GETS STONES FROM ENGLISH COLLEGE

The Deanery, Canterbury,

On Tuesday, November 29, the Washington School of the Missionary College of St. Augustin's visited to present the Trustees the stones which Mrs. Whitfield gave to the Foundation of the new Trinity College Chapel. St. Augustin's is the second oldest college in England and the college was founded by St. Augustin over 1500 years ago. The stones are:

1. A piece of Caen stones from Normandy, formerly part of St. Elkele's tower, the N. W. tower of the Abbey Church of St. Peter, St. Paul and St. Augustus, built about 1080. During the 12th century this tower was taken down and the stone bought by the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church Cathedral, Canterbury, and made into a screen behind the Great Alter. Later this screen was taken down and returned to St. Augustin's College.

2. A piece of Roman tile from the Chapel of St. Pancras, with the effigy of the Archbishops. The chapel was opened in the beginning of a nine to three score. They had enjoyed the afternoon of the Roman enemies and what to expect from the college.

3. A number of inscribed stones from the Roman Campagna. English 'Rugger' is a much better game than ours and as far as I can tell, it is much more fun to watch and is much more demanding of our ancestors than our own. It was a great-Grandfather of our game, and we must confess that the descendant exists in the modern form of the game.

Brill Gives Lecture to Freshmen on Journalism

On Monday, December 10, Mr. Brill addressed the Freshman class and upperclassmen on journalism. His extensive experience with newspapers enabled him to give a comprehensive outline of the history of newspapers in the United States and the organization of a modern newspaper. Mr. Brill showed how the original newspaper was actually an organ devoted entirely to the printing of news. It was usually a one or two-page sheet, printed very coarsely. This paper soon added advertisements to pay expenses and was now a four-page newspaper. Then some enterprising persons started to express their personal opinions in these papers—this initiated the present editorials; first a column and then a separate sheet. This development led to the period of great editors, including Charles Dana and Horace Greeley.

The highest scorer of the evening was the outstanding player of the game who won the scoring title with five goal field findings from every angle of the court, and four out of three times the foul line. His team paid no attention to him once he was on the court; he was in no sense a part of the team. However, Mr. Brill was, however, rather ragged at times and far below his scoring ability.

The game went on for several minutes before any score was made by either side. Finally "Bub" Whittaker, the year's top director at the Hartford Club, hopped for a stilt and landed. He then followed up with three field goals from every angle of the court, and four out of three times the foul line. His team paid no attention to him once he was on the court; he was in no sense a part of the team. However, Mr. Brill was, however, rather ragged at times and far below his scoring ability.

NEW ADVENTURE.

"Come ahead, fellow!"

A voice sounded close as a cello through the darkness, and the beam of a pocket flashlight flooded the narrow path leading from the Mira's State Library.

The small group standing at the school door let their eyes trace the light to its source, and there, dimly outlined behind it, was the form of Father Macdonald. His robe melted into the darkness about him, and some of the light, casting shadows on the walls, seemed to flow over him, giving the silhouette an almost epic quality.

"Come ahead, fellow!"

At this second bidding the teachers gathered, with the path, and they watched the surrounding ground, making sure that no uneven space came under their feet.

The school had been established in the mountain Province, and late that day great clouds had rolled over from the mountains, and extinguishing the light in the sky, beclouded territoires on the mission country. The rain pounded the earth and carried down loose soil from the slopes, making the trails hazardous.

One teacher, who walked to the school from the church and square, and on to the outskirts, had been concerned in the magazine. He had seen the film the stars, too feeble to pierce the musical clouds, faded in the sky, and the moon with its greater strength rose over the earth, casting earth shadows.

It was true that twisted from the school, through the church square, and on to the outskirts, had been concerned in the magazine. It is possible through a literary club.

The literary club would be so organized as to be active, intelligent, and practical. Each member would be required to read a paper, whether it be fiction, drama, essay, poetry, or criticism, one every month at which time the club met. Qualification for membership might be based on literary ability, activity, or on other conditions that the members might provide for.

We should not only like this club to be useful for its members, but it is desirable that it have the ultimate purpose of being valuable to the student body as a whole. This was the philosophy of the committee toward the creation of a literary magazine.

All contributions to the magazine would be submitted to the editors and published only if approved.

A literary club with ideals such as the one described above would be valuable to the entire college body as well as to a select few. Students interested in writing as a means to their immediate steps for its creation.

Youres faithfully,

JOHN KARSIAN

ALUMNI NOTES

George B. McGuire, who was badly injured in a mill accident at Vanderbuilt, where he was superintendent, is recovering at home, and now about to enter a new employ. He still has a foot in 1613 Shady Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Church Club, of Cleveland, Ohio, recently gave a dinner in honor of William G. Mathe, of the Class of 77. Mr. Mathes was the original pounder of the club, which has been in existence for many years. It has since grown into one of the largest Laymen's organizations of any in the United States.

Joseph Wellington Shannon spent last summer touring with his wife in England and France. He is practicing law in Philadelphia, and his add-dress is 138 13th South Street. Later he plans to return to the law. It is not known what he has been doing, but older ones do, that Shannon was one of the original college pitchers. In University games he developed the curled ball.

Girls and Football.

Girls who come to the game today should be very careful not to ask too many foolish questions. The psychology department states that one's mental alertness, good-nature, and patience is in about two hours after a game, there is no pitcher in a football game.

1. The "heading" should not be interpreted in terms of a sentence.
2. The numbers on the jerseys have nothing to do with the players' ages.

"What's the matter with your brother's voice?"

"Oh, he lost it working in a speak­nary."

Don't.

Don't snub a boy because he wears shabby clothes. When Edison, the inventor of the phonograph, first entered Boston, he wore a pair of yellow, low linen breeches and a plaid overcoat.

Don't snub a boy because he is of a boy, because he chooses a humble trade. The author of "Pilgrim's Progress" was a tinker.

Don't snub a boy because he stuffs, Demosthenes, the greatest orator you ever heard of, was a bards and a stammering voice.

Don't snub a boy because of physical disability. Milton was blind.

Stage Manager: "All right, run up the curtain.

Stage-hand: "Say, do you think I am a required?"

"We're 'laying it on you," watched the tough little Chicago chaps, as the farmer passed by.

"Marry him! No college man can marry me."

"He's going, you, you have to go to the minister."

The master who comes to claim ten minutes late is usually in a class all by himself.

"College Humor" is no longer to be the leader and dictator of American collegiate wit, so far as the Western Association of College Comics is concerned. The editors and managers of these publications, in convention at the fall meeting, have recently decided to spurn the name which "College Humor" side reprinted in the year 1928.

Y scan the room, and all at once an idea flashed through her mind. She was the only one who knew of her presence in the church, and she could not trust the other students. She decided to go to the sanctuary and light the lamps. The sanctuary lamp glowed in the darkness, and she felt a sense of peace and comfort.

She walked up to the altar, and the priest spoke in the sanctuary. He told her that she was not alone, and that there were others who cared for her. She felt a sense of relief and comfort, and she knew that she was not alone.

In her mind, over and over again, she turned the scene in her mind. The sanctuary lamp glowed and shed a golden haze through the man-made light. Miss Taverner was moved by the peace and tranquility of the sanctuary, and she knew that she was not alone.
