Dean DeRocco Resigns, Will Take Job At Denison

by Stephen Drew

Andrew G. DeRocco, Dean of Faculty, has resigned that position to take the position as President of Denison University in Granville, Ohio, effective August 1, 1984.

DeRocco, the likable dean with the friendly smile has been here at Trinity for the last five years are just the things necessary to be a successful college president. He has been a part of the dean’s team, been a part of the faculties’ salaries, and has held the president for eight years and is taking an early retirement for health reasons.

The Trinity faculty will certainly miss this intelligent, hard-working man. DeRocco’s work here has been successful and greatly appreciated by those who work with him: Dean Spencer, Dean Waggett, Dean Winer, Vice President Thomas Smith, and President James English.

"I leave Trinity with an enormous respect for it as an abso-

Six faculty members have reserved summer grants for course development in the area of Wommen's Studies. The faculty members include: Linda Laurent, Artist-in-Residence, for a course on Women in Western Music; Jacqueline Boley, Visiting Leo-turer in Classics, for a course on Women in Antiquity; Susan Pennybacker, Assistant Professor of History, for a course on Women in European Society, 1815 to the Present; Helen Lang, Associate Professor of Philosophy, for a course on Theories of Human Nature; Stephen Low, Professor of Modern Languages, and James Miller, Associate Professor of English and Intercollegiate Studies, for a course on Literary Perspectives in African Societies. These summer appointments, anounced by the Curriculum Committee and the Women's Studies Committee, are part of a three-year Summer Faculty Development Program in Women's Studies. The revision/addition of Women's Studies courses will hopefully provide a "substantial Women's Studies component" for the curriculum.

S. Herbert Evison will receive a Doctor of Letters degree (L.H.D.). A New York native and a 1912 graduate, Evison has had a long and productive career in the conservation movement. He is largely responsible for the creation of a park system in the state of Washington.

In 1919, Evison established the Natural Parks Association of Washington, and organizedgrass roots support for a state park system. Two years later, he took a comprehensive state park bill to the legislature. Today, the Washington State park system is comprised of more than 100 units.

In 1933, Evison was drafted by the National Park Service as supervisor of the Conservation Corps in 1933, Evison was chairman of the Historic commercial block between them and the history and social attitudes of an era? Why do we try not to wear outfits that make them uncomfortable-tight clothing, high heels, etc., despite the reasons against wearing such clothing? And when even a simpler, more comfortable style comes to the forefront, why does it generally change back to the impractical again?

These are examined in the exhibition "Women's Fashion-Contemporary and Contrast" which will be held in the Watkinson Library from May 1 to June 30, 1984. This exhibition takes a look at the changes which took place in women's fashion between the years 1810 and 1920, a period of tremendous political and social change and also a great variation in women's dresses. The fashions illustrated in the exhibit are all taken from contemporary magazines, books and prints. One has to realize, however, that side-by-side with the styles illustrated in the fashion magazines was the much simpler dress worn by the majority of women. It also took a long time for fashion to "trickle down," and the high fashion of 1875, for example, might be the common style of ten years later.

Fashions and dresses have always been identified and divided a society. Dressing above one's station, for example, could one afford it--always was frowned upon. It was not until the 20th century that mass-produced clothing made it possible for most women to dress in much the same style, if they so desired.

The Watkinson Library is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., so why not take a break?

U.S. Deportation Is Possible

Baltimore, MD (CP) — The government is trying to send a Morgan State University student back to face certain harassment and maybe even death, campus activities are saying, but the government itself has denied the student political asylum in this country, at least for the moment.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) has denied Malekoile Malekoile, a 33-year-old nursing student born in South Africa, her initial request to stay in the U.S.

The denial provoked a number of public protests, including a Morgan State Senate Faculty Senate resolution supporting the student's effort and campus-wide petition drive.

We are doing everything we can to prevent deportation, says Chaloo Woon, Morgan State's student government president.

"The majority of Morgan State students are behind her," adds Salma Lupus, head of the school's mental health department.

"Everyone who was asked to sign a petition has done so," the INS wants to send the student, who conceives to being in this country illegally, to Botswana.

Mahlangu-Ngcobo says she will face persecution if she is forced to return to Botswana, where she lived after she fled from South Africa.

In 1978, Mahlangu-Ngcobo founded the Azanian People's Organization (APO) to try to overturn apartheid, South Africa's system of forced segregation.

She says several of her friends and APO members were tortured or killed by the government for their activities. "Two weeks after we formed APO, I was arrested and kept in solitary for 21 days," she adds.

After her release, she fled to Botswana, which borders South Africa.

The 33-year-old student, who has a two-year-old daughter forms a now broken marriage to a U.S. citizen, contends she won't be safe from South African police in Botswana.

"If she has a political history, that's a very real fear," says Jennifer Davis, executive director of the American Committee on Apartheid, the IN's Baltimore office.

The New Staff Will Bring Changes To The Tripod

Now, we've got to make a few changes around here. The first order of business is to change the name to The Trinity Tripod. No, I don't think it's a bit too late. Believe it or not, the name has a strong reputation around the country as a good college paper. Over its eighty years of publication the paper has experienc ed its ups and downs, but it is clear that the paper is trying to make the best of the situation. Students to report the news and express their views. In the past twenty-five years it has been awarded both first- and second-prize in the society of college journalism nation-wide. At the same time the past two decades have seen The Tripod produce four Pulitzer Prize winners, including George Will, one of the world's most renowned journalists.

There is now a new editorial staff at The Tripod, and with it you will see many changes in the paper. Some changes not as evident in the pages of The Tripod will also take place. The purpose of these is to keep the paper striving to maintain the reputation that it has deservedly earned. The new staff has a responsibility to continue the tradition of excellence and to bring interesting and provocative, yet responsible journalism to its readers.

We at The Tripod hope you will approve of the changes that will aid and enjoy reading the paper next semester. Only with the help and support of the college community can we publish a paper that is interesting and informative.

Recently both The Observer and The Questioner have begun publication by the students here at Trinity. Although The Tripod does approve of them as vehicles for student expression, and does not view them as competition, we want to emphasize that The Tripod is the student newspaper, representing the college. It does not have an exclusive right to publish. Anyone who does and doesn't apply for admission to a course, then make a decision, sign or not sign permission slips and hand them back without any explanation unless asked; Leo Shapiro is forthright, and tells you ahead of time what all his criteria and biases are. I should like to suggest that a student who gets ahead of time what all his criteria.

To the Editor:

In spite of how irritated I am about the delay, I will try to be as brief as possible in discussing my dissatisfaction with Carl Rosen's handling of the review of the play Woe is Me. To begin with, there is absolutely no excuse for not having a review ready to go on Tuesday following the original performance of the play. The Tripod editors operate under certain constraints of time and space. However, during the three years that I have been associated with Trinity theatre, this is the first time that a review was so delayed. I agree wholeheartedly with the questions raised by Kristine Bel-...
Students Protest Over Raising Drinking Age

(CPS) — Repeating their performance of a year ago, student groups were instrumental in recent weeks in defeating bills that would have raised the legal drinking age in Georgia and Washington, D.C. Iowa has also just rejected two attempts to introduce drinking age legislation, though student groups were not as significantly involved in the lobbying against the bill, reports Bob Bingaman, director of the State Student Association in Washington, D.C., who has helped organize student opposition to drinking age bills in a number of states.

But many state legislatures that have not finished their spring sessions are still weighing laws that would either raise the legal drinking age or limit 18-year-olds to buying wine and beer.

"Drinking age is still a hot issue, and probably will be for a while," observes Michelle Glater, who tracks drinking laws for the National Conference on State Legislatures.

"There are still bills in quite a few states proposing to raise their drinking age," she says.

Twenty-six states have raised their legal drinking limits since 1970. At least a dozen — including South Carolina, Alabama, Vermont, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Tennessee, South Dakota, Hawaii, Kansas, Mississippi, and Virginia — have bills pending to hike the minimum age, Glater reports.

"We thought this year it would be a relatively dead issue," Bingaman says.

Bingaman says his campaign against raising the minimum drinking age argues that better education and tougher drunk driving laws are more effective solutions to alcohol abuse than prohibition.

"I think many students are duped into thinking that raising the drinking age is a sort of panacea for all the traffic accidents and other problems associated with alcohol abuse," Bingaman believes.

While Bingaman organizes student opposition to drinking age increases, Students Against Drunk Driving has established chapters on a number of campuses to lobby in favor of raising the minimum age.

Just A Few Words...

At the opening of Mather, President English jokingly remarked that sometimes he felt sure that Connecticut would be dry before Trinity's pub was even open. While there is no need to worry about prohibition, there is a good chance that the legal drinking age may be raised to 21 in the very near future.

During the past three years this issue has raised much controversy. In this time the legal drinking age has rised twice, to 19 in 1982 and to 20 in 1983. This regulation has caused many changes on campus have learned the hard way that this law must be obeyed. Of course, the legislators who support such measures do not consider the disruption in college social life to have any bearing on their decisions. Those in favor of raising the drinking age point to statistics that indicate that previous age hikes in Connecticut have reduced the number of fatal accidents involving teenagers.

This fact however is very misleading because although the number of deaths has decreased, the accident rate has remained the same. A possible explanation for this is the increased use of safety belts in the past two years. This fact refutes the major argument held by supporters of the age hike.

Legislators in favor of raising the drinking age feel that the biggest mistake was made when they lowered the drinking age to 18 from 21. At this point they feel they should have raised the minimum from 18 to 21 initially, instead of changing it every year.

Legislators do not deny that they have been inconsistent on this issue. To alleviate this problem most would prefer a nationwide drinking age. In this way everyone is treated equally across the country. However, this idea is not wholly supported because some feel that this is a violation of States' rights.

The legislators in opposition to this proposal do so because they doubt the constitutionality of such a measure. The center of dispute concerns the "age of majority," which is present at 18. To many it was the lowering of the majority age that caused these problems. Every state opted for different drinking ages. To raise the age of majority at this point would create a serious dilemma. While this measure would insure a nationwide drinking age, teenagers would also not be able to vote until they were 21.

Raising the drinking age is seen as discriminating against 18-21 year-olds. The way to solve the questions of discrimination and constitutionality would be to raise the age of majority. Many lawmakers against raising the age say they would support it if the age of majority was raised. They feel that opposition would be less great since voting interest within this age group is very poor. It is crucial that students who will be affected by such legislation organize in order to preserve their right to have a voice in elections.

Since the primary reason for raising the drinking age is related to drunken driving, it is here that we must look for a solution. There are steps that can be taken to solve this very serious problem without raising the drinking age.

It is obvious that there is no ideal drinking age because older people tend to drink and drive too. Yet, many legislators are reluctant to pass any strong drunk driving laws because it would effect some numbers. Solutions such as police checks at highway toll booths to check for drunk drivers and mandatory jail terms appear to be dealing with the real issue and not some arbitrarily determined age.
Real Women’s Art

REAL ART WAYS is pleased to announce the opening of an exhibition entitled “Exchange of Sources: Expanding Powers” on May 4, which will run through June 9, 1984. The show consists of work by ten women artists well known for their history of involvement in feminist issues, who were, in turn, asked to recommend the work of three additional artists. Curator Rebecca Ballenger pursued the project to survey the general “health” of women’s art in the wake of the heyday of the women’s art movement. In the curator’s opinion, the exhibition “illuminates the advances of the women’s art movement of the ’80s through the variety of work gendered and the diversity of artists drawn to it and thriving in it.”

“Exchange of Sources” is a dynamic exhibition, comprised of the work of 39 women and one man whose work is stylistically diverse but uniformly strong. The exhibition is neither a polemic nor verse but uniformly strong. The work of artists who are interested in the fact that they are artists as in the fact that they are women. It is an exhibition which is not only visually stimulating, but also offers the viewer the opportunity to see a large number of challenging works representative of the art being made by forty vital, contemporary artists.

Deviations: Adams’ Dance Intrigues

by Joseph V. Adler

On Wednesday May 2 in Goodwin Theater, Nancy Adams presented her senior thesis project entitled Deviations. The piece was a culmination of Ms. Adams’ investigation into the influence of Asian dance forms on three modern dance pioneers: Ruth St. Denis, Martha Graham, and Merce Cunningham. Ms. Adams is a double-major, dividing her interests between Intercultural Studies and Theater/Dance.

The evening was a performance of one dance divided into seven sections. One criticism of an otherwise very impressive evening was the ambiguity concerning these seven divisions. It was not always clear when one section ended and the next one began. This occasional lack of clarity on stage left a more abstract feeling than perhaps was desired.

This slight ambiguity, however, in no way detracted from the overall strength of Ms. Adams’ work. The combination of live electronic music (composed by Ken Sten and performed by Jim Penndorf) and excellent lighting created an ethereal, almost otherworldly atmosphere that was a strong motif throughout the entire evening. Special mention should be made of Mark Bishop’s lighting design. As his final project at Trinity, Bishop’s work displayed an awareness of the difficulties of lighting a dance performance. This was his first attempt at lighting a dance, and overall, the choices he made were very effective.

Within this dream-like atmosphere, Deviations succeeded on the strength of Ms. Adams’ group choreography. Ranging from grim mock suicide to a pulsating cross-stage chase to a playful series of interactions which became frozen moments, the dancers seemed to embody the spirit and diversity of the piece as they executed their movements with concentration and effectiveness. Utilizing seven dancers: Marianne Alessio, Laura Austin, Heather Brown, Joanna Cobbert, Allison Friday, Katie vander Sleesen, Krissy Wheeler and* effectiveness. Utilizing seven dancers: Marianne Alessio, Laura Austin, Heather Brown, Joanna Cobbert, Allison Friday, Katie vander Sleesen, Krissy Wheeler plus herself, Ms. Adams displayed sophistication and creativity as the dancers moved in, out, around, and through the many wooden boxes that populated the Goodwin stage.

Boxes, boxes, and more boxes was certainly what much of Deviations was about. As most movements throughout the performance were in some way directed toward the boxes the themes of constraint, confinement, and liberation were effectively conveyed. In a visually very compelling final section, Ms. Adams worked to free herself from a visual incarceration of boxes that surrounded her as Kristy Wheeler explores the possibilities of six boxes, horizontally placed, domino-style. The eventual liberation of the pair is a welcome relief.

Ms. Adams’ performance was quite complex, and I am sure that not everything that was intended came across to the audience. But that is all right. What did come through to everyone present is that Nancy Adams is strong, creative personality with an interesting choreographic talent. The evening was a success, and Trinity is losing an important member of its student body.

Seniors To Read Poems

Softball Wins Last Game Over Holyoke

by Julia McLaughlin
Assistant Sports Editor

The softball team won its final game of the season last Tuesday, beating Mt. Holyoke 4-3. Holyoke's poor play in the field proved more costly than the Bantams' one mental error.

In the second inning, a Mt. Holyoke batter stroked seven successive line drives foul down the third base line only to strike out on the next pitch. The bottom of the second was Trinity's big inning as the Bants scored all four of their runs. Trinity hit solidly, but it was Holyoke's errors that made the inning so successful for Trinity.

The rally began with a single by Nancy Meade, who was replaced by pinch runner Cary Lyford. Sheila Andrus followed with a fly to right, which the Holyoke fielder dropped putting Andrus on first. Karen Carney bunted successfully, and Lyford was safe on a close call at third.

In the second inning, a Mt. Holyoke batter stroked seven successive line drives foul down the third base line only to strike out on the next pitch.

The rally began with a single by Nancy Meade, who was replaced by pinch runner Cary Lyford. Sheila Andrus followed with a fly to right, which the Holyoke fielder dropped putting Andrus on first. Karen Carney bunted successfully, and Lyford was safe on a close call at third.

Freshman Sue Babcock singled to bring Lyford home. With the bases loaded, Sue Carter's sacrifice fly scored Trinity's second run. The Holyoke third baseman made three errors in a row, putting Sis Van Cleve, Kathy O'Brien and Weezie Kerr on first and allowing two more runs to score.

The third inning was dominated by defensive plays. In the top of the inning, O'Brien, Trinity's second baseman, made an amazing catch behind the bag for the third out. Holyoke made a double play when Robin Black tried to advance to third on a ground out.

The fourth inning turned into a disaster for the Bants. Holyoke put runners on first and second on a Van Cleve error at short and a controversial call at second. Trinity made an excellent double play but mistakenly thought it was the third out and began to run off the field. Unfortunately, the Holyoke player knew better and ran home.

After the inning, pitcher Mary Wroblewski commeneted, "I felt so stupid just standing there, watching the girl run and not being able to do anything..."

To make things worse, third baseman Meade followed with two errors but finally made a good play at third to really end the inning.

Holyoke found the holes in Trinity's defense in the fifth inning and scored two more runs. Two walks and a single loaded the bases. Two solid singles brought two runs in, but Trinity followed with a double play at third and home to end the rally.

In the top of the seventh, Holyoke tried to rally. They managed to get runners on first and second, but the strong Trinity defense held Holyoke.

Trinity finished their first varsity season with a 3-6 record.

Westfield

The men's lacrosse team lost to Westfield State in the last game of the season, 11-5. The game was typical of games played by the Bants this season. Trinity started out slowly in the first half and then came on progressively throughout the second half. Westfield dominated the first quarter, scoring four times to Trinity's one. In the second quarter Westfield scored only once but managed to hold Trinity scoreless. The score was 5-1 at the half.

Westfield controlled the game in the third quarter, scoring three goals to Trinity's one. The third quarter had been a strong quarter for the Bantams throughout the season. In the fourth the teams traded goals to account for the 11-5 final.

Trinity ended the season with a 3-3 record, but Trinity did not field a poor lacrosse team. Three games were lost by one goal, two in overtime. Statistically, the Bantams were not dominated by their opponents.

The Bants were not a first half team. Trinity had 35 goals to 43 scored by their opponents in the first and second quarters. In the second half, the Bantams tallied fewer goals than the Bantams in the Bantam strong.; the Bants outscored their opponents 26-18.

There is one saving grace to this season. Both the Bantam and Bantam pitching ended the season with a winning record. Bivona tossed a four-hitter, shut Central Connecticut out slowly in the first quarter Westfield scored only once. The baseball team beat Central Connecticut 8-1.

The tennis team won two out of three matches this week. The Bants crushed Springfield College last Tuesday and embarrassed Connecticut College on Friday, beating both squads by a wide 8-1 margin. Unfortunately, things got a little tougher against the Cats of Army, who defeated Trinity 7-2 on Saturday. Nevertheless, the Bants closed their season in fine form with a better than .500 record.

"We all played well last week. We were expecting a tough match against Connecticut College and we blew them out. We also destroyed Springfield. We didn't really expect to beat Division I Army, but I think we gave them a tough match more than the score might indicate," said senior co-captain Neil Schneider.

In simplest terms, the match against Springfield was a joke. Every match except for Art Strome's (#3) was a lopsided Trinity victory. Strome, who had a fast tough week, lost to his Springfield foes by a narrow 7-5, 7-5 margin. In his customary number one spot, Schneider won yet again, 6-3, 7-5. Also continuing to roll, Loft, at number two, won easily 6-2, 6-2.

The second half of the singles lineup romped over their opponents. Reid Wagner won in straight sets 6-2, 6-1, as did Jeff Lang (6-3, 6-1) and number six Dan Moran (6-1, 6-4).

All three doubles teams won, though the numbers one and two teams did have to go to three sets to win.

Friday's match against Con- necticut College was a pleasant surprise for Trinity. After having anticipated a competitive match, Trinity wiped out the men on the coast. Avenging his loss at the HISCAC's, Schneider beat his opponent with ease. At number two, Loft also won with a breeze, 6-2, 6-4. Strome lost his match against Conn but recovered against Army and won only one of two Trinity players to win.

The rest of the matches passed with little trouble as Trinity con- tinued to roll in top form. Wagner and Lang were pushed to three sets, but otherwise it was a routine day for the Bants. Connecticut seems to be in the downswing after their tennis heydays of the 1960's. Saturday's match against Army had a couple of unfortunate first frames for Trinity. Schneider lost his first singles match of the sea- son in team play. The doubles team of Moran and Strome also lost their first match of the year, 6-4 in the third. Aside from Strome, Loft was the only other Bantam to win.

Although the season is over for Trinity teams, it is not over for Schneider, who will travel to At- lanta tomorrow for the national tournament. Schneider was the only one of four New England Di- vision III players to be selected for the tournament.
Monday afternoon Trinity honored its finest athletes at the President’s house. The winners included Jim Bercy (baseball and basketball) and Barry Wins 800 At N.E. Championships.

Barry, whose 209-0 effort was good for third in the NESCACs, cruised through the trials (1:59) and took the lead early in the meet. Both fine sprinters ran fast and strong, chasing two crabs — a faulty 2:01.59 lead in the mile relay that the Bantams had established.

The margin was all the more impressive when one considers that the two seat stuck with 500 meters to go and Steve Gerber had a decent lead. The relay will be running at 2:05, and Trinity had its second consecutive victory in the event.

The fun wasn’t over. At the beginning of the sprint, the five seat jumped its track and with only seven rows pulling, the Bantams crossed the finish line 3.5 seconds ahead of Williams.

The J.V. Lightweights were not as lucky. The Bantams led Ithaca by just under a length after 1200 meters, but Ithaca came back and took slim lead going into the final meters. As both teams moved into their 20-stroke sprint, Trinity caught a crab and dragged to the finish with only seven rows pulling.

Ithaca won by 5-2 seconds, but both Williams and Marist lost.

Continuing their winning ways, the J.V. lightweight eights easily defeated Ithaca to record their sixth straight victory. The J.V. heavyweight four closed the day by falling to two Williams varsity fours.

Women's Varsity 8 Unbeaten

by Stephen K. Geliman

We are right where we wanted to be, a chance to get revenge against Williams and defend our NIAC title," said Trinity women's lacrosse coach Robin Sheppard on the eve of the Bantams' semifinal match against Williams.

Williams had been the only team to defeat Trinity during the regular season, 10-8 in Williams.

The tension of the semifinal hampered play in the first half as Trinity took 3-3 lead.

The Bantams, however, opened the second half with four unanswered goals and coasted to a 13-6 victory.

Tufts gained the other spot in the finals by breaking open a close game in the second half and defeating Bates 11-6.

The importance of the final game was reflected in shppy first half play. Dropped balls, poor passes, and some hard hitting blindered play.

Tufts grabbed a 5-2 lead midway through the first half, but the Bantams rallied to go ahead 6-5.

The teams traded goals in the final two minutes of the first half and Trinity led 7-6 at the break.

The Bantams dominated the first 11 minutes of the second half and moved to an 11-9 lead when Lisa Stern's free position trickled past Trinity goalie Karen Orczyk at 14:49.

Ginny Biggar started the Bants' winning rally with a spinning goal at 12:26. Just over a minute later, Laney Lynch tied the game, converting a pass from Sidney Fein.

Sheilie Cutler won the ensuing faceoff to Karen Rodgers. Rodgers dashed into the Jumbos' defense and flipped a quick pass to Biggar who gave the Bantams the lead for good at 11:09. Biggar closed the scoring spurt with yet another fast break goal at 9:37.

The four goals in two and a half minutes gave Trin a two goal lead and the defense did the rest. Rodgers intercepted a Tufts' pass off a free position and Laura Gill came up with a steal in the crease to help protect the Bantams' lead.

"We had to pick up our girls man-to-man at half-field which we weren't doing in the first half," explained Rodgers of the defensive success.

After Biggar's final score, the Bants went into a stall, running off chunks of valuable time.

"We stalled the ball well and that was key," noted Suzy Schwartz. "We must have stalled for a full 11 minutes having to win.
