Compulsory Chapel opposed in late poll

In the questionnaire held by the Tripod on Wednesday, May fourth, 110 students cast their opinions on questions of Tripol and campus inter-group. Of this group, 50 were Seniors, 38 Juniors, 50 Sophomores, and 55 Freshmen.

In all cases it was not possible to add the number of pros and cons and arrive at 172, for some of the ballots were incomplete and others were as to opinions.

The chapel question was probably the most completely opposed. 146 voters opposed chapel as a disciplinary measure; as a cultural and religious center, 134 opposed it and 9 favored it, while 100 opposed it as a means of uniting the students.

Of the 172 ballots cast, cultural nature were favored by 88; spiritual and educational topics came next with 78 votes and religious spokesmen thrilled at the thought with 51 votes.

A vote showed that 150 students among the voters were readers of the editorials and 21 went as far as to say that they would send 96 as opposed to 64 favoring Prin-teting biology, library books and outside books, providing the review's were brief. 123 persons favored the cultural and religious sides opposed eliminating issues of The

on to publish the literary magazine.

Thoughts Around the Archway was backed by 130 votes and opposed by 43 men as "too familiar." However, they gained or learned anything from taking written examinations in the various topics, many of these saying that they "gained very little." 15 men who took the examination turned it in as a part of the regular Physical Educational department of the college, and the remainder back rating.

The most overwhelming vote was cast in favor of radio and musical instruments. Only 8 persons

Trackmen journey to intercollegiate meet

Dust Leads Group Going to Worchester Mars: Ineligible

A select group of Coach Ousting's undefeated track athletes will take part today in the annual Eastern Intercollegiate Meet to be held at Worcester, Mass. Three convincing wins in as many starts so far stamps the Blue and White and the best track aggregations ever turned out to make it. Dusk, Frank Lillie and the most conspicuous and consequently high hopes are entered for a successful showing in which track meets are involved.

Although a great share of the phenomena of this season have sprung from the fact that the round this spring is due to abundance of exceptionally talented year-men, inasmuch as the members of the Blue and White have been freshmen ineligible under the intercollegiate rules governing the meet, nevertheless Trinity will be well represented by men who have proved their worth in college and high school (Continued on page 3.)

"WE DON'T CARE IF IT RAINS OR FREEZES"

We have had to write about so many fairly serious topics in this column lately that we find it quite a relief that Senior Week-end has come at last and we have to make a few remarks about it. In fact we were becoming rather depressed with thoughts of final examinations and from worrying how we were ever going to get a degree if we came back next year, or how we were going to get a job if we could not. But Senior Week-end has come just at the right time, and now we can do nothing to deprive us of our good humor—not even the ominous date of the Ball, or the fact that very wet clouds threaten to dampen our high spirits. A certain sense of humor is always to be heard in the campus radio, remarked to us yesterday, with a mean gleam in his eye, that Friday is the day for fish anyway, and that though he knew it was going to rain, he was afraid the job infinitum harder next year.

Amherst Wins Close Game from Ball Team

Context Goes Into Extra Inning, Hartford Allows But Six Hits

Going into the tenth inning in a tie, the Amherst baseball team took a close decision from the Trinity nine on Tuesday, May 3, when Karelis scored the winning run to make the final 2-1. The Blue and Gold scored their only run in the fifth inning, when Ferris crossing the plate after Warner's sacrifice fly pitted him to reach first base. Murphy was credited with the other run with a score in the first inning.

The game early developed into a pitching duel between Hambreey and Karelis, both of whom turned in fine performances. The Trinity manager allowed the opposing teams to bat at will, with a large number of men, while Karelis recorded five strikeouts and limited the Blue and Gold to five hits.

Fontana, Trinity's first baseman, failed to reach first base, but Philipson followed with a clean single. Vamite took first on an error by Kar­

COMMUNICATION

To the Members of the Interfraternity Council, Gentleman:

Your latest revision of the pledging rules, in an effort to control rushing activities, shoots wide of the mark. To no purpose it labors with too much red tape; its complication breeds distrust. It is no more effective than previous agreements. Whatever plan may be adopted must have teeth. More than that, seeing the woods for the trees, it neglects the prime issue of all rushing—to get freshmen into the houses where they will best fit. More than one man this year has deliberately stayed out because he could not approve the fraternity system in a single week. It is the object of this communication to suggest possible solutions to both these problems— with the hope that a seed or two will fall by the wayside, take root, and bring about a few comments.

Any rushing season, whether long or short, any pledging system, whether simple or involved, must be effectively administered. There is nothing inherently wrong with the idea of group activities with an offender. Should it be possible that any fraternity wish to remove its part in the interfraternity system, they will think twice before facing the critical eye of the entire college body. Only by taking this definite stand can any interfraternity agreement survive and prosper.

The great criticism of the present short rushing season is that it does not give the freshmen and the fraternities a chance to look each other over. It is to the interests of the college, of the house, and of every fraternity member that new men should fit into the right places. The objection to a longer rushing season has been that the fraternity dining rooms cannot withstand the financial loss involved. It is not possible to compromise with this situation this communication proposes that after the usual period of free entertainment, a limited number of prospective members, paying the regular members' rate, at 2 o'clock of the fifth Saturday following the official opening of college, until the Saturday following the last day of the opening of college. That students should be allowed unlimited cuts in individual classes where they receive an average of 85 o/o. Many ballots contained favorable check-off for all plans, making an uncertain count. In the last question about enlistment, draft or refusal to bear arms, the camp was divided and some failed to cast an opinion. 67 students said they would voluntarily enlist, 55 said they would wait to be drafted, and 88 expressed the opinion that students should be allowed unlimited cuts in individual classes where they receive an average of 85 o/o. Many ballots contained favorable check-off for all plans, making an uncertain count.

HENRY SCORES FIRST VICTORY OF SEASON

Pitches a Shut-out Game Over Clark University—Team Plays Well

Making his third appearance of the current season, Bill Henebry, sophomore pitcher, showed the Clark University team 11 to 0 in a game played yesterday, Wednesday, May 11, at Trinity's home grounds. At the peak of his form, Henebry allowed his opponents out two hits, struck out four men while Gallagher, Clark pitcher, was hit for twice hits passed six batters, and uncorked two wild pitches. Bell, with three out of four, and Henebry, with three hits out of a possible five, were outstanding at the bat for Trinity, and Kelly and Elliott each accounted for two singles.

The Blue and Gold scored in the second, third, fourth and seventh innings, amassing four runs in the last of these four big sessions. The only approach to a score by Clark came in the fifth, when Brieley drove a triple to right field. A throw from Kelly to Philipp came briefly coming in, and put an end to Clark's brief resistance.

The Trinity nine's appearance was marked by several changes in the lineup. Rockwell resumed his old place at first base, replacing Ferris, while Bell moved into right field. Vannie shifted from left to center in place of Armstrong, and Adams took off left field. Clark's complete formation seemed to click well, as from center field. In their half of the ninth, Clark was helpless in the hands of Henebry; in the third straight men to earn Trinity the final score of the game. Before the score reads:

The second hit in Clark's batting order was sacrificed by Kelly's hit. Elliott connected safely to send in Kelly, and came home on Henebry's hit. Henebry's two-base hit, in the next inning, a fielder's choice and two errors, combined with hits by Bell and Kelly, gave the Blue and Gold a much-needed run. Again in the fourth Vannie stole second after receiving a pass to first base, to score on Philipp's double to left. The Trinity captain then advanced to third and came home on a Clark error. The second hit of the inning was a one-base hit by Brieley, and a single to right field. Bell, Elliott and Kelly each had two hits; O'Keeffe's single was the first hit of the game for Clark.
