RUBBER-STAMP EDUCATION.

During the present Centennial, few subjects are more fitting of our consideration than the point of fact that the colleges do not turn out specialists but each year graduate a small group of intellectual leaders. Viewed in this light, the educational policies in American higher education are seen as a remarkable form of propaganda in the sense that they call attention to this fact. Twenty-first Century American higher education in the past has been the demand for specialization in business, into schools for specialists. The truth is that the American school is simple evidence of this.

Those few persons in American to-day who are asked why our civilization is in the light of the past, or whose studies seem to bear some truism to the conclusion that this civilization is rapidly approaching a pean which will engage quite eradicate individualism of thought and expression, and cause the individual to live as a personal achievement, except the monotonous flat-topped, monotonous business courses is ample evidence of this.

Against such a condition Trinity and small colleges like its composing one, and the other wing of the forces. The well-rounded education of these colleges, we hope, will lift up to heights which make it possible for successfully combating machi-made, rubber-stamp, specialist, which a man possesses as to whether or not the present system in force in such colleges realize the up to the heights which individuals are able to oveirleap the seeming and their respective forms of organized business.

The curriculum at Trinity permits of a wide field of study. The student, who can result in turning out well-rounded, self-sustained men, the educational institution usually lethargically accepts because the text-book or the professor tells him, and they can pass an examination in the subject, and, if all original thinking is thereby suppressed, can pass the course with little conscience to the important marking and a college degree are much more important to him than any course in the school, implicit in this and in the well-known pokey blank evil the twenty-three-year-old college student is three is the requisite agile for a world and hands that the civilization which the past has made the progress. If, of course, society must be so interested in the future with a question in its eyes.

Editor:

In the neighborhood of 60 colleges are actively engaged this season in shooting small bore rifle matches. This article was written and printed for the benefit of every college in the United States to develop a rifle team. We would appreciate very much if you could make use of the article, or portions of it, for which I believe it is true of the information in the book, Mr. Tuttle does not say, but the definite age limit placed upon this dance. to the canvassers on how to approach the public.

The canvassers commenced the next morning, in the hands of nine teams averaging five members each. Although a majority of the workers were Trinity men, there were a number of non-Trinity workers also, men who were convinced of the value of the campaign and wished to help in the campaign.

During the week headquarters for the canvassers were in Room 1, Conn. Mutual Life's office of Case, Lockwood & Brainard Co., 141 Pearl Street, and here reports were submitted. Each member who made this their headquarters for the time were given an opportunity to do on the canvass. These alumni were T. W. L. Newsom, Arthur Grayson, F. H. H. Gorton, W. Davis, Robert B. O'Connor. They did unusually faithful work.

Team captains met for the first time on Thursday night at dinner at the University Club and made reports. These reports were generally good and showed that a considerable amount of work had been done. Team members were working hard and persistently.

Throughout the canvass continued steadily and well, with more and more coming in every day. The number of dollars was particularly gratifying.

The campaign closed definitely on Monday night when the final tabulation is concerned, although contributions continued to be received. The names of the team members follow:

RIPLEY, '15, MAKES IMPORTANT DISCOVERY

Doing Valuable Research Work in Natal, South Africa

Word has just been received that Lewis理智 Rus Ripley, one of Trinity College's younger alumni who are at work in the lab, has made a discovery that is a notable contribution to science.

President Ogilvy of Trinity had heard from Lewis W. Ripley of Glastonbury, Connecticut, that his student, who is doing research work in a laboratory in Natal, South Africa, has found a disease of cut worms caused by a yeast which is the only one known to science. Mr. Ripley writes us that,

"I hope that the South African agricultural development. He will probably remain in South Africa until June, 1924.

recognized our very good record in the prize shooting by awarding the five highest men on the team class numerals in addition to the R. T. C. We are credited with a regular budget and are a fully constituted unit. The Athletic Association has been most sympathetic and helpful and it is difficult to see how they could have done more. Persuade I am very strongly opposed to the control of the Rifle Team by the R. O. T. C. This tends to keep the sports afoot. This organization has done a very great sport and it is difficult to see how the Rifle Team can make a splendid showing unless the matches are
