In the fourth game of the season, the Blue and Gold of Trinity was defeated 34 to 6 by the Connecticut Aggies. The Aggies scored a real field goal from the thirty-five yard line on the first down, and then drove for their second decided victory which the Aggies have ever had over the Blue and Gold.

The Aggies received on the kickoff but returned to a kick having failed to gain through the line. A return punt from Trinity proved very much in her favor placing the ball on the Aggie twelve-yard line. The Aggie team, however, were strong enough to hold the ball out of danger, making a steady advance down the field. Six first downs were made in the game. In the second half, the Aggie team held for downs. Whitaker, however, punting the ball, made a long punt, taking it across for the first score of the first period was uneventful.

Eddy dropkick and made the extra point.

The Aggies received on the kick-off and the Aggies backs to the wall. They were held back to the seven-yard line. The Aggie Frosh Win 26 to 0, "Dhe was able to easily overcome as long as the team remains a better brand of football.

AN INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL.
The Tripod has been running editorials in the last three issues that the Senate or the Medusa take the lead in trying to establish an Interfraternity Council. The purpose of this paper is to make any interest in the matter at this time. We realize that many of the members of the various houses have been asking if we don't have a football squad and have very little time, so we are going to suspend football as a matter of convenience, but we are still going to try to bring it up again after the football season is over and we hope in the meantime the students will carefully consider whether or not they want a house football, or how we can have some intelligent discussion on the subject in November.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

YOUNG people are, as a rule, prone to judge others without much regard to personal worth, but rather in comparison with another, who is looked upon as the ideal. That is a common practice and it is one which causes much unpleasantness in many student bodies.

A man is worth just as much as he is. The tendency of comparing one student with another is entirely wrong. What a man is worth in comparison with someone else is an entirely different matter. No one can be judged in terms of comparison. He is worth what he is in himself, and will be entirely wrong in your estimation and be greatly deceived. Accept everyone at his own value.

READINGS IN THE UNION.

Those members of the student body who attended the reading of "Tristan and Isolde" by Professor Shepard last Thursday evening were accorded a real treat, as the story was ingeniously and well written, and with the fine way in which Professor Shepard portrayed it, nothing was left to be desired.

We all admit that Professor Shepard deserves a debt of thanks, for furnishing such an enjoyable evening. It speaks well, of course, for the publication in book form of any plays written during the evening and spent it among a group of students. We hope that Professor Shepard will not be too busy to give some readings in the future.

TWO MONTHS IN FRANCE AND GERMANY.

Dr. Naylor Continues His Article.

In America we use the expression one-shot-town—but Mont Saint-Michel, is literally a one-shot-town, being a little rock out in the English channel, just a narrow way up from the stone gate which serves as an entrance from the sea to the town. The road from the entrance to the town is made out of the sand, which over the years has eroded the enclosing rocks. It is never more than a few meters wide, and the road widens by the sand which is eroded from the sides. These so-called inland roads are a few miles long and have no cars at all, unless one is out on a boat or other vehicle. The road is unpaved and has no sidewalks.

The fashionable place to stay at Mont Saint-Michel is Madame Pocard's—it is the most expensive. My friend and I obtained a room in a small inn, which was a little dear. We have to pay thirty francs for the both. We have a comfortable bed, and there is a small room with views of the sea. Our room is within the village walls, but is not a hotel. We have two small windows, which look out on the sea. It is the most beautiful place in the world, and we are very happy to be here.

The island of Mont-Saint-Michel is surrounded completely by the insur­ habile tide as long as the time of the full moon. Our visit was by pure luck (Maundy Thursday) and we arrived at seven o'clock in the morning. The sun was just rising, and we could see the outline of the island through the clouds. The town is built on a small hill, and we had to climb several hundred steps to reach the top.

The town is surrounded by a wall, and the entrance is guarded by a gate. The town is made up of several buildings, but there are no shops or other places to buy food. The people are very friendly, and we were given a warm welcome.

The town is famous for its ciders, which are made from apples. The cider is a local delicacy, and we had a bottle of it to take with us on our trip.

The town is also famous for its cheeses, which are made from goat milk. We were given a large cheese, and we were very happy to eat it.

The town is also famous for its mussels, which are caught in the nearby sea. We were given a large basket of mussels, and we were very happy to eat them.

Finally, we were given a basket of apples, which were very sweet and delicious. We were very happy to eat them.

We were very happy to spend a week in Mont Saint-Michel, and we would like to return again sometime in the future.
From the West and Far West comes a new college-fad—that of-organized student clubs. A "fraternity" has been found for the squad. A forehead to a three thousand club and a general strike from classes to found and in condition. The excellent condition of the horse is conspicuous. In late season Coach Welch speaks to the judicious use of this diet.

STORY OF BISHOP INGRAM

The Bishop writes in another letter. "I want to see something personally and to leave plenty of time for fresh air and exercise with the young men, who are always fascinating."

Mr. Hancock again made a point and the Aggie back who, through the game.

"The Thinker" is one who analyzes a situation and picks out the essentials from the non-essential, and who looks at all questions in context, not side by side, but Professor Costello said it was easy to fall into errors about what connections are essential and may take both genius and method to find out the truth, he added.

There is also a general tendency to arrive at some conclusion for one sort of reason or no reason at all and then to try to justify the conclusion by discovering other reasons altogether new, the logician added. Passion and prejudice generally defend themselves, and the more certain statements and conclusions that have never faced criticism, but have taken themselves for granted. This makes the closed types of mind, he said, and most people don't care to argue anything of the importance because, if it is a serious affair, the minds are made up before the more thought of knowing is painful.
