New Format Set For Registration

Last spring the faculty approved a new set of procedures for registration. As these changes go into effect for Spring Term registration in January, this is to clarify what the procedures will be. The registration format is as follows:

1) On Initial Registration Day (Monday, January 16), students must check in at the Washington Room between 9:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Copies of the new, three-part "Course Schedule Form" will be distributed, along with instructions about how they are to be used. Attendance is required; no late registration forms will apply for students who fail to appear.

2) A final schedule for the term may be completed-in consultation with the academic advisor-at any time during the two-week Add/Drop period, but only when the student is certain there will be no further changes.

3) Final Registration and Ad- vising Day will be Tuesday, Jan- uary 31. All advisors will be available between 9:00 a.m. and noon in order to complete and sign—jointly with each advis- ees—remaining "Course Schedule Forms" not reviewed during the two-week period. Classes will be suspended on this day, although science labs may be held in the afternoon at the instruc- tor's discretion.

4) Final Registration will be held in the Washington Room on

Sexual Harassment: An Intolerable Abuse of Power

by Kenneth Herz

Editor's Note: This is the first installment of a two-part series on sexual harassment.

Mary, a college senior, has been compiling research for a year-long thesis directed by Profes- sor X. Professor X, a male, has encouraged Mary to continue her research and has compli- mented her on her academic per- formance. By April, Mary is in the proc- ess of completing her thesis, which is a requirement for her major and a necessity to meet graduation requirements. Mary needs some guidance as to how to write her conclusion, so she makes an appointment to see Professor X during his office hours, a few hours before their appointment. Professor X, after their meeting and suggests that Mary meet him later that evening at his apartment for a glass of wine, so that they can discuss her research. Because their sup- port had been positive up until this time, Mary was not suspi- cious of the situation. However, upon arriving at Professor X's apartment, it became apparent that Mary's research would not be discussed. Mary thought of an excuse to leave the building, but she was very distressed and disturbed over the incident. In this scenario an example of sexual harassment? Or is this just an uncomfortable situation? The definition of sexual harassment adopted by Trinity College, as expressed in the 1983-84 Hand- book, on pages 74-5, is: "any offends, requests for sexual favors, or other conduct when:

1) submission to the conduct is either explicitly or implicitly a term or condition of an individ- ual's employment or evaluation of academic performance;
2) submission to or rejection of such conduct by an individual is used as the basis for employment or academic decisions affecting that individual and/or;
3) such conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfer- ing with an individual's work performance or creating an im- mitating, hostile, or offensive working environment."

Referring back to the scenario while Professor X did not make any explicit sexual advances, his conduct was unprofessional and had definite sexual undertones. This conduct created an intimi- dating, hostile, or offensive working environment.

College Given Mellon Grant

College Press Service

Trinity College has been awarded $300,000 by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to de- velop "freedom of expression" in teaching and learning.

The grant, which will be used over the seven-year period, is designed to assist in the examina- tion of current programs across all the arts and sciences. The funds may be used to ap- point new faculty and to provide current faculty with opportunities to deepen their knowledge in their areas of expertise, or allied fields. Interdisciplinary investigation and creative approaches to curricular development will be encouraged, with the expectation that "fresh combinations," or ways of orga- nizing and presenting knowledge, will result.

Commenting on the gift, Trinity College President James F. English, Jr., said, "The ap- proach envisioned by the grant will focus squarely within the innova- tions with respect to curricular and faculty development, while un- der consideration by our Faculty as part of the long-range planning process. With the assurance of financial assistance from the Mellon Foundation, these delib- erations are sure to become more lively and sharply focussed."

The grant is the fourth major award Trinity has received from the Mellon Foundation in the past continued on page 3

Scholarships
The Institute for Human Studies offers the Claude R. Lambe Fellowships to both under-grad. and grad. students planning an intellectual career. Opening date is Feb. 1.

Trinity College Book Exchange
Third of spending hundreds of dollars on textbooks each year? You can drastically reduce the cost of most students' texts by buying or selling your used books at the Trinity College Book Exchange. The exchange is a non-profit activity sponsored by the SGA. It will be held on Jan. 16 & 17 in Wons Lounge from 5 pm to 9 pm. Those wishing to sell their books should drop them off between 4 & 5 pm. Don't forget to tape a slip of paper on the inside cover including your name, phone number, and price of book. For additional information, contact your SGA Dorm Representative or your Residential Assistant.

Registrar
Friday, Dec. 9 is the last day to drop courses for the Fall 1983 semester and the last day to withdraw the Pass/Fail option.

Student Recital
There will be a student recital on Mon., Dec. 12 at 7:30, in Garmany Hall AAC. Any student who wishes to perform please contact Linda Laurent in the music dept. Take a break from your studies and come - it will last approximately one hour. Rehearsals will be started afterward.

Trinity Woman's Organization
The Organization will hold a tea on Friday, Dec. 9 from 4 pm until 6 pm in the Woman's Center. Students, faculty, administration and staff are welcome.

Twelve-College Exchange
Students interested in the Twelve College Exchange program should contact Dean John S. Waggert's office (Williams 233) for applications and additional information. Applications are due by the start of the Christmas vacation.

Financial Aid
Reminder: Applications are now available in the Financial Aid Office for students who need to apply for aid for second semester. Students currently receiving aid, and who do not require an adjustment in their awards, need not apply. Deadline Dec. 9.

and dining room furniture has been purchased to supplement the existing number of tables and chairs. Gorlick-Asmus is still looking for couches and chairs to furnish the Domestic Kitchen. He reports that there are a few traffic problems in the dining hall. He pointed out, “Everybody breaks for lunch at the same time. There are always going to be plenty of people but of late we’ve been experiencing less confusion.”

Asmus added, “I’m looking forward to getting all of this mess over with. Of late this construction has been causing me hassles.”

Harrassment A Real Factor Today

Harrassment can take the form of sexist jokes, verbal harassment or abuse, or any differential treatment on the basis of sex that interferes with an individual’s work. If a professor has a reputation for telling sexist jokes or making demeaning comments to one sex, students may not take the course and consider other options to that class. Because the professor had created an offensive learning environment, some students had reviewed their academic plans, perhaps despite a strong interest in a subject.

Sexual harassment is rarely discussed because it has existed as a hidden problem, and many women have the responsibility for ending sexual harassment on the victim, and not on the harasser. Comments about sexual harassment are that women “ask for” sexual harassment by their behavior or by the way they dress, that an explicit “yes” will stop a harasser, or that women make false charges of sexual harassment. These beliefs are held by both men and women, and make it difficult for the woman who is harassed to take action (see point 1). While some people may consider certain styles of dress inappropriate, clothing is a personal choice which should not be judged. No behavior justifies sexual harassment — it is important to note here that flirting is not sexual harassment if it is a mutual attraction (sexual harassment is unwanted attention with sexual connotations). In our society, it is sometimes believed that if a woman says “no” she actually means “yes.” If a woman is sexually harassed and says “no,” she means “no.” And finally, a woman would have to gain from false accusations of sexual harassment, since those women who openly make complaints are treated lightly or ridiculed, threatened with bad grades or loss of job, or not believed.

Sexual harassment is an abuse of power rather than a sexually motivated act. When men and women live in an egalitarian environment where an individual’s options are unencumbered, and like her achievements are free from any judgement based upon his/her sex, sexual harassment might cease to exist. In Part 2 I will discuss the general problems that are established at Trinity, sexual harassment and the law, as well as personal steps which can be utilized to thwart sexual harassment.

ten years. In 1974, Trinity was awarded $200,000 to create faculty research fellowships and interdisciplinary symposia. In 1981, the William and Flora Hewlett and Mellon Foundations gave Trinity a $200,000 challenge grant for an endowed presidential discretionary fund for institutional renewal. Later that year, Trinity was one of a group of leading private universities, and colleges selected to receive a $100,000 award to support faculty development in the humanities.

The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation of New York supports education, health and medicine, cultural projects and institutions, conservation, civic programs and community services.

Dana Grant Given To College

HARTFORD, Ct.—Trinity College has been awarded a $272,000 grant by the Charles A. Dana Foundation of New York to be used over a ten-year period in support of faculty and curricular development in the natural and social sciences.

The grant will allow the College to hire new, full-time faculty members to replace senior professors who have elected to participate in Trinity’s phased early retirement program, and will support the partial release from teaching responsibilities for faculty members to assist them in their career development through research and the exploration of new areas in their respective disciplines.

Commenting on the grant, Trinity President James F. English, Sr., said, “This grant will be of enormous help to the College in the areas of junior faculty recruitment, career advancement, and curricular development. It will assist us significantly in carrying out our long range plans which we are now developing.”

The Charles A. Dana Foundation was founded in 1950 by the late Charles A. Dana, an attorney, businessman and philanthropist. The foundation makes grants particularly in the fields of higher education and health.

Trinity received a $105,000 challenge grant from the Dana Foundation in 1971 to stimulate contributions to the Alumni Fund, and a $230,000 grant in 1974 for supplementary compensation for four full professorships at the College.

Krieble Scholarship Given

HARTFORD, Ct.—Courtland P. Sears, III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Courtland P. Sears, Jr., of 2 Carter Street West, Manchester, has been awarded the Krieble Scholarship at Trinity College.

The full-tuition scholarship is presented annually by Loctite to the chemistry student who "has demonstrated outstanding scholastic achievement and who offers promise of making a significant contribution to the profession of chemistry." In his undergraduate career at Trinity, Sears has distinguished himself in his course work in chemistry, and has been involved in research in analytical chemistry. A junior at Trinity, Sears won the Chemical Rubber Company Award in his freshman year, was elected to the Faculty Honors List last spring, and has participated in chemistry seminars. He also has been active in intramural soccer and the Trinity Outing Club. Sears is a 1981 graduate of Manchester High School.

Registration: New Format

January 31, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Students will bring the completed "Course Schedule Forms" to Final Registration. Each form, previously approved by an academic advisor, must include a final set of courses. The Registrar will verify the student's selection of a Pass/Fail option, countersign the final registration form, and provide a copy to each student and his/her advisor. This should avoid any question about the courses in which a student is enrolled.

5) Classes will resume on February 1.

Check The Dog's Collar

Connecticut Humane Society

With cold weather already on the scene in New England the Connecticut Humane Society sends along a timely reminder to all dog owners to make certain that their dog’s collar isn’t too tight.

The growth of a winter coat of hair can quickly fill in the extra space originally allotted when the collar was first put on the dog’s neck, even just a few weeks earlier. If the collar hasn’t been checked in a few months the dog might have grown or gotten heavier. Sometimes, an owner who sees the dog every day may not even notice that the dog has grown or that the hair has become much thicker.

It is wise to periodically take off the collar and brush out the dead hair around the dog’s neck. In fact, an overall brushing every week or so is beneficial for both the dog and the owner.

A Must to Hear
Solomon Amendment Having Little Effect

by David Gaude

Very few students actually have lost federal financial aid because of the new law requiring men to register for the draft in order to get college money, aid officials around the country report.

The new law—usually called the Solomon Amendment, after law author Rep. Gerald Solomon (R-NYC)—went into effect October 1st after months of delay.

Most students apparently already registered before the law went into effect, the officials say.

Two Iowa State students, for example, refused to sign their compliance forms. The papers swearing to the aid office that they've registered—and lost aid, says aid director Jerry Sullivan.

Other schools report “a few” students who purposefully have refused to sign the form, and have disqualified themselves from receiving aid.

But even these students may be getting aid from their schools. Because of numerous delays and confusion in enforcing the law into effect, “it’s no wonder we still have a few students who haven’t signed,” says Jack Sheehan, Boston University’s financial assistance director.

Boston was one of the few schools to support the draft/aid law initially. BU President John Silber even announced he’d deny BU’s own aid funds to students who didn’t register.

“But at that point, due to lack of getting the thing into effect, we are not denying our institutional funds (to non-registrants),” Sheehan says.

Boston is one of very few “students didn’t sign the compliance forms.”

“There have been some!” who haven’t signed at Yale, either, adds Jacqueline Foster, Yale’s undergraduate aid director.

But “we are making Yale funds available to them to meet their financial needs,” she adds.

There may not be many students left to register nationwide anyway, points out Selective Service spokesman Betty Alexander.

“Let’s face it,” Alexander suggests, “we do have a registration rate of 98.6 percent, and the number of those (who haven’t yet registered)who are in college and then who need financial aid is very small.”

If the amendment was designed to stampede the few last-minute registrants into the fold, it hasn’t worked.

She says there’s been no increase in the number of registrants nationwide since the amendment went into effect.

So far, the government has indicted 16 people across the country for failing to register. There’d be more, Alexander says, “but many people who haven’t signed up aren’t equipped to bear the burden, and students who are also in the National Guard and don’t realize that, unless they’re on active military duty, everyone over 18 years of age (beginning with students born from 1964 on) must register.”

Aid directors take much of the credit for getting the vast majority of students signed up before the deadline, which had been pushed up repeatedly.

After being signed into law in September, 1982, the Solomon Amendment originally was to go into effect July 1st. Federal Judge Donald Atwood, however, decreed on Oct.11, making it illegal for Chinese residents to own a dog.

Peking Residents Are Eating Pets to Comply With Dog Ban

by Royce Daly

Up until October 1st, there were 9 million people and 400,000 dogs in the city of Peking in China. Officials have long complained that the dogs and their excrement were causing widespread disease.

Liu Songlin, a deputy chief of the city of Peking in China.

In order to comply with the law, residents are eating their pets, Liu states.

In response to the health problems Peking instituted a dog ban on Oct.11, making it illegal for Chinese residents to own a dog.

Violators of the new law will be fined $25, which is the equivalent of three weeks’ pay for the average worker.

Liu Songlin says that 200 Peking residents have formed extermination teams and have drowned or clubbed to death 200,000 dogs in their attempt to remove the dogs from the city.

Any of the animals found in public areas will be exterminated.

World Outlook

Women Critical of President Reagan

by Christina Gonzalez Staff Writer

The results of several major political polls indicate that women voters consistently give President Reagan lower marks than do men. This fact has posed a problem for the Reagan administration from its beginning.

Through budget cuts, an economic recession and an invasion in Grenada women persist in liking Ronald Reagan less than men do. Polls have uniformly shown women's approval of the President to be lower than men's by about 10 to 12%.

Richard Wirthlin, President Reagan's pollster, has called this gender gap "one of the most intriguing, fascinating phenomenon that exist in the electorate today." The pollsters contribute this to the fact that women are generally more pessimistic about the economy and concerned about war, issues such as the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion rights are not major factors in shaping the way women perceive the President.

Administration officials stress that the President's problem with women is primarily one of perception. They feel that his record speaks for itself and that criticism comes from those who are ignorant of it.

Many women's rights groups claim to be keeping a very close watch over the administration's actions, they feel strongly that the White House is weakening anti-discrimination laws and cutting those federal programs that help women.

Ironically, the fact that Reagan named the first woman to the U.S. Supreme Court and is the only president to have three women in the Cabinet at the same time has had little effect on the situation. Polls indicate that the American public is generally committed to a greater political role for women. Thus, making it crucial for the Reagan administration to find a solution to the dilemma.

This may prove difficult, considering that some of the primary goals of the Reagan presidency are at the heart of the conflict. It is increasingly obvious that Reagan's efforts to reduce the size of government by lessening its involvement in business and limiting the amount spent on social services clash with the goals of women's groups. No until this fundamental conflict has been resolved will the situation improve.

Solving Old Problems

Change. We've had a semester of it – or, rather, a few years of it, which has culminated in a semester of new programs as well. The old programs were, apparently, not good enough. Of these new programs, one of the finest which has emerged is the revamped RA program. New program: five informal student-faculty discussions per week, one in each zone. Students go to them – in varying numbers, yes, but even if there are only three people, it's still worthwhile.

Old problem: not enough faculty-student interaction outside the classroom.

New program: Sunday night study breaks. Students can get to know each other in a healthy kind of activity, over food (not booze), on a regular basis. That kind of programming will be funded on a permanent basis in their Discretionary Fund and given to Residential Services, which helped solve quite a few programs.

A Word on Amnesty International

To the Editor:

As I sat among members of Amnesty International in Mather lobby a few weeks ago, I noticed an unusually small number of people make the effort to stop at our table and write a letter on behalf of a prisoner of conscience. At first I rationalized the disappointing response. “The people who habitually write let- ters are probably also partici- pating in the Oxfam America Fast today,” I thought. Yet, facing up to bad timing, the unfor- tunate conflict in the scheduling of the two events. Yet, in making excuses, I’d be overlooking the rapidly decreasing participation of the Trinity community, a fact that is evi- dent with each bi-weekly letter-writing campaign. In light of this frustrating trend I’d like to explain the work of Amnesty International and in an attempt to fos- ter the confusion the Trinity community may feel regarding the goals and function of our organization.

When we appeal to passers-by to write letters on prisoners of conscience (those who have been imprisoned strictly for their political beliefs) to learn more about Amnesty International, the most common response is, “No, thank you.”

No, thank you to what? What does Amnesty International do? To explain the function of our organization.

Every country of the globe must agree to recognize and respect the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which the United Nations adopted 20,000 prisoners of conscience since the organization’s inception in 1961, of whom 17,000 have been released. Those who think political atrocities sim- ilar to those perpetrated by the Nazis could not occur again are sadly mistaken. Those atrocities are an embarrassment with which we all must live. Let’s not sit around this time waiting for people to suffer similar fates.

If some have been afflicted by the unpleasant issues raised in this letter, I regret that reaction. Rather, I’ve intended this letter to be provocative, to make the community aware of our involvement, our efforts to bring about a new era of co-operation, and selfless community benefiting to all.

Sincerely,

Frank W. Sherman

Don’t Forget the Evaluations

Editor’s Note: Due to the im- portance of this content, this let- ter has been reprinted from the last issue.

To The Student Body:

In the past, course evaluations have been done by each depart- ment as well as by many indi- vidual professors, but not by the students on a consistent basis. This year, however, the S.G.A. is doing something about that (yes, you non-believers, the S.G.A. does do productive things). A book will be printed giving student opinions on each class given in a certain semester. This book will then be available to the students prior to the next pre-registration. We believe that these books will be very bene- ficial in aiding a student in choosing his or her classes.

Thanks Goes To Phono- ners

To the Editor:

I am taking this means to ex- tend a special thanks to the 79 students who gave us an evening of their time to fill out surveys to participate in our Annual Fall pho- nathon. Their efforts resulted in pledges over $44,000 in alumni in two nights of calling. This was a record for student pho- nathon. The Development Office and the College sincerely appreciates and supports we received from this outstanding group of students.

Sincerely,

Frank W. Sherman

Laundry: Isn’t That Entertainment?

by James G. Harper

Ever since prehistoric man climbed down from the trees and roamed the Savannah on two feet and ever since he made his first loincloth out of dinosaur fur, he has had to deal with the laundry problem. Here at Trinity, 108 million years later, we are still dealing with it.

The freshman, torn away from the chair-desks of Highrise, if he has had to deal with the laundry problem. Here at Trinity, 108 million years later, we are still dealing with it.

Dicastra told the Tripod that there are 30 washers and 36 dryers on campus. Leaving out the plodding calculations, that gives each student three hours of washer time, and three and thirty-six minutes of dryer time. This should be plenty of time, but we are still faced with one of the rustiest blowers of the laundry jungle—the sight of coir sheets, hanging, like a frozen waterfall, from the roof. For after the blowing process is forced to do laundry. Although step-by-step instructions are available, the only solution to this problem is to stand by your wash, or “a sense of cleanliness.”

“Laundry’ entertainment? There is no laundry entertainment,’” said one freshman. But the positive thinker can find it. One means, although plodding, is to read graffiti. It comes in several different languages. Kinetic conversations can be read on the chair-desks of Highrise. If you have absolutely nothing better to do, you can always peer into the storage room, separated from the laundry by a cage. It is full of refrigerators the size of a ’57 Buick, and ugly furniture. There is even a box with the top removed, a long table and a chair-desk.

The best entertainment in the washing room is the gossip. Doing laundry seems to bring out the human instinct to insult people. “She was trying to run my life.” Or, “She’s such a shark,” are typical conversation starters.

Laundry stories are exchanged, too. Lisa McNamara, who does her wash in Jackson (5 washers, 6 dryers), went to move her clothes from the washer to the dryer. Opening the dryer, she found a small child, one of the Hartford neighborhood children, playing in the machine, eating Doritos. This, truly, is the laundry jungle.

Doing laundry may be a jungle, or even a løch-infested swamp for some, but, as the Highrise graffiti says, “There’s nothing like clean clothes.”
Musical Revue Disjointed Despite Strong Elements

by Karen L. Webber

If Mr. Moshell's intention was to put as many people on stage for as long a time as possible, then he has succeeded triumphantly. However, if his purpose was to create a consistent, tightly focused, polished musical theatre piece, then he has failed. This is not to say that each of the three sections did not have their highlights. They did, but they had their problems as well. It is commonly understood that a revue cannot contain many different trends that don't have to mesh perfectly. But each piece should be strong enough to stand as a separate entity and this was clearly not the case.

The first section, entitled George Gershwin and His Contemporaries contained wonderful tunes from the 1920's. The material didn't seem to fit the vocalists chosen and/or conversely, the singers (with a few exceptions) could not make the material justice. As an ensemble, they had a pleasant, singable blend (a little too heavy) and the arrangements were always interesting but the movement lacked cohesion. Sorely lacking from this section was a kind of stage confidence without which the performances seemed wan and broadcast their discomfort. LeAnn Murphy's rendition of "If I Can't Give You Anything But Love" was clear, easily understood and well-sung, but the stage presence was missing. "With A Song In My Heart" lacked a passion that is crucial to make it succeed theatrically. Linda Jeffries wasn't "bad" enough to make me believe her thus there was a flat finish despite the two dancers brought in during the number. Victoria Keefe's "Puttin' On The Ritz" turned out well but it quickly petered out. "Can't Help Lovin' That Man," sung by Carolyn Montgomery, proved the most entertaining and vocally solid piece of the section. Gershwin's magnificent "Rhapsody in Blue" calls for a full orchestra who can do justice to the work. The mock ensemble just didn't make it, though, amidst the confusion of its not-cooling tones. Peri Shamsai fared very well. Mr. Moshell's directing from the piano, making hand signals and comments to the instrumentalists, pulled focus from the soloists and proved extremely distracting. Quite apart from that, I kept asking myself why this piece was included in the evening. And the transition out of this section looked so sloppy it was embarrassing. I was already getting tired when the third and final section reared its head. But what a refreshing change! Finally the main course - the Broadway section. Credit must be to this slick, well-rehearsed, tightly structured section goes to Hyla Flaks who, through her choreography, instilled enthusiasm, energy, and movements of magic into the performers. "Chorus Line" was a logical place to begin and "I Hope I Get It" is a fine opening followed by "Nothing," to which Seldon Wells offered her strong alto voice and spacious personality. Jordan Bain gave an enthusiastic comic performance as Ritchie through the range of "Hello Twelve, Hello Thirteen" proved a bit too high. The set design by Cynthia Wilber was quite an undertaking and quite a change in mood. Greg Avila's portrayal of Mr. Todd proved quite disturbing and coupled with Eva Goldfarb's "My Friends," the effect was enhanced. Laura Austin's "Green Finch and Linnet Bird" suited her well and she and Cochran performed "Ah Miss" with just the right amount of comic timing and finesse to make it work. "Kiss Me" featured all four of the performers mentioned and was a delight to watch. The "Annie" section which followed featured Diane Charlemagne as Annie and Eva Goldfarb as Miss Hannigan. The main problem here was not the performances, but the suspension of disbelief as college women played ten year olds. The highlights of "Annie" was Goldfarb's rendition of "Little Girls," and "You're a Good Woman," providing a flashy finish.

The last musical represented was "Company," a simple yet effective, or at least so was the costume by Hyla Flaks, which allowed for fluid movement. The lighting done by Matthew Moore was fine but not very well executed. Transitions could have been smoother, smiles wider, and bodysuits less. The effect achieved was light and enjoyable.

Women's Swimming Drowns Fairfield

The women's swim team took up right where they left off last year, powering through a much improved Fairfield University contingent 79-52.

Winning nine of 13 events, the Chicks displayed the same combination of individual talent and depth that has characterized their last three seasons, though many familiar faces were missing. With All-Americans Marsha Belcher, Ginny Finn, and Lulu Cott not competing, there were some doubts about this season. In the opener at least, little seemed changed.

Dei Frederic, Debby Cronin, Laura Gill, and Karen Hubbard stroked to a 2:13.9 in the 200 meter medley relay to open the show, and Berit Brennan, Gill, Hubbard, and Frederic closed it with a brisk 1:59.9 in the 200 meter freestyle relay.

In the two hours between these events, Brennan stacked up wins in the 50, 200, and 400 meter freestyle; Cronin won the 50 and 100 meter breaststroke; Hubbard quicked out the 100 meter freestyle, and Frederic locked up the 100 meter backstroke.

Gill and Sue Casazza turned in strong performances in the butterfly events, throwing a scare into Fairfield ace Di Nicola who managed to win by a touch.

Veteran Chris Sanden turned in excellent performances in her first college meet, garnering a strong second in diving, and a third in the 200 individual medley.

Veteran ace Laura Couch tallied three seconds, being touche-dout in the grueling 200 individual medley by Fairfield's Bachman, and by teammate Cronin in the 50 and 100 breast.

Freshmen backstroker Cary Lyford and freestyler Themis Kladas also scored for the Bants, and junior backstroker Sue Cutler added points as well.

In their first outing, the Trinity women swimmers have served notice that they will again be among the best in New England. Their next test will be tonight in Worcester against undefeated (3-0) Holy Cross.

and Loefgren with 5 minutes left. However, the Camels were ahead the whole game with one exception. Right at the start of the second half, Trinity was up by three, but a three point play by Connecticut tied the game.

The Bants never allowed the Camels to take charge of the match as the deficit was at most a point to four. The final score stood with Connecticut up by four, 60-56.

Co-captain Karen Oreczyk led the Bants scoring with 17. Two freshmen, the victory.

Numbers Against Wrestling

the Bants were handicapped by forfeits and injuries. The 118 pound class was lost without a struggle and the next two wrestlers were pinned quickly. This put Trinity down 18-6.

Veronis then won on the disqualification and Mike Oxman looked like he might put the home team back in the contest as he led 4-3 late in the second period. But Oxman smacked his head against his opponent's head, once again, his coach had to take him out of the match in the 158-pound class that was scored 9-3. It was the only other Bantam win, as he thumped his opponent, 3-0.

Doyle played in the top spot for Trinity but lost 3-1. The rest of the Bants fell 3-0 in their matches.

Trinity also travelled to Amherst last week where they routed the Lord Jeffs 9-0. The Bants' top four players, Cragan, Doug Burbank, Tom Monahan, and Kapelus all registered 3-1 victories.

The Bants were handicapped by the absence of three missing players who are in England this semester: Kat Castle, Laura Higgs, and Kathy Klein. With the return of three of the top five players to Trinity's lineup, and the addition of six new players, the Bants have a lot to look forward to for the next four seasons.

The other two Trinity wrestlers did have a difficult time with their opponents. Senior Sue Greene, a transgendered tennis player, was just outclassed in her match, losing 3-0. Greene's play lasted only a few minutes-

Veronis, who wrestles in the 142 pound class, had a good day despite winning only one match. His first match was very close through two periods and he trailed the top wrestler by only two points with a minute to go. The second match points, Pe- ronis could not erase the deficit. Veronis led his second match 7-5 in the third round when he put his opponent in a painful double bar arm pin. The Norwich wrestler, who had been outscored in the first two rounds, and Oreczyk and Anderson started in this week's games along with Loefgren, Menes, and Priestley.

Squash Team Dropped By Ivy Leaguers

Women Lose At Harvard
by Julia McLaughlin
Sports Staff Writer

“Nina Pater has returned again this year with a tremendous level of play”, were Coach Becky Chase’s first words about Trinity’s women’s squash team.

Playing perhaps its most important match of the year, the Trinity men’s squash team fell to the strong Princeton Tigers last Saturday in New Jersey. The Bants lost 6-3, giving Princeton its closest match of the season thus far. The Tigers are ranked in the country’s second best squash team behind Harvard; the Bants now figure to be number three.

Though Trinity would have preferred a showdown later in the season, unfortunate and perhaps unwise scheduling had the Bantams playing a better prepared and more practiced Princeton squad.

Co-captain Bill Doyle expressed his less than enthusiastic feelings for the match.

“We are definitely disappointed not to have won. We felt we had a chance to win, but they (Princeton) played tough at home behind the support of a strong fan turnout. We played well as a team, but a few players might not have played as well as they could have.”

The meet, however, was not without its individual highlights for the Bantams. Mike Georgy, in the number two spot, recorded a spectacular upset over his opponent, a first team All-American. Georgy won 3-1, giving the Tiger turned pucked out his second loss in over two years.

J.D. Cragan also gave a fine showing, winning in the three set of a score of 3-1. Jerome Kapelus, playing well at number seven, was the only other Bantam winner, as he thumped his opponent, 3-0.

Doyle played in the top spot for Trinity but lost 3-1. The rest of the Bants fell 3-0 in their matches.

Trinity also travelled to Amherst last week where they routed the Lord Jeffs 9-0. The Bants’ top four players, Cragan, Doug Burbank, Tom Monahan, and Kapelus all registered 3-1 victories.

Contrary to widespread rumors the Bantams did try to win. Doyle said graciously of Amherst “they were not too good.”

In perhaps the most insignificant match of the year, Trinity also smashed Bowdoin College in a scrimmage before Thanksgiving.

Trinity faces its toughest opponents of the year tomorrow when they play at home against the potentially number one Harvard Crimson. Harvard, which loses a national championship almost as often as Bowdoin wins one, will give the Bantams all they can handle.

Last year, the Crimson beat Trinity 9-0. The Bantams have their top nine players from a year ago returning, so victory is not entirely out of the question.

As Doyle put it, “we can beat Harvard. A good turnout of Trinity students could give us the edge we need for a close match.”

Women's B-Ball
Tries To Defend

The basketball must have looked awfully large in the eyes of the baby sitting courtside during Tuesday's scrimmage between the women's basketball team and the Faculty All-Stars. The ball took two bounces and deflected off the top of the baby carriage. The little one didn't even flinch and earned a kiss from her father, associate professor Craig Schneider. Moments later Schneider was back on the court to help the All-Stars to an 80-55 triumph over the defending NIAC champions.

Of course, when you are working towards a third straight New England championship, there is time to laugh at such a defeat. The start of the season was a few days off and the Bantams could be a little more confident of their chances within their own league. After all, the women will lose only one key member from last year's squad. On the other hand, the Faculty All-Stars were left to contemplate their chances against Eastern Connecticut, a traditional national power.

Through the fun, coach Karen Erlsand found the game educational. "It was a test of intimidation. It's much easier to see in a game like this if a kid is going to be intimidated by a better team or player later in the season." Interestingly enough, freshmen Betsy Jones and Sara Mayo stood out as being the least intimidated by the size and strength of the better, noted senior Chris Lofgren. "We've gotten to such a point that's pressure on us because we know that the freshmen are so good that we should be better."

For the veterans of the team, the operative word is pressure. Mostly it comes from within as they strive to protect their reign at the top of New England basketball. Add to that the internal pressure from freshmen and pressure of other teams shooting to knock off Trinity at every turn and Karen Orczyk's comment that "then it's so much pressure that it's too as fun as it was," is understandable.

This year's senior class started Trinity women's basketball up the ladder of success. Three years ago the attitude was "we've got good kids; nice people, pretty good basketball players, let's go out and do it". So good that we should be better."

As one would expect, the veteran team is not as loud as they were three years ago when they could out-yell any team in New England.

The natural concern would be that this quietness is the surest sign of complacency and over confidence, but forward Debbie Priestly doesn't feel that way. "There's so much more talent that winning doesn't have to come from outward emotion. It's much more within ourselves this year." The team's quietness is more of an intensity," adds Erlsander. So in an era of noise where few teams repeat as champions, the women's basketball team looks for a hat trick and in the process fights the pressures of being the best and trying to prove it all over again.

Men's B-Ball Whips Amherst

"I think it was concentration," said Ogaard of the 31 for 37 performance from the line.

Foul shooting was the only thing Trinity didn't do well in thrashing Curry College to open the season.

In the first week of the season, the men's basketball team established its trademark—the pass. That quality was most apparent in the first half of Thursday's home victory over Amherst. The Bantams used 13 first-half assists to take a 41-28 lead and rolled to a 79-60 victory.

"To have individually good passers is the obvious answer but it is the answer," commented coach Stan Ogrodik when asked to explain his team's excellent passing.

Tom King is one of those talented passers and the senior forward had four assists in the first half against Amherst. Two of those set up consecutive Joe Bates layups seven minutes into the half. This started Trinity on a 16-4 run that gave the Bantams a 24-14 lead with 8:55 remaining in the half.
