JUDGES HAVE DIFFICULTY IN REACHING DECISION

F. A. Brown Prize, Open to Seniors, Not Awarded.

In the final contest for award of noble prize speaking prices for the year 1906-7, which was held in the Old State Capitol Tuesday, May 20, 1907, the five judges, Professor Eliot, Dr. Brown, Mr. H. L. Mencken, Mr. W. H. Drayton, and Mr. W. W. Sennett, were unable to agree. The contest was open to members of the junior and senior classes in the University, and the judges were to select the winner upon two topics: the advice of our first president, George Washington, in his farewell address to the people, and the adjournment of the United Nations. The judges did not agree on the second topic, and the decision was left to the three judges who were present. The decision was made by the majority of the judges, and the prize was awarded to the student who presented the best argument for the adjournment of the United Nations.

The permanent court of international justice.

By Thane B. Wright, '24.

For over a century the foreign policy of the United States has been divided between those who believe in the Monroe Doctrine and those who believe in the policy of the United States. The Monroe Doctrine is the policy of the United States, and it is the policy of the United States that the United States is entitled to the Monroe Doctrine.

The permanent court of international justice was created by the United States in 1922, and it has been a great success. The court has heard many cases, and it has rendered many decisions. The court has rendered many decisions that have been approved by the United States, and it has rendered many decisions that have been condemned by the United States. The court has rendered many decisions that have been approved by the United States, and it has rendered many decisions that have been condemned by the United States. The court has rendered many decisions that have been approved by the United States, and it has rendered many decisions that have been condemned by the United States.

think on the whole life, and ideas. Think of the power that foreign policy will not suddenly abatement. They will want to do exactly what they understand, who knows that the golden rule works in every nation. Only one else; who understands that the middle-momentum of war if the other nations also part of our national conscious­ness, then, is the work of every individual persons. The foolishness of people's acts can tend to lessen the noble part of our national conscious­ness, and the awareness of people's acts can be made to substantially modify by social ed­ucation, so will the pamphlets alone have had no benefit. Pamphlets alone have had no effect.

a bigness of character and a perception of human consciousness, through out the country would gradually change the attitude of the people, first, by enlarging their view of their domestic obligations, then of duties toward state, nation and the world; till finally their outlook would become cosmopolitan. Only in this manner can the people, the nobility of their nation's civilization, be used for the improvement of our foreign policy and for world peace. The social attitude of the nation would then have a bigness of character and a perception of human interventions hitherto unknown. This would be one great unifying, continuous advance in the improvement of the foreign policy of the United States.
