unattended. Schweiighoffer reminds students to take valuables with them if they leave campus for any time.

There have been four forcible entries so far this year. Schweiighoffer advised students in the criminal gained entrance through unlocked or open windows on the first floor. Nothing that was taken has been recovered, and Schweiighoffer emphasizes that the locked door is the key to preventing any property returned if it is not claimed within a week. The name, box number, and social security number is extremely slim, Schweiighoffer counselled. They are available in the Security Office in room 112 Williams Memorial, and all students are urged to participate in "Operation Identification."

In addition, Schweiighoffer and his staff are available in the Security Office in room 112 Williams Memorial, and all students are urged to participate in "Operation Identification." Schweiighoffer, reports, and radios are being taken from them. Already one break-in has occurred this year.

The college community is certainly not immune to criminals, Schweiighoffer said. Theft of cars, and the best weapon against crime is to use the "prone of prevention."" A further security problem that develops in the library last year and Schweiighoffer expects will recur again is the theft of cash and wallets. All of them were taken from bags or pocketbooks owned by women and left unattended. Schweiighoffer reminds students to take valuables with them if they leave campus for any time.

There have been four forcible entries so far this year. Schweiighoffer advised students in the criminal gained entrance through unlocked or open windows on the first floor. Nothing that was taken has been recovered, and Schweiighoffer emphasizes that the locked door is the key to preventing any property returned if it is not claimed within a week. The name, box number, and social security number is extremely slim, Schweiighoffer counselled. They are available in the Security Office in room 112 Williams Memorial, and all students are urged to participate in "Operation Identification."

In addition, Schweiighoffer and his staff are available in the Security Office in room 112 Williams Memorial, and all students are urged to participate in "Operation Identification." Schweiighoffer, reports, and radios are being taken from them. Already one break-in has occurred this year.

The college community is certainly not immune to criminals, Schweiighoffer said. The Theft of cars, and the best weapon against crime is to use the "prone of prevention."

President English

continued from page 1

President English continued from page 1

On Higher Education and the graduate council of Yale University.

English is married to the former Lulabelle Spotted Wood Cox. They have four sons, and two daughters-

Phone 547-0263

TRIDENT PACKAGE STORE

219 New Britain Ave., Hartford, Conn.

(Connect Henry St. to corner Tap)
THE HIGH COST OF A COLLEGE EDUCATION JUST WENT DOWN A FEW DEGREES.

ANNOUNCING THREE NEW ARMY NATIONAL GUARD PROGRAMS THAT CAN HELP YOU PAY FOR COLLEGE.

If you’re like many college students, the closer you get to your degree, the deeper you get into debt. But, you don’t have to get in over your head. Not when you join the Army National Guard.

Because now, the Guard has three new programs to help you pay for college: the College Loan Repayment Program; the Educational Assistance Program, and the Enlistment Bonus Program. And you don’t have to wait for graduation to take advantage of them. You could join the Guard right now.

You see, the Army National Guard is part-time. After your initial training, it takes just two days a month and two weeks of annual training a year to serve. So there’s plenty of time left for your studies. And you get paid for every hour you put into the Guard, so you’ll have extra cash for books, lab fees, and all those other little expenses that come up.

Of course, there’s more to the Guard than money. It’s a chance to do something good for your country, as well as for people right in your own community. The Guard can give you more options in your life—and more control over your financial future.

If that sounds like where you want to be, see your financial aid officer, contact your local Army National Guard recruiter, or use the toll-free number below for complete details on how the Guard can help you pay for college. And help in a lot of other ways, too. But hurry! These special programs for college students are available for a limited time only.

The Guard is America at its best.

Call toll-free: 800-638-7600.
In Hawaii: 737-5255; Puerto Rico: 723-4550; Virgin Islands (St. Croix): 773-6438; Maryland: 728-3388; in Alaska, consult your local phone directory.

Program terms, payment amounts and eligibility requirements subject to change. All programs not available in all states.
Athanson Wins Dem. Primary by 94 Votes

by Nancy Funk

The results of the Tuesday, September 9 Democratic mayoral primary corresponded with the vigor of the campaign. Incumbent Mayor Athanson, the endorsed candidate, did win the four-way race, he did so by only 94 votes. He should have won by a larger margin, considering that he is the incumbent, and was the endorsed candidate while the other three were running as independents.

Thirman Miller, who is the only black candidate, received the second largest amount of votes. He is demanding a recount on the basis that some of the absentee ballots positions. A conservative pancreatic for the past six months.

COTTON was only 55 years of age, but Represented by both parties, Rep. Cotter was considered a moderate Democrat, he was distrustful of the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was the youngest insurance commissioner in state history. He had served on the Ways and Means Committee during the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was elected to his sixth term in office as U.S. Representative of the First District.

Respected by both parties, Rep. Cotter was considered a moderate Democrat, he was distrustful of the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was the youngest in Connecticut, William R. Cotter died on Tuesday, September 5. Cotter was only 55 years of age, but Represented by both parties, Rep. Cotter was considered a moderate Democrat, he was distrustful of the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was the youngest insurance commissioner in state history. He had served on the Ways and Means Committee during the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was elected to his sixth term in office as U.S. Representative of the First District.

Respected by both parties, Rep. Cotter was considered a moderate Democrat, he was distrustful of the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was the youngest insurance commissioner in state history. He had served on the Ways and Means Committee during the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was elected to his sixth term in office as U.S. Representative of the First District.

Respected by both parties, Rep. Cotter was considered a moderate Democrat, he was distrustful of the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was the youngest insurance commissioner in state history. He had served on the Ways and Means Committee during the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was elected to his sixth term in office as U.S. Representative of the First District.

Respected by both parties, Rep. Cotter was considered a moderate Democrat, he was distrustful of the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was the youngest insurance commissioner in state history. He had served on the Ways and Means Committee during the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was elected to his sixth term in office as U.S. Representative of the First District.

Respected by both parties, Rep. Cotter was considered a moderate Democrat, he was distrustful of the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was the youngest insurance commissioner in state history. He had served on the Ways and Means Committee during the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was elected to his sixth term in office as U.S. Representative of the First District.

Respected by both parties, Rep. Cotter was considered a moderate Democrat, he was distrustful of the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was the youngest insurance commissioner in state history. He had served on the Ways and Means Committee during the Carter Administration. In 1980, Cotter was elected to his sixth term in office as U.S. Representative of the First District.
"It's a very all-consuming kind of immersion"

On the other hand, I began to feel it was really important to contribute, to serve, and to serve an institution and a basic academic endeavor that I very much believed in, and I got great satisfaction from it.

So I did that for whatever it was, six or seven months, and then, of course, Dr. Lockwood came back and announced that he wasn't going to stay. Obviously my name was going to be on the big list, because I'd been Acting President, in five, ten years, whatever works out before I really retire, in a way that I would feel was meaningful and important. So I informed them, yes, I would be willing to remain on the list.

...discussation. And I don't take that in any way as a personal affront, because obviously I was a different kind of candidate. I'm not a true academic. While I've done a little bit of teaching, I taught for a year or two, and I've done some seminars since I have been here, I'm not a real academic or a real scholar. And I would be an unusual kind of College President.

TRIPOD: Perhaps the most obvious question to start with is, How does it feel to be the sixteen President of Trinity College? Is it all that you expected it to be?

ENGLISH: Well, of course, having been Acting President I guess I had a fair idea of what it was going to be like and I really hadn't had any ridiculous surprises.

The only real change over last year — there are really two; one is last year I never had any ridiculous surprises.

But after a while, after they (the Search Committee) collected a whole lot of names (I don't know how many), someone for the committee asked me what I thought was the right thing for Trinity, and I didn't have any idea, or any interest, or would like my name removed. And that's when the right thing for me, was to talk to my wife, and to try to decide whether it was the right thing for me. And I considered the right thing for the College if I were chosen, because if it isn't right for the College it obviously isn't right for me. It's a very proper fit. And I finally decided, after talking to her, yes, it was an unusual opportunity to have, and it was a way in which I could spend the next, whatever time I had left before I really retire. And I really don't want to have any discussions from that I knew nothing about the whole process. I just stayed away from it. So I had no real way of judging what the likelihood was of my being chosen. I really didn't. I knew perfectly well there were some other very attractive people that were being talked to, who came to the campus, because I was aware that there were meetings going on, and I could sense there were some interesting and exciting people there. But I never talked to them. So I really had no way of knowing.

TRIPOD: When the Trustees made their decision in June, were you truly surprised that you were their choice for President?

ENGLISH: Oh, yes. You know, I figured maybe I had half a chance, but it was by no means a certainty in my view. I thought it was a matter, of considerable satisfaction, from it. And I don't take that in any way as a personal affront, because obviously I was a different kind of candidate. I'm not a true academic. While I've done a little bit of teaching, I taught for a year or two, and I've done some seminars since I have been here, I'm not a real academic or a real scholar. And I would be an unusual kind of College President.

On the other hand it was clear that I had other strengths. I knew the constituency, I knew the faculty and I knew the students, and indeed the right thing for the College was to have a President who knew the students and the faculty very well, for I've always lived here, and ran the major bank for a decade. So I have those particular strengths. And on the other hand there are many things in which I am very interested in, including academic administration, and certainly research and scholarship.

So it's quite natural there should have been a big debate. My impression is that there was. But you'll have to ask somebody else, because I was the only person on campus that wasn't interested in it, and I refused to have any discussions on it.

Here I am, in any event. As I've said to others, I have to prove myself. I have no desire to know who was for me, and who was against me, because I know I am going to be faced with this.

And I'm prepared to start with a clean slate. I myself have to prove myself, and that's the way we all should be.

TRIPOD: Dr. George W. Starkey, chairman of the Board of Trustees, approved your selection in stating, "We are delighted that James English has been chosen to lead the College in this crucial era for higher education." Do you feel you are facing a "crucial era," as in your mind, is there any host pressing problems involving Trinity in the years ahead?

ENGLISH: Well, of course, the word "crucial" was George Starkey's. I wouldn't agree with it. I think sometimes we're too gloomy about the future.

It seems to me the desire for knowledge, education and of higher education, so educationally speaking, is going to be increasingly difficult to preserve that kind of heterogeneity and diversity of our student body.

But these are problems, but if anyone can get through the eighties in fine style we ought to be one of the ones that can.

There's a third problem, but I don't see it as a huge problem. But I think it's a fascinating problem, and that is the whole question of — whatever you want to call it — vocationalism, the relevance of an education in the liberal arts and sciences at a school like Trinity. Again, I don't regard this as an insoluble problem, because first and foremost I think the kinds of things we study here are the kinds of things that are going to be for me or against me. And indeed the right thing for the College if I were chosen, because if it isn't right for the College it obviously isn't right for me.
James F. English, Jr.

It seems to me Trinity students are always going to want to study math, and physics, and chemistry. They're going to want to learn the secrets of nature, if you will -- the basic theories of the natural world around us. I think our students are going to continue to want to know about basically their own heritage, and indeed that of other cultures. They're going to still want to know history, European, American history, and that of other cultures as well; their own literature; and the basic issues that are raised by philosophy and religion. And I think they're going to continue to want to study the social sciences, psychology, certainly economics, sociology. So just to me seems to be that these subjects deal with the basic human problems and issues. They're here to stay. They change a little bit with the times, but there's going to be a demand for these.

Then you look at where the kids go. It's hard to tell because a lot of students don't go to graduate school or professional school right out of Trinity. They wait a year; they work a year or two years. See half of our students ultimately end up in graduate schools or professional schools of one sort or another -- medicine, law, business, you name it. You can almost dismiss them from your worries because the graduate and professional schools will give them what they need for their careers, and we will obviously give them what they need to get into medical school. I mean, if they want a new kind of biochemistry, we'll give them a new kind of biochemistry, so to speak. But in any event, we will train people inevitably for these graduate and professional schools, and our kind of a college is exactly the kind of college where people are best trained for graduate and professional schools.

The real concern, if there is one, is for the student who doesn't want to go on to graduate or professional school. What do we want to do for the City and for the New England/New York, or Proctor and Gamble, or whatever. And I think that, I've spent 25 years in the banking industry and I still believe that a basic education in history, philosophy, chemistry, or whatever it may be is the best training for a general career in business, in business management. I think it gives them the poise, the depth, the breadth, and the ballast, if you will, in the long run to be successful in that kind of work.

So I think the whole question of people worrying about getting jobs is a real issue, too, but I do not see that as any kind of fundamental threat to our kind of institution.

TRIPOD: You seem to be a very nostalgic prescient, demonstrating this respect for the past by reviving the Lemon Squeezer, for example. Can we expect further measures, on your part, to renew the class spirit of days gone by, possibly through the reinstatement of class officers?

ENGLISH: I wouldn't want to be that specific until I knew more about the whole mechanism. I think I am a slightly nostalgic person. I like the tradition; I like the past. One of the attractive things about an institution like Trinity is its buildings and its old customs, and while one wouldn't want to overpower them, and one in time would have been there if we once at the beginning of the term, nonetheless I think they have value. We are looking at the possibility of people being drawn together by common interests; among them it seems to me is the common interest. And I think the one reason why I, when I was Acting President last year, moved Convocation, which had been outdoors before that, into the Chapel. While it's very crowded, it just seemed to me that it brought people together in that wonderful way. In a sense it symbolized a kind of a common bond among people, and I continued it this year.

TRIPOD: What motivated you to bring in the Lemon Squeezer at this time?

ENGLISH: I've been thinking over the summer what kinds of things I wanted to talk about at Convocation. I think it was Professor McNulty who pointed out to me that there was a lot of discussion and a lot of concern about the whole question of quality of life, student life on campus, and that a number of different groups were taking initiatives with respect to it -- the faculty, the Board of Fellows, and so on. I had the feeling it would be useful to kind of pull together a bit, as I tried to in that talk.

While this was going on in my mind I was reading Professor McNulty's History of Trinity College, which I'd never read before, and suddenly I became aware of this tradition, the effect related to the social life of the College. The Lemon Squeezer was to be given away to the class that was contributing the most to the quality of life, academic and social, of the College, and I think I saw here a way to hand a little symbol of this. It will be interesting to see whether others will pick up on that way.

When it came to my attention that the old Lemon Squeezer had been discovered, I thought, my goodness, what a marvelous coincidence, and that's why I did it.

TRIPOD: You were quoted as saying, "Trinity combines acknowledged academic distinction with an unusual, urban location. The interaction of these qualities would make it a completely different place in the coming years." How do you intend to stimulate such interaction between Trinity and its community during your tenure?

ENGLISH: The interconnection of Trinity with the City I see in at least two different ways, and maybe three. One aspect of it involves of course our obligation to the good city. We obviously aren't in the best part of Hartford, nor are we in the worst. But there are lots of things that can be done to improve the neighborhood. Many of them exceed our economic power to do much about, but nonetheless there are some that we can do and indeed have. We might want to work together with the Institute of Learning and the Hartford Hospital through S.I.N.A., and we have the program to encourage people to buy a house that we would like to see us continue to do that sort of thing and do even more of it. And beyond of this instant fan of course I see our location in Hartford as having many advantages for us from the standpoint of being able to interrelate with the other institutions of higher education -- the University of Hartford, and so on. I think that we can continue to draw, as we do, on the cultural institutions of Hartford -- the Athenaeum, the Symphony, the Ballet, the Stage Company -- all of these things.

I believe in the whole Internship Program very heartily. But I go a little beyond that. To me one of the most fascinating things is to try to relate the kinds of discussions and perceptions that we derive from our work in the liberal arts, with respect to individuals, with respect to society, and so on; on to American society as it really is now, with all its warts and all its problems. I think we can be for us in the nature of the laboratory to permit us to do that. I hope we will be able to build even more bridges than we have in the past with the social service agencies, with businesses, so that we can test out our thoughts and relate what we're learning here to the classroom life in quite a typical twentieth century city.

Hartford is a very unusual city in a way. Hartford is a small city, but there's a heck of a lot going on in Hartford for its size. It doesn't think of being very big in the world, with the exception perhaps of Zurich, Switzerland, that is Hartford's size, and has the number of large national and international business corporations in it that Hartford has. It's extraordinary.

TRIPOD: How innovative a President do you intend to be?

ENGLISH: My style tends to be rather laid-back and quiet, but I'd like to try to deliver more than I talk about. Maybe it's my background. My feeling is I hope that I will be opportunistic in the sense of being able to take advantage of the interesting opportunities that come up for this College. I think that there will be lots of them, and I hope they'll be very exciting ones, to the sense, entrepreneurially in doing.

On the other hand, it's difficult to say in advance what they're going to be. I think what we're going to have to do is wait two or three years and see if we've been able to do a few things.

TRIPOD: Tell me a little bit about your personal life outside of Trinity. One of your hobbies is woodworking; what are your other interests?

ENGLISH: Well, I like to read. I like to hike in the woods. I'm not a big mountaineer type like Mr. Lockwood but my wife and I like to hike. We have a little house down on the ocean, on a harbor in southeastern Connecticut. We like to go and watch the boats go back and forth. We paddle a canoe around the Mystic River estuary, which is great. I like to go on other people's sailboats, but not for very long. I'm not a big sailor. I like to watch sailboats, but I like to putter around in a small boat.

We have quite a big family. My wife, in particular has lots of families. We spend quite a lot of time at family gatherings. And of course I have four young adult kids, and they tend to come and go. The two girls (Margaret and Alice) are now married, and three of the four are engaged in academic work of one sort or another. Two are in graduate school (Margaret and James III) and one is a senior in college (William), so it's fun to see them and hear what they're doing.

My life is pretty full. I don't have huge amounts of spare time. I will have less time, because there are more things to be done evenings. I am still involved in quite a few committees and boards and things outside of the College. I'm in the process of cutting back on some of those. I find them interesting, and they're good contacts for the College, but that takes time.

“My style tends to be rather laid-back and quiet”

TRIPOD: Do you have any closing remarks, as our new President, that you would care to mention?

ENGLISH: To me, a key element, and the thing that excites me the most about the interesting opportunities that we hope for this College is the element that has continuity. The student body does come and go, but the faculty has continuity. The quality of the faculty and the quality of the Library are in many ways the things that ultimately constitute an institution of this sort. I think of course that we have an extraordinarily rich library collection for a college our size, and we have a remarkably able and I think very dedicated faculty. I very much look forward to working with them. I think that, in many ways, is the most appealing aspect of these coming years.
A New Look

It always seems that the first Tripod editorial of the new school year brings out a fresh start, and an impressive call for a outlook for the faculty, students, and administration of Trinity. Traditionally, autumn, in an academic sense of the word, is looked upon as a time of renewal.

This editorial is no exception; however, we feel we have our work cut out for us this semester.

Take a moment to look around you. We believe that for the first time in recent memory such an editorial is truly justified. Just look at the changes that have taken place in such a short time! A new freshman class has arrived, of course, and experienced, faculty members, and the administration, including a new (and badly needed) Assistant Dean of Students. Saga has redecorated the dining hall, and the consciousness among the student body is that the quality of the food has greatly improved over past semesters. In other words, Saga finally got its act together.

Additional changes are adding to this new look on campus. The College is at last acting upon the serious issues concerning the quality of life at Trinity, addressing such problems as its relationship with the fraternity. It has shown concern, moreover, for heightening class spirit, through the implementation of the Lenox Square amplification, as well as in its recent drive for combining the spirit of awareness with a newspaper recreation organization program.

And of course, this new look is reflected in the upcoming installation of an English, Jr., as our new President. The Board of Trustees should be commended for selecting a candidate of English's stature, knowledge, and experience. He is, in fact, the right man for a college in a time of change, and a warm and detailed understanding of this institution, gained during his four years as Vice-President for Finance and Planning. We wish him well.

Finally, not to be left undone, the Tripod is also adding to this new look through the addition of several new features, designed to enhance the enjoyment and awareness of the reader. New columns, on such topics as world affairs, Trinity Press, Sports, and Science, and a classified ad section will be available for use by the College community. Finally, to inject a healthy bit of whim into the College community, we will publish every two weeks as a way to show that the faculty and the administration have a good sense of humor, our "Bantam Baby of the Week" segment.

"Change is in the air, and the expectations of past Tripod editors are being realized. It's an exciting time, regardless of the fact that it remains to be seen how effective these changes will be. But for now, however, just sit back and marvel at the new look on campus.

ConnPIRG and $2: What Happens?

by Lynda Gallo

If you're wondering where your $2 ConnPIRG fee goes, and people do ask us to explain, here's a little explanation of the things we're doing with it. ConnPIRG—the Connecticut Public Interest Research Group—is a student funded and directed organization that's organized on four campuses besides Trinity: Its goal is to teach students how to organize and fight for the rights of citizens.

The way ConnPIRG does that is to combine student idealism and classroom skills with a fulltime professional staff. No organization can fight against a powerful company like SNETCO and its appliance company's proposal is $20 for each call, rip off by unscrupulous; law that will keep you from being ripped off by unscrupulous We've requested that the DNP, deny the SNETCO request, and send them back to the drawing board to come up with a more equitable plan. Several years ago, a ConnPIRG research report showing that students were rarely informed of changes; the report was used to help stop a SNETCO proposal to charge $20 for each call, rip off by unscrupulous.

And if you've got a consumer complaint, drop it in Box 6000. We'll send it to the UConnPIRG Consumer Center, where trained student volunteers will expedite the solution. You won't be the only complaint we receive, by the way. When Mike Boughulski couldn't solve 'em, he sends them to UConnPIRG tool.

Bantam Baby of the Week

This week's Bantam Baby is one of the top administrators of Trinity College, and recently made headlines all over New England. He has changed residences in recent weeks, owns two greyhound dogs, and washes out his own coffee cup every day. Who is he? Answer next week.
Commentary

Dangerous Thoughts: Molesting the Moral Majority

by Kate Mayers

Todd Dagres stood in front of me and Carl Rapp looked behind. Neither one acknowledged me or answered my smile. We were all busy worrying about our rooms and unpacking and when our parents were going to leave. I remember thinking how funny it seemed to have to know a lock combination for the bathroom.

The three of us are friends now, and I've finally mastered the locks about these tiny covered buildings. It's my turn to help out the fresh- men as they fumble at their doors and when our parents are going to leave. I remember thinking how funny it seemed to have to know a lock combination for the bathroom.

Welcome to Senior Year

by Kate Mayers

I feel old next to their ingenuousness. I have weathered the storm; the sparks that I see in them have evolved into a strong flame for me. How can I tell them to appreciate the newness or explain how quickly semesters fade into history? I feel like a much older person, appreciating her each time she passes and realizing how much I don't know. I unpacking and when our parents are going to leave. I remember thinking how funny it seemed to have to know a lock combination for the bathroom.

Sophomore year arrives as quickly as summers dissipate and then you don't stay able down the long walk—you strut and smile, singing everyone you know, feeling comfortable about your surroundings and relieved that you're a freshman no longer. You walk through the SAG like with confidence and you remember to save your receipts from the future.

As a junior, the lifestyle seems cramped, confined within the black iron fences. Too many pretzel rods and Ramona's birthday parties, and too much gossip in the library. Some take off for other schools or other continents, some get bored, and some just hang in the library. Some take off for other schools or other continents, some get bored, and some just hang in the library. Some take off for other schools or other continents, some get bored, and some just hang in the library.

A different attitude pervades the senior mind, a new kind of ex- citement permeates the atmosphere. This is it. And perhaps, finally, while the threat of the real world will occupy the sidelines, we can appreciate Trinity.

There are three classes, seminars, football games and parties fill my memory. Three years of late night exams, Springsteen jams, and brutal exams inhabit the pages of my journal. Three years of personal challenges (some successful, some not) inspire me onward. Only after three years do I feel prepared.

It took me six semesters to realize how much I don't know. I have three quarters of the road to the sheepskin and only now do I feel ready to begin.

College is a kind of bridge. You can't go home again and the world will hit you from the other side. Enjoy the rainbow because the lemon squeezer will be yours soon enough.

The Tripod welcomes and encourages letters to the Editor. All letters must be signed by the author, whose name will be withheld upon request. Letters which are in poor taste or libelous will not be printed. All letters must be typed and double-spaced. Deadline is 5:00 p.m. Saturday. Please deliver all letters via campus mail (box 1310) or to the Tripod World Headquarters in the basement of Jackson Hall.

Dramatic Thoughts:

September 15, 1981, THE TRINITY TRIPOD, Page 11

Letters Policy

The Tripod welcomes and encourages letters to the Editor. All letters must be signed by the author, whose name will be withheld upon request. Letters which are in poor taste or libelous will not be printed. All letters must be typed and double-spaced. Deadline is 5:00 p.m. Saturday. Please deliver all letters via campus mail (box 1310) or to the Tripod World Headquarters in the basement of Jackson Hall.

Dramatic Thoughts:

September 15, 1981, THE TRINITY TRIPOD, Page 11

Letters Policy

The Tripod welcomes and encourages letters to the Editor. All letters must be signed by the author, whose name will be withheld upon request. Letters which are in poor taste or libelous will not be printed. All letters must be typed and double-spaced. Deadline is 5:00 p.m. Saturday. Please deliver all letters via campus mail (box 1310) or to the Tripod World Headquarters in the basement of Jackson Hall.

Dramatic Thoughts:

September 15, 1981, THE TRINITY TRIPOD, Page 11

Letters Policy

The Tripod welcomes and encourages letters to the Editor. All letters must be signed by the author, whose name will be withheld upon request. Letters which are in poor taste or libelous will not be printed. All letters must be typed and double-spaced. Deadline is 5:00 p.m. Saturday. Please deliver all letters via campus mail (box 1310) or to the Tripod World Headquarters in the basement of Jackson Hall.
The Atheneum is practically a work of art itself, with its Gothic facade.

by Cathy Marona

Attention all culture buffs and art aficionados: the Wadsworth Atheneum is beginning its new season with a flurry of intriguing exhibits and lectures. From September 29 to November 22, the museum will be exhibiting "The Signing of the Declaration" (a 1776 painting of John Winthrop's "Great Wall of America"), which is a giant mural painted to commemorate the anniversary of the American Revolution. There are many representatives of the Egyptian, Greek, and Roman periods. The museum is also proud in its lone serapeum, and the tour guide pointed out the advantage of having only one mummy: "She's more special that way."

The tour continued to a series of huge Revolutionary War paintings by Col. John Trumbull, including "The Signing of the Declaration," a different version of the one appearing on the Two Dollar bill. After that appears an excellent collection of Baroque art, which contains works by Rubens and Van Dyck. The Atheneum also has a major exhibition of French impressionist paintings, but that section is currently closed for renovation. In the galleries of Ancient Caldes, there are many sculptures and drawings to the museum, and Jackson Pollock, Stuart Davis, and Roy Lichtenstein are also represented.

The Atheneum has so much more to offer than what has just been mentioned, such as a collection of German porcelain figures, handcrafted furniture, and many other fine works of art. Perhaps the most fascinating thing of all is the fact that the Atheneum was the slightly overweight and moonstruck woman called on a law-school alumni to attend a dance at a painting by a favorite artist, or to buy a potter at the gift shop, go to the Wadsworth Atheneum. It will be memorable.

Hartford’s very own art museum, the Atheneum is practically a work of art itself, with its Gothic facade and its varied mixture of architectural styles within. To be found are works of art from different periods and locations. Art there are many representatives of the Egyptian, Greek, and Roman periods. The museum is also proud in its lone serapeum, and the tour guide pointed out the advantage of having only one mummy: "She’s more special that way."

The tour continued to a series of huge Revolutionary War paintings by Col. John Trumbull, including "The Signing of the Declaration," a different version of the one appearing on the Two Dollar bill. After that appears an excellent collection of Baroque art, which contains works by Rubens and Van Dyck. The Atheneum also has a major exhibition of French impressionist paintings, but that section is currently closed for renovation. In the galleries of Ancient Caldes, there are many sculptures and drawings to the museum, and Jackson Pollock, Stuart Davis, and Roy Lichtenstein are also represented.

The Atheneum has so much more to offer than what has just been mentioned, such as a collection of German porcelain figures, handcrafted furniture, and many other fine works of art. Perhaps the most fascinating thing of all is the fact that the Atheneum was the slightly overweight and moonstruck woman called on a law-school alumni to attend a dance at a painting by a favorite artist, or to buy a potter at the gift shop, go to the Wadsworth Atheneum. It will be memorable.
Conduct Hartford's History with Architecture

by Elaine Stampol

One of the most unique aspects of Hartford is its architecture. Architecture is a visible example of the past, and Hartford's many structures reveal much about the three hundred year history of the city.

The Hartford Architecture Conservancy (HAC) has grown to preserve the architectural heritage of Hartford. For example, HAC have published a three volume survey of Hartford's architectural and historic preservation: "The Neighborhoods" which includes an index of old buildings in Hartford. HAC has also published a three volume survey of Hartford's architectural history and development in "The Architecture of Hartford" which is based on the发作 of a three hundred year history of the city. Mr. Grant has a Masters Degree in American Studies from Trinity College and has recently written a book on the Trinity College Chapel. He has also been giving walking tours of Hartford for the six-week course on Hartford architecture.

HAC has been giving free walking tours of Hartford from May through September for many years. At present, rather than viewing different landmarks every week, HAC will concentrate on five different neighborhoods in the city. Each of these will be explored in the course of the summer. The first tour of the week will examine the history and development of Hartford's architecture. The themes reveal much about the three hundred year history of the city. Mr. Grant feels that Hartford is a good model for other cities because its architecture emulates the history of the past three centuries. Furthermore, studying the architecture of Hartford will help the public understand other cities and see cities more positively.

The course will run on Tuesday evenings, September 15 through October 30 from 7:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The Richardson Building is one of many sites of interest in downtown Hartford.

The course will not approach the architecture just as architecture, but it will look at the building in the context of how the building functions and why it is important to the city. Mr. Grant feels that Hartford is a good model for other cities because its architecture emulates the history of the past three centuries. Furthermore, studying the architecture of Hartford will help the public understand other cities and see cities more positively. The course will run on Tuesday evenings, September 15 through October 30 from 7:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The fine art department at Trinity is under the direction of Dr. Michael Mahoney. The faculty this year consists of George Choplin, "the nail upon which the whole thing revolves." He has visited several prestigious institutions in a continuing and enhancing world, and thus it is necessary to keep up by continuously changing the faculty. This provides the artists with time to teach and experiment, and the students with exposure to different styles and forms of art. Exhibition notices will be posted throughout the year in the fine arts lobby in the fine arts center, so be sure to keep up with the activities and exhibitions. The shows will be changing monthly on a monthly basis.

Writing in Mirrors of the Self

by Sarah Shelley

"We are standing on the Lake Michigan shore north of Chicago. Vast inland sea the no color of a sea in a negative, shudding to long smooth slate-gray slopes, to a steel-gray wave line. With a brush that paints on the gray rock an indescribable blue shell: mixture of turquoise and mother-of-pearl."* From "A View from the Tuvalu" by Thalia Cheremoni-Selz

Thalia Cheremoni-Selz, Trinity's new writer in residence, discovers and extracts the essence. She acknowledges that a sense of belonging and contentment with oneself is difficult to accomplish, and yet a critical necessity for every individual. It is clearly evident in both her literary and teaching endeavors, where her unique qualities of introspection and humor are successfully incorporated.
The Ducks are Happily Splashing in Pre-Season Warm-Up

by Mike Meim

This year Trinity College will witness an explosive combination of talent, illegal moves, and women, from a reorganized waterpolo team. They are determined to win not only the New England championships, a feat performed in 1979, but the East Coast Division II NCAA Championships as well. Not only are the players dedicated to each other, but they have the skills, experience, and a bagful of dirty tricks with which to win. Are these idle boasts? Neither of the coaches, Dave Pike, or Mike Merin, think so.

After a tough season last year, which eliminated them from the Easterns and left the Ducks in third place in New England, they expect to bounce back. It's essential to recognize that last season's problems are this year's assets. Lack of experience, the 1980 team only started two seniors, forcing the rest of the Ducks into action. This year, five starters will return to do battle with the deviant characters on the opposition. With these veterans, they expect to develop a more comprehensive and effective strategy. Recently, however, a duckling complained, "I don't know what kind of strategy we use, all they've taught us so far are illegal moves."

Returning for the Ducks are All-New England veterans Mike Merin, Chip Lake, and Lincoln Collins, as well as John Peabody, Kyle Parrow, Ed Kaplan, John Moeserlind, Mike "Boater" Bronzino, Liz Brennan, Gib "Junior" Rescoppo, and last year's goalie, Lance "D.O." (Don't Know) Choy. The team hopes that returning veteran, Dave Pike, will cut his fingernails this year and avoid being ejected from any more championship games. John "Hondo" Peabody and Kyle Bronzino, Liz Brennan, Gib "Junior" Rescoppo, and last year's goalie, Lance "D.O." (Don't Know) Choy. The team hopes that returning veteran, Dave Pike, will cut his fingernails this year and avoid being ejected from any more championship games.

Players who have yet to survive a season, Ed Kaplan, Dave Rod- ney, Michelle Parsons, Tim "Slick" Raffis, Dave "Magpie" Magford, Bob Anderson, Chris "Red" McCarthy, Ken Foster, and Luc "Toutmister" Helson, will get their kicks back soon.

The Ducks Five Man Tourney, now rechristened as the Five Person Tournament, will be at Trinity's own little pond on September 25th and 26th. This tourney will put the lowly of Amherst, Williams, URI, and Godforsaken Iona College against the mighty ducks. The opposition's high-pitched squeals will goad the team into tougher play and menace their ferocity. The team was so psyched that they demanded two days of pre-season practice from coaches Pike and Merin. Their opener will be against either Westfield State or the animals of "Zoo-Mass" later this week.

"But wait," you scream, "Are these women on your team?" "Why, yes," they respond with a sly smile, "there are the best on campus." Five quite feminine, yet sturdy players, are upholding women's age-old demand for equality. Though somewhat threatening to the egos of "Fast" Parrow, these ladies have learned the game quickly. Trinity's debut of a women's polo team is capably led by Liz Brennan. She, a full-fledged Duck, has proven herself last year and is threatening the starting positions of her male counterparts this year. The women will play alongside the other ducks as our coed team progresses to the championships. However, they will also schedule their own matches. Brennan was recently quoted "I can't wait to pluck the feathers of those Smith tadpoles." She hopes to schedule Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Williams and perhaps the UNH women. All three captains have challenged the Trinity community to produce four more female players. Coach Merin is hesitant to believe that Trinity women have what it takes to become Ducks. Prove him wrong!!!!!!

A representative of the Fuqua School of Business will be on campus Tuesday, October 6, to discuss the Duke MBA Program. Interested students may obtain further information by contacting the Office of Career Counseling.
Netters Hope to Bounce Back

by Stephen Gellman

The women’s tennis team hopes to improve last year’s .300 record as the return of Anne Phister from a year at the University of New Brunswick N.J., makes up of students from England made up of students from England. Phister has stepped into the number three, three singles after playing five last year. Under the six singles, three doubles format, it is depth that almost always proves pivotal in a sport. It is in this respect that the team has to work cut out for them in this season.

The possibilities of this team having what Earl Weaver would call "deep depth" are evidenced by the standing of some of last year’s letterwinners. Sue Green has moved up from first doubles a year ago to number four singles this fall, but Christine Johnson and Lisa Lynch have both dropped due to the strength of the new members of the team. Johnson will be playing six singles after playing five last year, while Lynch has fallen from sixth singles last year to third doubles this September.

In the endocrinology, bitterness, putteing the returnees are Allouyun variety and J.V. squads which will increase familiarity. Before this time, hard work and enthusiasm will prevail.

Optimism Surrounds Field Hockey Camp

Through the J.V. and Varsity field hockey teams have not been clearly determined yet, the enthusiasm and preparation of players for the upcoming season is extremely talented and optimistic about this year. In the twenty-two people selected for the team, coach Robin Sheppart saw talent and form each of the fifteen freshmen and eighteen upperclassmen. The team is promising for this fall, and in contrast to the 1-1 record in soccer, it is other year’s team is young. Although all the players are very skilled, the team has not had an all-American performer in Lisa Nolan, and Suzy Schwartz perhaps dominate the scenario with their exceptional skills.

The season started September 23rd at the Smith Jamboree. The first game of the day was a victory against M.I.T. Annie Methison scored the goals. The last game of the day was lost to Williams, 1-0. Both games were won by 4-0 margin.

Tradition Prevails

continued from page 16

The season’s players will have their work cut out for them in order to uphold a third place New England finish, accompanied by a 9-1 record in soccer. The strength of boys and girls together at Smith, while the other teams are a very strong this year.

Coach Sheppard feels that the combination of talent is even stronger this year. The six singles after playing five last year. Under the six singles, three doubles format, it is depth that almost always proves pivotal in a sport. It is in this respect that the team has to work cut out for them in this season.

The possibilities of this team having what Earl Weaver would call "deep depth" are evidenced by the standing of some of last year’s letterwinners. Sue Green has moved up from first doubles a year ago to number four singles this fall, but Christine Johnson and Lisa Lynch have both dropped due to the strength of the new members of the team. Johnson will be playing six singles after playing five last year, while Lynch has fallen from sixth singles last year to third doubles this September.

Harriers Prepare to Hassle Opposition

The harriers’ home course, which is located on the perimeters of the Trinity campus, will feature Connecticut College, Eastern Connecticut, and Albertus Magnus competing against our girls. The harriers’ home course, which is located on the perimeters of the Trinity campus, will feature Connecticut College, Eastern Connecticut, and Albertus Magnus competing against out girls.

The harriers’ home course, which is located on the perimeters of the Trinity campus, will feature Connecticut College, Eastern Connecticut, and Albertus Magnus competing against our girls.

The harriers’ home course, which is located on the perimeters of the Trinity campus, will feature Connecticut College, Eastern Connecticut, and Albertus Magnus competing against out girls.
Sports

Varsity Heavyweights Sail at Henley Regatta

by Major W. D. Painse, USN

On June 20, 1981 the Trinity College Men’s Varsity Crew (Varsity Heavyweight Eight; Lightweight Eight, and Straight Four) departed for England to compete in the most prestigious rowing event in the world, The 13th Henley Royal Regatta. The regatta was started in 1839 in Henley-on-Thames in England, and has been run every year, excluding the war years.

The Regatta consists of 17 events, including the first appearance of women in the Regatta. Trinity competed in three events. The heavyweights: Ellen Soffin, Andy Aiken, Mike Smith, Steve Morris, Bill Finke, Bryan Elliott, Jason Smith, Danny Brodshov, and Andy Stephenson. Competed in the Thames Challenge Cup with such crews as the British National Lightweight team (Leader Club), US Pre-elite Boat (Charles River BC), Yale, many British crews and a boat from South Africa. The other Trinity boat, the lightweight, was the straight four which competed in the Visitors Challenge Cup and included two heavyweights and two lightweights: Edan Calabrese, Scott Bowden, Dave May, and Louis Renuelt.

Henley is unlike any other regatta in that they race 2200 meters rather than 2000m, and only two boats race at a time instead of seven. They race for 20 minutes, a course which is a straight ladder, so that racing goes on for several days with boats eliminating each other at a time to advance to the next round of racing. On the first day of racing, the Trinity Heavyweights met the crew from Lady Margaret Boat Club in Cambridge. From the start T Trinity Oarsmen took command with a time of 2:00 minutes at the Barter (1/4 mark), and 3:04 at the Fawley (3/4 mark). They defeated L.M.B.C. by a Henley margin of 3 lengths, but 4 lengths. Their winning time was 7:14, which put them tied for the second fastest time in that event thus far.

The next Trinity victory came from the lightweights who defeated Manchester University by 4 lengths. They too brought home a few impressive times: 2:05 barrier, 2:34 Fawley, and 3:24 at the finish time of 7:36. The straight Four had a tough time with a seeded Lady Margaret who defeated them and went on to finish tied for third with Goldie BC.

On the second day of racing with one rower feeling ill, the Trinity Lights met the Thames Rowing Club for a very tough match. The Trinity crew was down at the boater with Thames crossing with a 1:48. At the Fawley Trinity had fought back to cross first with a 1:38. From the start it had been a great cat and dog race with Thames squeaking by to win by a foot with a time of 6:54, the fastest of the day by 14 seconds. It was a disappointing loss for the Lights who rowed an excellent race and fought hard with the British Oarsmen.

That night the evening held an exciting race by defeating the Princeton Crew by 5 lengths, with a time of 7:22. Once again the Trinity Oarsmen controlled the race from start to finish.

Saturday left only the Eights to compete for Trin at the Henley Royal Regatta. The Heavyweights had advanced now to the third round of racing where they faced another British crew, Fitzwilliam College of Cambridge. And once again they defeated their opponents handily with times of 1:55 barrier, 2:17 Fawley, and with Fitzwilliam more than 4 lengths back, a finishing time of 6:56. Let them to face the University of Washington on Sunday, the final day of racing. Of the four crews left in this event only one was not an American crew. Trinity College of Dublin, who were to race Yale.

On Sunday morning the Trinity reign ended in an unexpected victory by U Wash, with a time of 7:27, and by 15 lengths. Yale defeated Trinity College, Dublin, continued on page 18.