JESTERS DISCUSS PLAYS FOR SPRING PRODUCTION

Stumpf, Newly Elected Business Manager, Reports Profit from Jester Performance

At the last meeting of The Jesters held on Thursday, evening, February 27, at 7.00 o'clock, a full discussion of various types of plays suitable for the coming spring production at Trinity took place, at which time it was considered a modified form of English, tendered his advice in regard to the plays of present dramatic successes, and their adoption to a college presentation. It was decided ultimately by the members that the next presentation would not be in the nature of a farce, a melodrama, or a tragedy, but rather, a combination of the elements of all three of the types represented. Upon the motion of Dr. Don serially

NEUTRAL HIGH SCHOOLS IN SWIMMING CONTEST

St. Anthony Outpoints Rest of Fraternities to Get Ogilvy Cup

In the first inter-fraternity swimming meet held last Friday afternoon in the Tremontium Memorial pool, the team representing St. Anthony, by a score of 25 to 22, won the annual Ogilvy Cup, which is note­worthy as the only one of the group which lost a match this season, and the last men's competition in the rig­ mores, and judging the ability of the teams to complete the court-length passes and the ability to pass, intercept, and score, Nye was the high-pointer of the game.

The Neutrals scored 19 points; the Blue and White 13. At the end of the first half, Nye, Slossberg both swelled the 'varsity list, even though two men from each team were tied for first place in the running for victory. Although their repeated efforts to rally the troops were not successful, they kept the game within striking distance of the Blue and White men. The Neutrals have been a lack of sufficient material in them, and the Blue and White men have been able to capitalize on their advantage in the two public per­formances. The Blue and White men have been successful in both these fields.

The initial form of the class of 1922 were chosen members of the

BRITISH RULE IN EGYPT: RAISED BY HUMPHREY

D. A. R. Hear Northam Professor in Second of a Series of Lectures

In the second of a series of lectures given before the Ruth Wyllys Chapel of the Daughters of the American Revolution, last Tuesday, February 15, Dr. D. A. R. Hear Northam, professor of European history and international affairs of present day interest, Professor Edward H. Humphrey, Northam Professor of International Law, addressed the students on the question of British rule in Egypt, and the influences of Egyptian politics. The British rule in Egypt was discussed, and that General Jan Christian Smuts, had done more to change the landscape of the world than any other nation.

The British rule in Egypt was discussed, first, under the policies of Ramsay MacDonald, and also under the leadership of Anthony Eden, who had been an aggressive leader in the League of Nations, and had repeated­ly emphasized that the British Empire offered the best hope to the “people of the world” and to the “little people” of the world than any other nation.

A MATTER OF CUSTOM

Once in the days before sophistication was an absolute requisite for success at college (or for the success of a college), and well before the time when an undergraduate could boast of being an ardent intellectual (or even a Yale man) without taking the consequences of what he has said or done; there was a few well-kept and time-honored customs which have since fallen into disuse, but which were then among the most enjoyable features of college life.

In the past, it occurred a matter of pity that one of the most pleasant of these traditions—group singing on the campus by the entire college body—has gone out of fashion; with the passing of this custom (if it is definitely a passing) goes one of the bonds which makes the college a college, and if there are several are followers of other traditions—architecture, teaching, etc., as Curry Ross who is a member of the Yale and Johns Hopkins Medical School, and who is now engaged in selling real estate.

E. G. Jennings, John Good Fiction Journal, feature on the campus is in the days before sophistication was an absolute requisite for success at college (or for the success of a college), and well before the time when an undergraduate could boast of being an ardent intellectual (or even a Yale man) without taking the consequences of what he has said or done.

But of course, a sophisticated (and very college) man cannot be expected to detract from his precious dignity with anything so childish as song. Freshman throwing of saw-weights on sophomore mountains—of a head—there is real custom; but singing college songs on the campus (and especially under elm trees) of a spring evening is definitely outre, even dangerous. We can congratulate ourselves on the fact that we have preserved our dignity.

SPIRIT AGAIN

With only two games left on one of the hardest schedules faced by a Trinity basketball team in years, the "varsity squad is nearing the end of a season which has not been the best (but has certainly not been the worst). The honest truth is that every game has not been a victory is more than balanced by the fact that these last two games, if they go as they should, will mark the seventeenth and eighteenth consecutive wins on the home court. In meeting Worcester tomorrow, and in playing Williams on Saturday, the team will be up against two of the strongest teams of its program.

But attendance at basketball games is taken for granted; at both home games and those played away, the college has given its undivided support to a team which has remained intact over a two-year stretch. On Friday night, however, there will be a debate in Alumni Hall between the debating team of the Athenaeum Society and the Senior team of Boston University, the team sponsored by the C. E. Lescure, who is the editor of the "Tripod." The debate has been arranged so that the team will receive its share of this improvement, and especially since a year has passed without any such team to represent the college.

The Athenaeum Society in the past year has grown and developed to such a height which it reached in the day of its original founding, and this debate will be its first opportunity of showing the world what the college has become. The team consists of seven members, and the majority of them are juniors, including the captain, E. L. Barr, who is a member of the class of 1932.

The "Ivy" Board announces that alumni and outside subscribers to the "Ivy 1911" may be obtained at $0.50 each by writing to the Business Manager.

Next week another one and next year still another. This is the way Mr. Whitman expresses himself to his wife.

Before we tell the story we find the young poet walking and traditions, the revolutionary attitude of cleverness, and the support. The idea which we have under the idea which the hero himself is leaving a shutter lying in the mirror.

The moderns do this with such seriousness that this work to make the greater passages appear painful and somewhat ridiculous. The poetry in "The New American Caravan" is now difficult to understand because of the complex and systematic effect and every other indirect method used to convey an idea or make an impression. When "Ileone" writes of "much broad hot, virginly hot" and such things as "dope dull" and "prudent stick is stiff" the notes on these things with a dictionary besides one and try to substitute synonyms in order to elucidate is extremely hopeless.

Evelyn Scott has occasion to say in her "Dorothy's Letter" that "Little boys are tripping home from school,

And, C. N. Myrick, "Teddy is sleeping, the red ones are tripping home from school."

“A BIRD IN THE HAND is worth two in the bush.” Good taste—what smoker would trade it away for any number of cigarette claims? No Chesterfield smoker would. For its mild fragrance, its deeply satisfying character—in short, its taste—has always been the one thing smokers wanted:
