Ferris Scholarship Endowment Created

A new scholarship fund for Trinity students with financial need has been established by George M. Ferris of Washington D.C., a 1916 alumnus and a trustee emeritus of the College. The fund is expected to reach $1 million.

Announcement of the George M. Ferris Scholarship Fund was made (Oct. 22) by Trinity President James F. English, Jr., who noted that "increasing our ability to provide student financial aid is one of Trinity's top priorities." When fully funded, the Ferris Scholarship Fund will be one of Trinity's largest endowments for financial aid.

"Few colleges can boast of alumni as loyal as George Ferris," English said. "Our athletic center was named for him in 1967; he English said. "Our athletic center was named for him in 1967; he English said. "Our athletic center was named for him in 1967; he created an endowed professorship in our economics department in 1981. George Ferris' love of academics and athletics, and his abiding concern for undergraduates, have been abundantly demonstrated through his contributions and service to Trinity.''

Mr. Ferris has made an initial contribution to establish the fund and expects "to build this endowment to a million dollars or more." Eventually, between 10 and 20 Ferris scholars will be named each year.

Peter C. Ammiriti, a sophomore from Solebury, Pennsylvania, has been named the first recipient of a Ferris Scholarship. Ammiriti, who intends to major in classics, was named to the Faculty Honors List last semester and was awarded prizes for excellence in Latin and Greek. He is a member of the varsity soccer team.

SGA Passes Motion To Create TCAC

by Floyd Higgins
Senior Staff Writer

The SGA has, with last Tuesday's approval of the Trinity College Activities Council, taken a new path in the planning and direction of Student Activities. It is one which, to a greater extent than ever before, involves students directly in the creative and planning processes.

Essentially, the TCAC revolves around a ten-member board consisting of class representatives, an RC/RA rep, Cultural rep, IFC rep, at-large rep, SGA. rep and President. This body's primary function is the coordination and smooth scheduling of the diverse and numerous social activities on Trinity Campus.

Director Student participation occurs in the four satellite groups known as Project Units. Each unit covers a defined area of activities (Pub., Dances/Entertain., Cultural Events/Lectures, Special Events). Membership is limited to twelve students per unit, but is open to any student able to collect 30 signatures. Inside these units would occur the idea-generating, brainstorming and planning leading to the events themselves. Students, then, with creative ideas for student function and/or a knack for organizing such affairs or just want to get involved, would be highly encouraged to get on the project unit of their choice.

Observer Reflects Conservatism

by Mary Ellen Higgins

Last Monday many Trinity students were surprised to find copies of the Trinity Observer, a fledgling conservative newspaper, lying in their mailboxes.

Editor-in-Chief Michael Duffy, who originated the paper, wrote of the paper's purpose on the front page: "we will express ourselves intelligently in the arena of ideas and attempt to convince others of our view."

The monthly paper is intended to provide a forum for conservative viewpoints on national and international issues, as well as some campus issues.

The Observer is not intended as a rival to the Trinity Trippod, "according to Executive Editor Jane Melvin. "We think there should be a place for conservatism at Trinity," she said.

The paper is among 35 newly formed conservative student newspapers in America, according to Duffy, which reflect a new conservative sensibility on college campuses across the country.

The first issue included the results of a student poll conducted by the Observer, partially to see if there was a conservative base of support for the paper. Although the newspaper proclaimed Conservatism as having the "right" idea, only one-third of those polled identified themselves as conservatives. A majority (39 percent) identified themselves as moderates and 28 percent classified themselves as liberals.

Managing Editor Lee Coffin, who wrote the article interpreting the poll, said that he called the poll results "a feeling of conservatism" because "a lot of un..."

Conference Looks At Women, Social Change
by Jane Melvin

"Women, Religion and Social Change," the conference held at the Hartford Seminary two weeks ago, provoked questions on several issues. By addressing topics from women's role in the formation of various religious traditions to the place of women in society, the conference stimulated thought in all areas.

The conference opened with a session called "Women and the Formation of Religious Tradition." Cheri Minn-Ram, President of the Hartford Seminary, opened the conference addressing the role of women in Judaic, Islamic, Christian and Buddhist thought.

Judith Baskin of the University of Massachusetts opened the conference with her main point in her talk on the role of women in the formation of rabbinic Judaic tradition. The separation and disqualification of women as human beings resulted in "a profound diminishment of human spirit."

In the second part of the conference, the speakers moved to various topics on the subject of "Social Transformation, the Role of Women and Religious Institutions (section 1)". Speakers included Sandra Robinson of Duke University, who spoke of myths, rites and symbols of transformation in the Hindu tradition, Kosalnd Hackett from the University of Calabar on the subject of the role of women within the context of Nigeria's religious plurality, Louise Ramsey from the Commonwealth Center for Independent Historians regarding the Hindu-Buddhist tradition in India and the role of women in the Buddhist tradition. The conference closed with the issue of contemporary roles of women in religion and society, and the need for a new feminist direction in the religious studies field.

Saturday's sessions started with a segment called "Women and Revolution." In it, the speakers addressed the roles of women in the revolutions of China, Nicaragua, Zimbabwe, Iran, and the more general realm of Muslim thought. Trinity was well-represented in this session, with history professor Michael Lentz and Johnnnetta Richards joining William darrow of Williams College, Pauline Turner from Amma Maria College and Yvonne Haddad to address the gathering.

The conference proved highly successful in promoting thoughtful discussion in all areas.

President Announces Redefinition of Positions

The Trustees of the College have appointed two members of the administration to the rank of Vice President, effective immediately. Constance E. Ware, formerly Director of Finance and Treasurer, will be Vice President for Finance and Treasurer. Associate Professor Glen Weaver of the History Department, formerly Director of Development, and Robert A. Pedder, will be Vice President for Development, effective immediately.

The Trustees have also designated Andrew G. Delcoro, Dean of the Faculty, as Chief Academic Officer of the College and Thomas A. Smith, Vice President of the College, as Chief Administrative Officer. In the absence of the President, the Dean of Faculty will have responsibility for matters relating to the faculty and academic programs of the College and the Vice President of the College, for matters relating to student life and administration.

In his letter announcing these appointments and clarifications President English stated that he was "grateful to them (the four aforementioned officers of the College) for the help they have given me and for their valuable service to the College. We are fortunate to have people of such remarkable ability at Trinity. By recognizing their contribution and clarifying our organizational structure, we will be better able to implement the ambitious long range plans which we are now developing."

President English has invited a Roman Catholic nun to be an honorary associate of the Trinity College Chapel. She will be the first Roman Catholic in the chapel pulpit.

Margaret Farley, a Sister of Mercy of the Roman Catholic Church, is a professor at the Yale Divinity School on sabbatical. She is to preach in the chapel on November 6. While at Trinity, Sister Farley will be under a heavy writing agenda. She is a nationally published writer on Christian ethics. Her other special interests are women's studies, sexual ethics and medical ethics.

Not an employee of the college, Sister Farley is here in an honorary relationship. She will be able to meet Sister Farley at a dinner in the small dining room in Mather after the service on November 6. Students not on the meal plan can obtain tickets for the dinner from Chaplin Hall. After the dinner, the Women's Center is sponsoring a reception with coffee.

Professor Glen Weaver of the History Department spoke on the Italian Presence in Colonial Virginia Wednesday evening in McCook Auditorium.

The farm lasted for a few years and such Virginians as George Washington and Lord Dunmore, royal governors, took shares in the project. Mazzei later became a member of the Committee of Correspondence and was an avid patriot. He wrote columns in the Virginia Gazette under the pseudonym of "Furioso." In 1777, the Virginia assembly asked Mazzei to go to Tuscany and try and secure a loan. Mazzei was then absent from the colonies until 1783.

Perhaps one of the greatest Italiophiles in America was Thomas Jefferson. His estate in Charlottesville, Monticello, regularly employed and lodged Italian gardeners, cooks, and musicians. According to Weaver, Italian cuisine in Monticello was renowned throughout the area, particularly for its vegetables. In a letter to Richard Henry Lee in 1778, Jefferson remarked that if people from the "Mediterranean," i.e. Italy, had settled in Virginia instead of people from the "North," agriculture would have been much more successful since they were familiar with the climate.

Grenadan Invasion Isolates U.S. Diplomatically

by Peter Sylvestre

The United States intervention in Grenada, while resolving the internal strife and removing the Cuban presence from the Lesser Antilles, will probably create more problems than it solves. The tension between long-term U.S. foreign policy and the invasion itself will have solved. Already U.S. relations with NATO and Latin American states have been strained by the events. The U.S. objective for Grenada was more than just a sustained presence, for what-ever reason, will only lessen the credence of the U.S. foreign policy. Expect future objections to the "Brezhnev Doctrine" in Europe and Soviet military intervention in general.

The United States can assert that they did not overthrow an established government, for the Grenadan army under General Austin had already done so, last week killing Marxist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and three other cabinet officials in the process. Given the high level of instability and the corresponding "vacuum of governmental authority," the U.S. was justified in intervening if order to evacuate its 1,000 citizens who were in Grenada at the time.

There is no legal basis, however, for the second U.S. objective: a continued effort to "restore democracy" to Grenada. The intervention is in apparent violation of Articles 15, 17 and 18 of the charter of the Organization of American States (OAS) and was condemned as such by most of the OAS membership. This in itself will undermine any U.S. legal position, for previously the United States had placed great emphasis on OAS support to justify interventions, notably the 1965 Dominican affair. The American claim that the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States (OECS) charter is more applicable than the charter does not hold much validity as the U.S. is not a member of OECS. (OECS was unable to attain the unanimity required by their charter, and, therefore, issued no statement on the invasion.) The U.S. claim that the intervention was necessary to forestall any further chaos cannot be denied. However, has often used that same assertion (one repeatedly rejected by the U.S.) to legitimate their interventions in bordering states.

Diplomatically, the U.S. has found itself isolated. Many South American nations have denounced the invasion. Salazar of Bolivia, along with non-NATO ally Yugoslavia, has condemned the U.S. permanent council voiced the fear that, "Today it was Grenada, tomorrow it could be another country." Most of the NATO states have also had strong misgivings. Britain, and Canada, France, along with non-NATO ally France, all declined to participate in this schismatic society. Britain, and Canada, along with non-NATO ally France, all declined to participate in the multinational force. France even voted for a UN Security Council resolution, similar in wording to the Afghanistan resolution, calling for the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Grenada. The British Conservative government was clearly embarrassed by its inability to persuade the U.S. not to invade a British Commonwealth state, just as the Reagan administration was chagrined over its inability to persuade Galtieri not to invade the Falklands in April 1982.

East and West will prove difficult at the very least, for a western style democracy has never functioned properly in this schismatic society. Grenada, throughout its history, was stratified into distinct social classes, sharply divided along ethnic, religious, occupational, and geographical lines. Before the universal suffrage act of 1951, Grenada was run by the European upper and Asian middle and professional classes which comprised about 10% of the population. The remaining 90% were descended from African slaves, who today comprise the small tenant farmers in the hinterland. In 1951 these small farmers were given the right to vote. A labor leader, Eric Gairy, mobilized them into a dominant political machine, the Grenada United Labour Party (GULP) by manipulating the traditional animosity between the urban educated elite and the majority tenant farmers. Eric Gairy, with this natural majority, dominated Grenada from 1951 to 1957, 1961 to 1962, and 1967 to 1979 when he was ousted by Maurice Bishop. The only effective restraint upon Gairy under a Westminster style parliamentary government was the British Colonial Office, given in article 11 of the charter of the Organization of American States (OAS) and was condemned as such by most of the OAS membership. This in itself will undermine any U.S. legal position, for previously the United States had placed great emphasis on OAS support to justify interventions, notably the 1965 Dominican affair. World Outlook

The central cause of all this unrest is a growing rift between Mugabe's ruling ZANU party (Zimbabwean African National Union) and the opposition ZAPU Party (Zimbabwean African People's Union) of his onetime rival guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo. The origin of this rift can be found in the make up of these two parties. The ruling ZANU party is primarily supported by the Shona tribe, of which Mu- gabe is a member, and which is the largest single tribe in Zim- babwe. The Opposition ZAPU Party is overwhelmingly sup- ported by the minority Matabele tribe, of which Nkomo is a mem- ber. The Matabele tribe tribe is concentrated in western Zim- babwe in an area known as Matabeleland. Thus these two parties have cause Zimbabwe to be di- vided not only politically but also tribally and geographically.

The lack of societal diversity which would have enabled an ef- fective check-and-balance system to exist. After 1974, Gairy was in es- sence a legalized dictator. With the support of his Gulp political machine, he was able to dominate every single election. He also re- sorted to terror and brutal methods to complete crush his opponents. Gangs of "mongoose men," under his employ roamed the countryside, beating up his opponents while official corruption ran rampant. Maurice Bishop, leader of the 1979 Marx- ist coup and whose father was beaten to death by a "mongoose gang," concluded that only force would remove Gairy from power, as Gairy's political machine was too entrenched to defeat demo- cratically.

After the March 13, 1979 coup, Bishop turned to Cuba as a state to emulate in national develop- ment, as Cuba was perceived as having severed all "neo-colonial" linkages. The increasing Soviet and Cuban involvement, however, coupled with a severe eco- nomic downturn, increased the level of public dissatisfaction with Bishop's regime. Gen. Hudson Austin, who apparently favored, even closer ties with Cuba, over- threw Bishop on October 12, 1983. A week later, a crowd of 4,000 freed Bishop which was fired upon by the Grenadan troops and fifty others. With the resulting turmoil, the U.S., at the request of the OECUS, intervened last week.

acted on the same consistent pol- icy: reactionism. Instead of taking the troops to a nearby Israeli hospital, they flew the in- assisted to West Germany so as not to anger the Arab countries. In a situation with more than 225 people dead and many more in- jured can we not put aside our nationalistic convictions and think in humanitarian terms? Are we "preserving de- mocracy" by killing Marines on a four hour flight? Here is the greatest piece of evidence that the President is using these clichés simply to mask his true motives: acting according to other coun- tries' interests.

Possibly we can justify the in- vasion of Grenada, just as we can justify the Euro-missiles, but the decision to have the troops remain in Lebanon is inexplica- ble. With our laissez-faire foreign policy decisions, a loss of national pres-

Putting Social Life In The Right Arena

The completion of a brand new Mather as a campus social center is now upon us. To accompany it, the Student Government Association has instituted a brand new planning board, the Trinity College Activities Council, for actually voting for the representatives you feel will be most effective in the offices. On the next level, students can participate on the highest level by actually serving--effectively, with dedication--on the Council. Students must voice their opinions, suggestions and even criticisms to the agents of the Dean of Students and so has many of the same powers as the Dean of Students to render disciplinary action. When their duties become elective from students? First, she has the network of 55 RC/A's and their representatives in the Student Government, and as such, has a responsibility to encourage students to become familiar with and to utilize these avenues. The TCAC, based in Mather, can provide the framework. And this is to urge students to take initiative and actively and enthusiastically participate.

That's not so hard. At the most basic level, it involves actually voting for the representatives you feel will be most effective in the offices. On the next level, students must voice their opinions, suggestions and even criticisms to the representatives -- who in turn must listen. The effectiveness of the TCAC requires good communication between the Council and its constituents. Students can participate on the highest level by actually serving--effectively, with dedication--on the Council. Students can voice their opinions, suggestions and even criticisms to the agents of the Dean of Students and so has many of the same powers as the Dean of Students to render disciplinary action. Asmus Clarifies Position

To the Editor:

Please let me correct your report Mr. Davis' assumptions about my views about student voice and planning of Mather Activities. In the Tripod of Oct. 25, he did not hear the point I was making and made it sound as though I was disregarding student participation in planning. I drew together a group of students in the first week of school this fall in response to complaints about lack of decor, rectitude and variety in the Student Government Planning Board activities. The SG/A has since adopted a compromise plan, incorporating the basic theme of my proposals to improve student participation. The SG/A has not yet acted upon my recommendation that the SG/A be required to assist with Mather operations. It is now up to the SG/A to help put the board in place.

Sincerely,
Wayne Gorlick-Asmus

Give A Gift To A Senior

Dear Student Body:

I am writing to ask your support for a special gift to our senior class. The University Committee to Collect Gifts for Senior Citizens has been organized to collect 10,000 gifts for Senior Citizens, to be distributed in early December. Through the work of this committee, many forgotten elderly in convalescent homes, rest homes, and nursing homes will have a bit happier holiday. We at Trinity College can help the committee raise this large number of gifts. We have set a goal of 500 gifts as a campus goal. Now is the time to get involved because the Yuletide Committee has already collected a campus of 500. If some dedicated volunteers serve on the committee, we can exceed our goal and reach out to many needy people. If you are interested in organizing this project there will be a meeting on Nov. 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the Cave. If you don't have time to participate in an organizational fashion, the donation of gifts such as scarves, colorless, hats, gloves, canned goods, leg warmers, lotion, magnifying glasses, baskets of fruit, other unwrapped gifts would be greatly appreciated. A box for these items will be placed in Mather, outside the dining hall, Nov. 10-17. Please remember to show your care and concern by donating a gift in this Give A Gift To A Senior project.

Thank you.
Sincerely yours,
John G. Bonelli

On the Women's Center
Part-time Head, Part-time Center

To the Editor:

The recent resignation of Pat Miller, Coordinator of the Women's Center is symptomatic of the general unresponsiveness of the Administration to the needs of women on this campus. Ms. Miller has left her post because of a frustrating, ongoing battle over her salary and over the extent of her position at the College.

In the first place, she has repeatedly been refused a full-time job as Coordinator. Her duties in the Center are many; there are enough to fill an entire work week. It is impossible for such jobs to be done in half the time. In order to compensate, Ms. Miller has put in more hours than she has energy to spare, and her health is being put at risk.

Such exploitative conditions have existed since the opening of the Center in 1977 and have resulted in a persistent pattern of turnover in coordinators. Part of the reason that the Women's Center has existed since the opening of the College has been the persistent pattern of turnover in the coordinator position. The rapid turnover in the coordinator position has resulted in a lack of continuity in both women's programmatic and service efforts. In this case, the job responsibilities of the coordinator are not being performed on a full-time basis.

Therefore, the Student Government Association recognizes the need for the Trinity campus for a full-time coordinator of the Women's Center. We strongly urge you to consider this a priority in your consideration of the budget for this academic year. It is a pressing need of the entire Trinity community.

On the Trinity Observer
Open House and Fractious

To the Editor:

After reading the first (but only the first) edition of the Trinity Observer, I have maybe changed my mind a bit about the smug and fractious quality of this publication. To begin with, I do not misunderstand you as being one who simply cannot abide any idea that diverges from his expressed reality within its pages. Rather, it is the narrow-minded and tolerant views which are most bothersome.

Having views and opinions which are considered "controversial" is one thing. Brandishing one's self as a conservative and then adopting views or printing views simply on the basis of that denomination denies open-mindedness and, more importantly, common sense. Could it be that we are completely thoughtless made the Observer Editors have fallen into? Notice how casually they label the "conservative" and "liberal" worlds as expendable. Notice how both the article on draft registration and the ignorant article on abortion deny human conscience.

Ultimately, everything in the Observer represents a token point of view; the Editors are intent on projecting "conservatism," and thus they possess our ability in arguing as such, their blinkered labeling makes one wonder if they have any idea of the meaning of the word "conservative." I was very pleased to be asked to be the chairperson for the 1983 United Way fund drive. This year, the United Way and the Combined Health Appeal have joined their campaigns. The literature, of course, specific references the increasing costs of the United Way and Combined Health Appeal services and the dollars expended in this area from federal monies. Through our gifts we, and others in the Greater Hartford area, make up that important difference.

One of my dreams is this scene: it is April 14th and I am sitting home writing a check to the I.R.S. and attaching it to a letter and asking for the dollars to be allocated. That has not yet come true nor is it likely to come true for the foreseeable future. However, this year the United Way and Combined Health Appeal have given me an opportunity to do just that. We can donate directly from our gift on the back of the pledge card. While it is not necessary to donate all or even a portion of your gift in this manner, it is important to know there is a choice.

I and my children enjoy and utilize the services of the Salvation Army Day Care Center, a United Way funded agency. I am delighted to be able to designate, of my gift to a program that will have direct benefits for children, parents and the entire community. Furthermore, it enables me to be aware of your ability to choose in this year's campaign.

Last year, through the combined efforts of this student body and this generous community, Trinity did itself proud. Join with me this year and I am sure your generosity will offer you so much to many.

Thank you very much,
Wayne Gorlick-Assistant Dean

Asmus has handled the Stooges with high-handed arrogance, deceit, mockery, and low-down underhanded conniving, word-mincing trickery. His "duck drops pied pipe" on October 11, was a blatant insult to the stooges, and an insult to Asmus’ own honor. It was a slimy dishonorable trick, reminiscent of the weasels who fled to Canada to avoid the draft.

His lack of honor in dealing with this critical because I believe that an anarchist with any pride of view; the Editors are intent to deal with the stooges, and an insult to Asmus’ own honor. It was a slimy dishonorable trick, reminiscent of the weasels who fled to Canada to avoid the draft.

Ian and Phil Have a Problem: Grenada

by Ian McFarland

On October 16, the Marxist guerrilla movement in Grenada, led by Minister Maurice Bishop, was overthrown by the army, which seems to have been intent on forming a government more strongly aligned with Cuba and the Soviet Union. In 1983, the US invaded Grenada in order to take control of the island. It is still unknown whether the US invaded to take control of the island, but also to eliminate a threat to the US. It is certainly a debatable situation, but one thing is clear: the US does not have advisors, troops and bases in Grenada. This is because the governments of Grenada have never had any say in the matter.

Another justification for the US invasion of Grenada is the presence of large numbers of Soviet advisors and Cuban troops on the island, as well as the near completion of a large airfield. This is certainly a defensible position, but one thing is clear: the US does not have advisors, troops and bases abroad. How many complained when it was the US that invaded Grenada (the day that the Marine troops were diverted to Grenada) that the US was interfering in the internal affairs of Grenada? The US was not diverting troops to Grenada because they believed that the Grenadan people were being oppressed. The US was diverting troops to Grenada because they believed that the Grenadan people were being oppressed.

The point one must remember throughout all of this, is that the US invasion of Grenada was not only to safeguard the lives of American tourists, but also to eliminate a potential destabilization of Nicaragua. No one serious about any excuse for Soviet behavior in Poland on the grounds of preserving "credibility" with the rest of the world. The point one must remember throughout all of this, is that the US invasion of Grenada was not only to safeguard the lives of American tourists, but also to eliminate a potential destabilization of Nicaragua.

The US cannot be accused of interfering in the Grenadan government, what can we be guilty of? Many people have claimed that the US invaded Grenada because there really was no one in Grenada to resist the US forces, but the Grenadan people have never had any say in the matter.

When I first came to Trinity, I was disappointed to learn that there was no humor magazine. I was sure that a school with as rich a tradition as Trinity would have some publication to rival the Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell, Columbia and the like. I was right. There is a student publication that was started by Kurt Kusiak. The Spectator. You heartened my faith in Trinity students as you have met the invasion with a kind of sarcasm. The Grenadan people have never had any say in the matter.

The Spectator is a laugh riot. We will explain ourselves in due course. To laugh is to survive. We are genuinely impressed with the work of the staff of The Observer. AIESEC An Opportunity To Gain Economic Experience because you really understand the character of the people. It is much different from being a student or tourist in that country. You are able to understand the foreigner’s attitude toward work.

"Relationships and friendships developed because people knew I was an active participant in the working economy. I had a different respect for the Greeks and a chance to appreciate how warm the Greek people are," she stated.

Peck admitted, "there were problems in terms of differences and discomforts but I found myself to be flexible enough to adapt to the circumstances. I learned a great deal on my own initiative about banks, the Greek economy and Greek people and culture."

She feels that too few Trinity students are aware of this valuable opportunity, commenting, "I only wish more Trinity students in particular and more American students in general could have the same opportunity that I had."

Maria Sparagna also took advantage of the unique experience provided by AIESEC through working and living in Spain outside of Barcelona. For two months during this past summer she worked in the customer service department of a Spanish bank and took part in some of its different projects.

Reflecting on the experience, she said, "it was a lot of fun and I was able to see some of the culture their way. I can’t say that there was a lot of learning but I got a chance to see how people live, work and to talk to people and listening to their impressions of this country."

The experience gained by AIESEC Trinity members in dealing with business corporations is both important and practical. "Not only can you learn about foreign business, but by writing and going to firms around this area, you can learn about corporations in general-how they work and how to get things done. Through the AIESEC organization itself—its meetings, seminars, conferences and general work—you can learn even more about the way business operates," Sparagna stated.

Reflecting on the whole experience, she said, "My whole involvement in AIESEC has helped me grow and learn as a person both intellectually and academically. It has given me much more confidence. The cultural experience was certainly worth it. Now I feel that I have a better idea of my perspective of life."

While the AIESEC at Trinity has the resources of a group of over 15 students, its office, an adequate budget from the school, and occasionally some tax-free funds donated by corporations, one asset it can always use more is student involvement. Trinity students are the ones who gain the most but also the ones who must put the most into the organization. "I would like to see a solid base of support both in the Trinity community and in the area in general, but this is up to the students themselves," admitted Sparagna.

The Right Stuff Has "Right" Idea

by John Shiffman

This is the way documentaries should be. Instead of being like a drawn out semi-factual docudrama television mini-series, The Right Stuff brilliantly mixes actual newsreel footage of the Mercury 7 astronauts with pathetically realistic dialogue and special effects to make the film one of the best bets of the year. The movie is especially enthralling to a generation like ours which grew up in the Apologogue with little knowledge of the events that led from Chuck Yeager's historic breaking of the sound barrier in 1945 to John Glenn and Scott Carpenter's orbiting of the earth in 1962.

This is an all-American movie that is full of those Pat Butunon and Dave Crotzer heroes we seem to lack in the 20th Century. The heroes of the film do not, as many of our sports idols do, try to attain a measure of glory, but are for service to their country. In an opening scene, test pilot Chuck Yeager, an Indiana Jones without the Spielberg gloss, is asked how much he'd charge the government to fly the experimental X-1 plane designed to attempt to break the sound barrier. Yeager refuses an offer of $150,000 payment, in- teresting that it was his job as a serviceman, to fly the plane. Not only is Yeager successful the next morning, he does it in white, sans ribs. In a later scene, a NASA official asks an aide what the Mercury 7 astronauts are being paid. He replies, "$238 a week."

There has been extensive discussion about this movie and the help it may give Democratic presidential candidate John Glenn. Although the political fallout remains to be seen, Glenn is almost too positively locked upon in the film. The all-America marine from the Midwest with his quignu attitude begins to get off his after a while. During a press conference for the newly selected Mercury 7 astronauts, Glenn played very nicely by look-alike

Ed Harris, answers the question, how you and your new commitments? "My wife and I had one, says he with that stupid boyish grin of his as the other astronauts snicker. "And by golly, my kids are behind me 100% too!"

One of the features that makes this documentary work is the docudrama work is the brilliance of use of space. A dash of situation comedy here and a flash of the audience there keep Help The Right Stuff from falling into the theme of the space program being one of special people, not special machines. The film was used as a vehicle to relieve the immense pressure that surrounds each historic event. For example,

Alan Shepard has a serious problem with his space suit and he has to go for the gold. (Hey he has a very well put together human interest story about the men (and their wives) and their families in space. Although the film starts out a bit slow, actually feels he is in line with Force Brando or Cape Canaveral rooting chuck Yeager or John Glenn on with a greater sense of personal and private pride. For those who would wished to be judged. Next to his fine performance many of the other characterizations paled.

This production was well done, but didn't have a specific task to perform. His dialogue was well executed; we couldn't help feeling that the audience was most impressed by Festa and Woods

the image we expect of Don Juan, her appearance and mannerisms fit of William Sharpe and Matthew well wrought lazzi were the antics of the pious servent who is appaled for Don Juan to overcome. The visual aspect of the film was strengthened by this however, when it comes to using the audience which the rising and falling stage set an effective tone for his character,

Juan will be playing

November 3-6 at Austin and Trinity. made him alive; this vitality was due to his near flawless timing and carriage. Robert Palter (Don Louis- Don Juan's father) was, because of his authentic seniority to his role, it was refreshing to see a member of the faculty involved in a student activity. These external factors in addition to his acting ability brought about the power to his perfor-manship.

After her magnificent perfor-ance as Antigone last year Suannah Cliff's embodiment of Donna Elvira was disappointing:

Her first appearance was dramatic form provided too glaring a contrast to the fabric of the play to that point. She later recovered somewhat, of course, but was never again in the final scene. Here she was much improved, aided in part by the role itself.

This production, in spite of minor problems, provided a thor-

ush. He had fulfilled the goal of being a meaningful commentary on life at Trinity. Don Juan will be playing

November 3-6 at Austin and should be a part of everyone's program for it is free with the performance pack.

Sensuous Colors:
by Elaine Stampfal

The current Alumni Exhibition, which will be in Widener Gallery through November 13, presents two very different types of work by artists Ellen Burchenal ‘78 and Thomas Osgood ‘77.

In Burchenal’s work, the surface of the canvas is loosely constructed of strong, thickly painted brushstrokes in which color interaction plays an important part. For example, “Jeremiad,” which uses swirls and strong brushwork on the legs of the birds. Osgood again uses large masses of color, and the almost jagged contours of the legs and the placement of them on the screen makes of the legs of the birds, Osgood again uses large masses of color, and the almost jagged contours of the legs and the division of the screen, create a dynamic composition that is especially exciting in combination with the vivid colors. Osgood’s work as a whole, is warm, solid, and sensuous.

Women’s Soccer Splits Final Two

by Kathy Rowe and Leslie Pennington
Senior Sports Writers

The Trinity women’s soccer team brought their season to a close with a 7-4-1 record after defeating UHart on Wednesday and falling to Keene State on Saturday. Against UHart, the Bants got off to a slow start and did not assert their style of play until late in the first half but still came away with a 2-1 victory. Cynthia Hunter, assisted by Karen Orczyk, put in the first goal seven minutes before the end of the half. At the start of the second half, UHart managed to make their only tally of the game. Then Tri put up a good effort in the first half but was unable to score. Keene State led 2-0 at the half. The host second goal came with six minutes left in the half on an indirect kick. In the second half, the Bants scored twice within 15 seconds to put the game out of reach. At that point, the Bants began an excellent game as they were matched against Keene State’s leading scorer. The game came to a close with a score of 5-0.

Men’s Cross Country Victorious At Clark

by Thomas Swiers
Sports Staff Writer

Last Saturday at Clark, the men’s cross country team came in first with a near perfect score of 19. Coast Guard was second with a score of 49, and Babson was third with 86. Clark, the host team brought their season to a close with a 7-4-1 record after defeating UHart on Wednesday. Last Saturday at Clark, the men’s cross country team came in first place in the meet with a time of 31:18 on the six mile course. Dave O’Donnell, Doug Williams, and Joe Wire tied for sixth place with a time of 32:29. The Bants ran “some of their best times of the season. It was the best overall team performance, Woods Fairbanks and Greg Orczyk fired the last goal in off of a penalty kick by Susan Moss. Overall the victory was a result of the excellent offensive and defensive transition created by the Bants. Saturday, the Bants faced the most difficult game of their season against 13th ranked Keene State who came into the game with a 12-0-1 record. Trim put up a good effort in the first half but was unable to score. Keene State led 2-0 at the half. The host second goal came with six minutes left in the half on an indirect kick. In the second half, Keene State scored twice within 15 seconds to put the game out of reach. At that point, the Bants began to fall apart. Laura Gouch played the Bants on an indirect kick. In the second half, Keene State scored twice within 15 seconds to put the game out of reach. At that point, the Bants began to fall apart. Laura Gouch played the Bants a good game as she was matched against Keene State’s leading scorer. The game came to a close with a score of 5-0.

Clemmenson Gets A Good Bounce

The ball finally found Tom Clemmenson’s hands, and symbolically it was the turning point of a day that had seemed to go off the rails. "I came all the way across the field and Joe threw the ball to the right end," explained Clemmenson of the faky touchdown that put Trinity ahead 21-14. "I was deeper than he was. Their free safety touched it, hit another guy and I just happened to be standing there and it fell into my hands."

In a sense, the ball came to Clemmenson a lot Saturday. He had two catches, five runs for 51 yards, and two kick returns for 59 yards. Before Saturday, the senior wingback had averaged just under 10 yards per catch. But Saturday, he averaged 35.3 yards per catch, and missed two games. Nevertheless, he's still handled the ball 72 times. The yield was only 324 yards. There were murmers that Clemmenson's concussion was the real reason for his poor season. However, whenever one looks back two years, Clemmenson's part in the Trinity attack seems small.

So Clemmenson has started at wingback throughout the year. However, Clemmenson is not the center of attention. Tim McNamara and new Mike Donohue are the primary receivers and get open so often that Joe Shield very seldom has to look to alternate receivers. Ned Ide gets the ball when the Bantams run and Nick Bordieri returns punts. It was his decision whether to play again. "I've been playing since last year in third grades and a few games if there is any way I'm going to show up."

"It's normal to want to get it (the ball)," notes Clemmenson. "I'm in on all the patterns and I block which is just as important."

Clemmenson is an excellent blocker. He continually sniffs out the defense, allowing Ide to take runs around end. Against Williams, Clemmenson made contact with the defender and then knocked the corner back off his feet to get Ide into the end zone. But blocking is not what Clemmenson came to Trinity to do. And when he says "You've got to wait your turn," it sounds strange because he only has two games left in his career.

So Tom Clemmenson will end his football career with a number of Trinity return records. Further the Bants will have won at least 24 games in his four years. In the end, maybe that's not too bad.

Men's Soccer Falls
To WCSU In OT

The men's soccer team came out in pre-game warm-ups on Tuesday morning to throw blue home uniforms but despite the change in apparel, the result was still the same. The Colonials won their third straight game.

Playing their second overtime in the last three games and their fifth in the last 11 days, the Bants dropped a 3-1 decision to Western Connecticut State University. The fast-colonialism displayed above was enough to chip in the box. It proved costly as WCSU's Shenandoah scored one minute later. Trim failed to clear the bouncing ball from the box and as Blackman came out to cut down the angle, Shenandoah popped it him to make it 2-1.

In the second 10-minute segment, WCSU scored as Shenandoah scored off a pass from Alex Taylor.

With the game now seemingly decided in its favor, WCSU returned its chipsy play and a fight erupted with 1:22 left. WCSU's Kevin Shay hit Vera Meyer from behind and was ejected for his actions. However, WCSU's Kevin Shay was ejected for his actions.

The Colonials scored the first goal but showed some signs of panic in the ball's last minutes. It looked as though the Colonials would lose when they scored their second goal with 1:23 left. WCSU's Kevin Shay hit Vera Meyer from behind and was ejected for his actions. However, WCSU's Kevin Shay was ejected for his actions.

"We just couldn't match their aggressiveness," said Bant coach Robie Sheats. "We got into overtime and it (the schedule) turned to us. We just ran out of gas."

Trinity looked sluggish most of the first half but showed some signs of life in the ball's last minutes. It looked as though the Colonials would lose when they scored their second goal with 1:23 left.
Trinity Gets A Break, Whips Coast Guard

by Stephen K. Gellman
Sports Editor

The football team’s 42-20 win over Coast Guard Saturday, fit right in with the theme of the season; the offense moved almost at will, while the defense played well enough to win.

Despite all of Trinity’s yardage, 506 yards in total offense, it took a fluke play to put the Bantam up for good. With the score tied at 14-14 and Joe Shield dage, 506 yards in total offense, while the defense played well and the Bantam offense facing four and five at the Bears’ 17, coach Don Miller elected to go for the first down.

Shield rolled right, avoided a tackler, and threw to tight end Steve Donaghy at the ten. The ball was deflected by one Coast Guard defensive back to another defensive back, who touched the ball into Trinity wingback Tom Clemmensen’s hands. Clemmensen turned and lunged into the end zone.

“I’ve had a chance to make a few of those (tip catches) and they’ve all fallen; a couple of inches from me,” noted Clemmensen.

The one that did travel those few extra inches seemed to momentarily stun Coast Guard.

Trinity started their next possession at their own 42. Shield hit Clemmensen and Mike Doetsch to move Trin to the hosts’ seven with three minutes left in the half.

Coast Guard went to a 6-1 goal line defense and Trinity was prepared. “Steve (Okon) comes out into the flat and the middle of the backfield is the only one left to try and cover him,” said Shield of the play that resulted in a rather easy looking touchdown.

The Bantam offense gave a good thing when they saw it, and faced a tough last stand. Five minutes into the second quarter, Okon reversed out of the backfield heading the Bantams led 35-14 with 1:34 left in the quarter.

The Bears continued to throw the ball again and again and again. The Bears threw 65 passes on the day and racked up 407 yards through the air. The hosts only had two yards rushing.

“The frustrating thing is that people just keep passing at us,” continued on page 15.

Field Hockey Falls To Smith In Finals

by Elizabeth Sobkov
Assistant Sports Editor

How did the women’s field hockey team get to the NIAC finals this past weekend?

Going into the last week of the season, the Bants had compiled a 9-1 record. The only loss was handed to the Bants by Tufts. The Jumbos dominated both losses of the 1983 season.

On Saturday, at Tufts, the Bants were pitted against undefeated, third ranked nationally, number one NIAC seed, and defending NIAC champions, Tufts.

Tufts scored first, midway through the first half, five minutes later in a scramble after a penalty corner, Bonnie Adams rifled the ball into the goal from the circle. The half ended tied.

Halfway through the second period, Ginny Biggar stopped the ball in off a free hit by Amy Waugh. The fall was 2-1, Trinity.

In the match, the Jumbos were awarded 2b penalty corners. Meanwhile, Trinity goalie Pam Ingersoll recorded 16 saves. Offensively, the Bants took five shots, converting two into goals. The defense was key to the upset but Sheppard felt “we need to be tighter and not make so many mistakes inside the circle”.

Sunday’s final resulted in a disappointment. Beating the number three seed Bates 1-0, the Smith Unicorn was the face.

The first half was slower pace than usual as Trinity took only two shots and Smith took nine. The only goal of this period came at 30:43. A scramble in front of the Trinity goal and a hit by Nancy Grimm put the Unicorns up by one.

In the second half, Trinity was awarded with eight penalty corners. At 22:24 on a rebound from his hands, (1)Tom Clemmensen comes down with the deflection and (4) and goes into the end zone.

Tennis Plays At NE’s I

by Julia McLaughlin
Sports Staff Writer

“All after riding to high all season, I was using with disapointment,” commented women’s tennis coach Becky Chase in the aftermath of last weekend’s loss to Tufts by one-half point at the New England Championships.

The Bants were defeated in Division III play and beat Tufts in the regular season. But when it came down to the Finals of the tournament, with three matches playing against Tufts, the Bants lost the crucial matches.

But because of excellent performance, Trinity was invited to compete in the Division I New England Championships. Played at Harvard this past weekend, the tournament was a chance for individual Trinity players to do well.

Trinity competed only in the singles and therefore did not place well as a team, but number one singles player Claire Slaughter made it to the finals of the consolation draw. Slaughter was defeated in the first round of the main draw 6-2,6-0 by the second seeded player from Boston University. She then went on to win easily in the first two rounds of the consolation tourney before losing to a player from University of New Hampshire, 6-2,6-4.

“I played all right, but three matches in one day was really taxing,” remarked Slaughter.

Sue Greene won her first match in the main draw. Greene played her usual serve and volley game quite successfully in her first match, but suffered a hard loss in the second round, 6-4,6-0. Her third match of the day was her first in consolation play. Usually the number five singles player, Maria Rosenfeld stepped up two matches to play at number three. Considering her move up, Rosenfeld turned in a good performance and played two tough matches. Rosenfeld lost in the first round 6-4,6-4.

“It was a good, close match in which Maria played well,” commented Slaughter about her teammate's match.
