ATHLETICS

Adams and Shepard Present Views.

The evils in college athletics today cannot be blamed upon the students or the public but rather lie at the door of those who shape the college's educational policy. It is evident that America has lost the instinct that the truth is always at the core of any educational policy. It is impossible to be, in any way, effective without the support of the students themselves.

It is ridiculous to mention the letter of the law concerning the evils of college athletics as a whole. In this regard, the broadcasters and American sportswriters must be blamed for giving no credit to a student for class work but none for work in sports, thereby implying that sport, in the eyes of the students, has been merely a means of leisure.

It is the place of the educators to shape the educational policy of the college. In this regard, Adams and Shepard declared that the task of the college in the education of its students is to create a spirit of excellence among the students themselves, and not to accept the evils of college athletics as a given fact.

No one can blame the students for the evils of college athletics as they are merely a reflection of the educational policy of the college. It is the task of the educators to shape the policy of the college, and not the students. It is in the hands of the educators to create a spirit of excellence among the students, and not to accept the evils of college athletics as a given fact.

The evils of college athletics today cannot be blamed upon the students or the public but rather at the door of those who shape the college's educational policy. It is evident that America has lost the instinct that the truth is always at the core of any educational policy. It is impossible to be, in any way, effective without the support of the students themselves.
THE TRIPOD

TRIPOD—For Alumni.

This is the fourth of a series of four issues of "The Tripod" which is being sent to Alumni. To those of you who completed this series each Alumni will have received at least one copy of "The Tripod." This series has been made possible by a gift from the Alumni Fund in the hope that the Alumni will support "The Tripod." We need your help. If you are able to play an active part in each of these four issues and are writing to the Alumni to ask us to be a part of the College, we are sure that the Alumni of the College. At the beginning the year we guaranteed twenty-six issues of our subscribers and advertisers, so that more than half of our contract has been fulfilled two weeks later the beginning of the new term. It will be very difficult for "The Tripod" to carry on in the latter part of the present term unless we assure many more subscribers and advertisers before the end of the year and of the fifteen we have sent two issues to all of the Alumni of the College. At the beginning of the year we guaranteed twenty-six issues to our subscribers and advertisers, so that more than half of our contract has been fulfilled two weeks later the beginning of the term. We need your help. If you are able to write to the Alumni to ask us to be a part of the College, we are sure that the Alumni of the College will participate in each of these four issues and write to the Alumni to ask us to be a part of the College.

There has been a great change in conditions at College. There is much more optimism and enthusiasm than there has been for a long while and there is less jealousy and harmful rivalry on the campus. Last year we had an Interfraternity Council, something that was not very familiar with conditions here will admit is needed badly, and much good is expected from it. We expect to have a large Freshman Class next year and of as good quality as this year's one. We are sure that conditions are improving and that they will continue to do so.

NEW BOOKS

"Adventures in Editing"—a beautifully written personal narrative of his career as an editor and author. Adventures in Editing was welcomed, for to Mr. Towne each manuscript he reads is an adventure; and he makes each approach new each task with the same interest. This book contains those rare qualities is, as an excellent compendium of his work and is of interest in any phase of writing.

In the course of his work Mr. Towne has met a number of interesting and valuable acquaintances with literary people. Among his close and intimate friends are Theodore Dreiser, Zona Gale, Sinclair Lewis, Richard Le Gallienne and many others. This book contains many joyous anecdotes of literary persons and personalities. It is a story of life and happening.

As a young man he started on the "Cosmopolitan" under John Brunner Walker. He took over and maintained a natural ability for the work, combined with a love for his editorial tasks. After a number of years, he "began" to change the "Smart Set" into a new magazine with little money. He was not afraid the unrecognized authors, so he had to work at the same time to cover them over for material. Under these conditions Mr. Towne had the opportunity to write at the same time of his manuscript. Thus his years with the "Smart Set" were years of adventures in editing. He tells us of each manuscript that came to his desk and the passion he felt for the novels and stories of some new writer, and hence the reading of it was an adventure.

In the course of his work Mr. Towne has had the pleasure of reading and publishing manuscripts of such writers as O. Henry, Barrymore, Willa Cather, and many others. And in his new novel, he has taken a very favorable one came from "McCleary." Since his days on the "Smart Set" he has been writing poetry and prose of his own, and he leaves them with the same devotion to devote to this work caused him to abandon for a time editorial work. This is a story of life and happening.

INTERCOLLEGIATE NEWS
A student at George Washington University has compiled a most interesting index, which includes his co-eds' friends. This very detailed and elaborate system was discovered when the author, in his History notebook, containing the index, on his desk after a quiz. His work was made public by the student, and he lent the notebook to find to whom it belongs. The unique device contains addresses, telephone numbers, and short comments on the girl. Perhaps a few hours spent compiling the material found in the book will prove educational as well as - taining....

ON a moving picture of Col-student life will soon be well under way if the present plans are cared out. An initial showing of the picture will be exhibited at alumni meetings and at the popular movie theaters for the benefit of boys in College. The picture is expected to be ready for showing early in February.

The film will be the first college movie in which all the scenes depicted are taken from actual events in the College life, and will portray somewhat different views of advancement and growth as presented in the professional movies, which have for years been giving the public a wrong impression of College life.

"Roommates", as the picture is to be called, will not simply show scenes of college life, but will take a real, interesting plot in which there will be feminine as well as masculine roles. Scenes from previous college meetings will take the feminine parts. This is the first time in College life that feminine roles have been played by members of the Masque and Treasure.

Dean McCutchan of DePauw University has offered as an incentive to attend the Chivalric concert the fact that acceptance of a concert ticket will be perfectly dark during the whole performance. The "DePauw" concert ticket will be worth the price of tickets.

THE CAMPUS OBSERVER

At His Desk

It is hard to say, even at this late date, just what I did in my roommate and myself to take a desperate step that evening and miss the picture show in town that everybody else in the house had gone to see. Perhaps it was inspiration, though, as near as I can recall now, we were far from sure that it was a good idea. It certainly did result in the production of some interesting dreams for the night.

This was decided at seven o'clock. At eight we left the bridge table to carry out our resolution, but it was first imperative that cigarettes be obtained for the occasion. So it was that at eight-thirty we arrived in Jarvis Hall full of ambition and conversation.

At eight-fifty we sat down. Of course, shoes, coats, shirts and other articles of apparel had to be shelled before we could reach a state of comfort. At nine o'clock it was decided that a cigarette was smoked.

The schedule from that point on was 9:10 p.m.: Discussion over Frenchmen marks was started. One, of course, was a necessity. It is highly imperative for the upper classmen in college to forget their own worries and do all that is within their power to bring the Frenchmen through in the best possible manner. For it is the Frenchmen who are likely to let their marks go, and waste whole evenings, etc., and not the upper classmen.

9:30 p.m.: Received call for a cigarette. It is necessary when working hard to relax at least twice an hour for about five minutes in order to prevent headaches that comes from too much application to the books.

9:45 p.m.: Short effort is made to clean up the room. It is impossible to do any real studying in a litter of papers, clothes and general dirt.

10:00 p.m.: Discussion as to the qualities of redshirts as against white. One cannot be too careful in this free and easy age of social obligations.

10:30 p.m.: Full time for another cigarette.

10:30 p.m.: Just time enough to go down to the store and get a bite to eat before it closed. Must always be taken to prevent undernourishment when studying in the evenings.

11:20 p.m.: Time out for the young gentleman across the hall.

11:30 p.m.: Time for another cigarette.

11:40 p.m.: Calculations as to how many courses may be cut the next day without risking the wrath of the faculty.

12:00-2:00 a.m.: A party from the ground floor joins the study session. The evils of the present college administration are discussed from all angles, and various plans for correction are submitted for approval.

12:10 a.m.: Bed.

9:00 a.m.: Next morning: "Yes, we stayed up all night and studied. I'm sure we are all in today."

HUMOR

Corrective Old Gentleman—"My lit­ tle man, you are not going to get very far in life if you keep taking those bad books and not going to college."

Little Johnny—"Ain't nobody go­ ing."

The worst thing about football is that none of the cheerleaders ever get injured.

Judge—"'Tis better cold without."

"'Without breeches."

It is a known fact that a man with a Harvard diploma and ten cents can get a cup of coffee anywhere.

Our idea of preparation is the boy who took four years of study and then opened a newsstand.

Conan—"What would you say to poor old Jenkins if we could communicate to his health?"

Doyle—"How in hell are you?"

Latin Club Meets.

The regular January meeting of the Latin Club was held on Monday evening, January 24, in Professor Naylor's room. There was a large attendance. Frank M. Thorburn read a paper that he had prepared and after that there was a general discussion. The meeting broke up after the members had finished their refreshments. The next meeting of the Club will be held in February.

POST mortem.

"Now that the first term has reached its completeness, and we have amazed ourselves with our ability to act only stay in college, but also to stay on the favored side of the Faculties. This time may prove that a post mortem over the term's work is made.

"In the first place, marks were not as high as we might have been. If a little more work had been put on one of these courses, a scholarship average might have been reached. If this was not the case, there was the drop in the Math course. If problems had been handed in during the last few days, things might have been a bit different.

"That Chemistry course took a drop. If attendance at the laboratory had been a bit more regular, it is possible that I would have been given a B in the course. And English algebra. I should have studied for that Wednesday night instead of going down to the show.

"It wasn't a bad term, at that. But I'm sure going to do better by Easter."
