KNOX COLLEGE TEAM
DEFEATS TRINITY, 29 TO 16

Westerners' Speedy Game Too Much
For Blue and Gold.

Trinity maintained its traditional superiority over Knox College in basketball by winning its third last few seconds of the half but met its second defeat of the season at the hands of Knox College at Galesburg, Ill., just before the squad squared its win records with the Old Man Midyearns. The Trinity team was handicapped in both games by the absence of Dr. Henry Ferber, who threatened with diphtheria, his absence being especially disastrous in the Knox game when good foul shooting for Trinity would have meant a victory.

Boston College Game.

Trinity defeated Boston College at half-court on January 29 in a hard fought game, score 38 to 28. Boston College was fast but Trinity took the lead in the first few minutes of play and held it until the middle of the last half when the visiting team threatened to upset the fine score. Trinity forged ahead again as the half ended and continued to lead until the second half, when he was the star performer of the evening from the floor with three goals, six points and three goals a close second. Captain Mur phy, one of Boston College's outstanding athletes, had three goals and a free throw. Trinity closed out the final period with three successive goals, thus securing the game.

Homes for All Withal.

Murphy scored the first point of the game, which started on time, and of the game, which followed by a free throw, and Hickory scored the second half goals, one in the first period and the other on the second day, totaling five points in the game. Trinity's second victory was its second goal, and Murphy scored from the floor.

TRIPOD begins its regular sessions.

Hartford, Conn., Tuesday, January 31, 1922

As the result of the indictment of the present cut in the last years, the present enforcement of attendance system has been found to favor a radical change in the method of discussing attendance issues and faculty during the last weeks, and all now believe that the system is inadequately supported in the system of the opening of the new term.

The Faculty Committee on Discipline, early in the term, recommended that the membership of the Department of Discipline Committee be taken on the system of the present.

One of the members of the discipline committe, Professor G. A. Hendrickson, who has been on the committee for a number of years, has been invited to the TRIPOD to the following statement of his position regarding the proposed abolition of the system:

"Recitation, lectures, and laboratory work are the basis of some of the intellectual results for which colleges have been instituted. The TRIPOD should judge for himself to what extent he must use these features. If he, however, makes no intellectual advance and shows no interest in making any, there is no place for him in the college. He should be for the sole aim of the new system."

GRUESOME RELIC
OLD COLLEGE
Skeleton Found in Former Dormitory
On Trinity Street.
A skeleton that was probably used by students of Trinity College back in either the '40s or the '70s was uncovered a few days ago in an old building in the area of the Orient Insurance Company on Trinity Street.
The skeleton, which is partially intact, was among medical students, was found by Irving B. Schmelzy, manager of the Hartford & New York House Wrecking Company.
The skeleton was found in a room in the southeast corner of the building on the third floor and at the time of the discovery was exposed in an old soap box. The building which in recent years has been vacant, was at one time a dormitory building for Trinity College, when the college buildings were where the Capitol now stands.
When the skeleton was first found little attention was paid to it by the workmen. However, one man evinced enough interest in the grotesque relic to apprise the authorities and to have the remains reposing in a box.

DISCLOTH AND HALO
GO ARM IN ARM.
President Ogilvy Tells Nurses of Need
For Drudgery.
(Special to THE TRIPOD.) Bridgeport, January 25.—The greatest blessing a nurse can give to humanity is the touch of a calloused hand," said Dr. J. B. Ogilvy, president of Trinity College, Hartford, in an address on "Saints and Dishcloths" at the mass meeting in the Hotel Stratfield last night of the State Nurses Association Convention. The "dishcloth and the halo high for which we aim, go arm in arm," he explained. His talk was mainly directed to the relationship between drudgery and ideals and the fact that no position or profession is without drudgery.

"Take the case of the saints in a monastery," he said, "It might be possible to pick out one who had a little saintlier qualities than the rest, take him by himself, set him under a tree in the grape arbor, with instructions to do nothing but think saintly thoughts and saintly visions. Then have the rest of the lay brothers do all the dirty work in the kitchen. It won't work. As soon as you try to specialize on the saintly business and leave out the hard work, the saintliness vanishes and nine times out of ten you will find the halo in the kitchen. The saint must wash the dishes too, his own dishes, or he will cease being a saint."

"The drudgery and the ideals go hand in hand, the dishcloth is arm in arm with the halo that for which we are aiming," said the doctor; and the drudgery and the halo are in the game and the part that drudgery plays in the development of our character, is what we want to talk about. And if at any stage of the game the drudgery shrinks, keep the ideals high, don't, whatever else you do, fall into the pit of self-pity. Realize instead that the routine is part of your job and make it a part of you. The greatest blessing you can give to humanity is the touch of a calloused hand."
