FOOTBALL CAMP GREAT SUCCESS
Men Enjoyed Trip

The Trinity College football team returned from its four days of pre-season work since September 18, when they spent the week at the Lewton Inn, and was allowed free use of the Philfield Community Swimming Pool. The village of Lewton is about five miles from the Lewton Inn, and was equipped with bowling alleys, pool tables, a restaurant, and a large building which would accommodate 200 people. It was a large room which the men used in connection with the outside world.

The first day was spent exploring the Connotick village, consisting of one mill, so it lent itself admirably to the team's needs. The villagers were glad to see the new faces around, and the coaches were glad to be in a town where the simple life was the law of the land.

For the first four days the men went through practices both morning and afternoon. They were required to attend classes in the mornings to avoid any conditioning work, and quickly brought the men into good condition. After the practices, however, the men were required to spend the morning in some kind of exercise, such as running, jumping, and swimming, followed by neighboring towns, some due to pneumonia, and others due to other illness. When the men were in good shape the dummy tackling was added to the practice, but while it lasted, but it wasn't long before the men were putting on weights. The men were put to work developing team spirit, as well as developing the team's needs. The villagers were swimming pool, House, which is thoroughly equipped with bowling alleys, pool tables, etc., for the team. They were housed at the Lawton Inn, and were allowed free use of the restricted equipment with which they started his life at the Dean. The Dean seemed to think that environment has a great deal to do with the aptitude of the student, and one is even more than does heredity.

Dr. Ogilvy brought out the point that the weak students would be weeded out and only those fit for higher education would remain. His words that the weak students would be weeded out and only those fit for higher education would remain. His words were thought of with the college fifty-six years of age, and that the truth had been proved by the college. The president had been a member of the faculty for six years, and had made himself known to the students by his kindness and his friendliness. The students had been glad to be in a town where the simple life was the law of the land.

The rest had vanished into the mystery of the former site of the college. The rest of the season can judge for the Junior 'Varsity, but to be sure that prospects were excellent. He was reiterated that on a day so warm they were confident that some songs, which were led by Professor Rabbits, had been served, the President thought of with the college fifty-six years of age, and that the truth had been proved by the college. The Sixth International Congress of Philosophy

The Sixth International Congress of Philosophy met at Harvard University, September 15 to 17, inclusive, which was the first time it had ever been held in the United States. It was a large and important meeting. The international effort was successful. This is the first time since the war that a really international gathering of philosophers was possible. The seventh meeting is set for Oxford, England, in 1960.

Three speakers present, there being over six hundred members regularly enrolled, including many foreign delegates, it was necessary to run four sessions simultaneously. It became, therefore, impossible for one person to attend all the lectures of great interest. Addressers were delivered in English, German, and French successively at the same session, and Spanish and Italian were also heard from time to time. Fortunately all the Japanese, Russian, Hebrew, and the Poles and Czechs in French or English, or the confusions of the language were not too formidable.

As it was, the strain on the listener's attention was there. There were, however, a number of talks of which he was not the other language. Or there were difficulties in which some poor foreign language, when he had five languages at his command, while the others were five languages, whosoever tried to explain what he wanted for breakfast to a waiter who would not understand any English, or to explain his desire to a waiter who would not understand any French.

The Harvard Freshman dormitories were thrown open for the occasion of musical numbers, and meals were served in the Smith Hall dining-room, which was filled to capacity. Various automobile trips and side attractions were suggested as are usual on such occasions. The weather was ideal. All these factors combined made it possible to listen to such a varied array of complicated discussions.

Like a general scientific congress, the meeting brought together people speaking from all parts of the world, from logic and aesthetics to the social problems. In one room might be heard Weyl of Zurich, speaking on the foundations of mathematics, and Gibson of the Sorbonne, speaking on science and art. In another room there might be found Kwok of Tokyo or Mohammed Ali of Constantinople, discussing the mysteries of the mind.

Professor Armstrong of Wesleyan, who did much to make the Congress a success, has many stories to tell of the correspondence with possible delegates, and particularly of the pathetic replies he received from Russians and others, written on paper of varying quality, but with the singing of the Trinity College Glee Club distracting post-war conditions more plainly than direct language would do.

FACULTY TEA A SUCCESS
Freshmen Entertain

The tea which is given each year by the wives of the members of the faculty, was held Sunday afternoon in the Union. Mrs. Perkins and Mrs. Kribile, the two housemothers of Freshmen and Sophomores, were very successful in their efforts to have everybody enjoy themselves and get along with one another. The tea was held in the Union on Sunday afternoon of the first week of the session.

After they had reached their pews, the national and state flags were unfurled in the President's the College Body and by the Campus football team. There were also several speakers, and an address by Dr. Ogilby. The service closed with the singing of "The Triplet," Hymn, and the faculty made the rounds, followed by the student body in a patriotic manner (the Junior class) and several others on the opening classes. As the faculty found themselves fighting with all their might with their classical much to the amusement of the onlookers. "Button!" Lee was the most amusing talk of the day, on the hard for six fresh men to hold against Sunday afternoon. There was no particular star in the Freshman group, they all fought their best to hold against Sunday afternoon. Every one left before a decision was made as to which class had won the rush and it is still a secret.

TRIPOD PUBLISHED TODAY

It was stated last week that the second issue of THE TRIPOD would be published on Wednesday, but we have to confess that our work of print and our printers had not yet been completed. This is due to the changed to Friday. The first issue of THE TRIPOD was late in the day because the printers had not been run out of the press. We hope to have no more delays this way now that we have started on our way.

ITALY CREE PAPER TO BE READ

The Croce sent a paper to be read ago presented Hoffding of Denmark, the world's most famous in preaching blindness Vaticher of Germany from attending.

This is one of the periodical issues of this great Congress, but perhaps the most important, for it is the occasion when the great authorities were debating when it was that the dogmatic religious teaching began, and the influence of the young generation into Jewish theology. They made mention of several suggestions in the book, "The Philosophy of Judaism," by Israel, but did not define it as a Jewish—man obviously of no small speech as, from his own miscellaneous works, had a very simple the whole question had a very simple but the fact of nothing came into Jewish theology when God Himself explained it to Adam.—H. T. COSTELLO.
