Class of 1899 is Making Plans for Gala 35th Reunion, to Be Held Here Next June Week

The Class of 1899, long noted for its enthusiasm and love for Trinity, is planning its thirty-fifth reunion for next June Week. This winter Keno Davis, William Eaton, and Bishop McElwee have written letters to the other men, telling them of the progress the College is making and that the Class of 1899 is supreme. The Class of 1899 is planning to hold its reunion in Trinity College Park, and the members have voted to purchase the park. The park is to be named in honor of the Class of 1899.

The Class of 1899 has also given its support to the skating rink on the campus. The Class of 1899 has donated $5,000 to the skating rink fund, and the Class of 1899 has also given its support to the new gymnasium.

As Candidates Report for Track, Baseball

Thirty Answer Call of Diamond; Javelin Tests of Speed, Pole Vault May Be Weak Events

Over thirty men answered the call for the baseball squad issued by Coach Gil Wright Wednesday, March 14. In addition to the seasoned players of last year, a number of the players reported among whom Wright hopes to find promising material. Wright has several plans for the season, and then plans the candidates in their workshops with a short session of throwing the ball and baseball bats for the first time. The facilities for indoor practice are limited, Coach Wright hopes to drill his men in handling the ball. Basset practice will be continued until the Blue and Gold Diamond is available.

Veterans from last season’s squad present were: John M. Bax- ton; Kelly, shortstop; Captain Henre- y; pitcher; Siebege, centerfield; Hall, pitcher; Goode, catcher; Dunn, catcher; Musquit, second base; Fritza- nan, fullback; and Millet, out- fielder. Men lost through graduation last June and the earlier round. Mason won out in their workouts with a more vigorous than his earlier round. Mason won out in their workouts with a more vigorous defense. They practiced wrestling, football, and the various track events.

Mason outlasted those who answered the call for the baseball diamond. The Mason team is expected to beat the opposition in the early rounds. The Mason team is expected to beat the opposition in the early rounds.

Hollins, Mason, Advance to Finals of Squash Tourney

On Wednesday, March 14, the quarter-finals of the individual squash tournament were played, and the rest of the week saw the survivors of these matches up to the semi-finals. In the quarter-finals, Hollins defeated Bingham in the first round, and Mason defeated Trinity in the second round. In the semi-finals, Hollins defeated Bingham in the first round, and Mason defeated Trinity in the second round. In the semi-finals, Hollins defeated Bingham in the first round, and Mason defeated Trinity in the second round. Hollins and Mason will meet in the finals of the squash tournament.

The squash champions of the college will be decided in a match to be played during the course of this week between the finalists, Hollins and Mason.

VARIETY SWEATERS

Spurred on, no doubt, by the unusual success that our teams have enjoyed this year, the Athletic Advisory Council has deemed it advisable to award lettered sweaters to all winners of varsity insignia at Trinity. This is a commendable step, but one that should have been taken long ago. All colleges and most schools have been preparing for this for years, and people have been persistent enough to put through a measure which will mean that wearing one’s letter will now be possible, where it was previously an almost wholly unobserved tradition, rapidly growing in the way that all college traditions seem to be headed in these times.

The Council has not yet decided upon any type of sweater, but the choice is that it will be either blue or white, and that the letter appearing on it will be gold, possibly with a thin blue border. Arguments seem to be plentiful for either type, but we are bound to confess that we favor the white sweater, and we are fairly sure that Trinity men will be wearing them before the season is over if they are to wear them, and we hope you will have a bird’s eye view of the two.

KEEPPING UP THE GOOD WORK

It requires no more than a cursory glance and an open mind to accept the unpleasant truth that a large portion of the Trinity College campus is a disgusting pleasure to those who appreciate all things that lead to health but feel that much time in the past could have been put to better advantage than has been the case. Last year the Community Choir kindly lent their support in the Slide operations of the Chapel by sending up a crew of workers daily over a somewhat considerable length of ground, and in the process of digging up a lot of silly bilge looking at the pictures; so we read it for all those long words in the dictionary and begins each line of text looking at the pictures; so we read it for all those long words in the dictionary which is obviously based on nothing but malicious libel. We practically always read the Tripod as it is rather difficult for Willibalf to look up all those long words in the dictionary and then struggle through poor grammar, bad type and all the world’s most startling novel is in the back of his head. He has a rather ghastly experience with a trip, talking...

COMMUNICATION

Editorials Written In English, and That's All, Says Critic To the Editor of the Tripod:

The editorials which appear faithfully in each issue of the Tripod are written in English. When you say this, you have given them their just dues. If you write in a more favorable, either you write the editorials yourself, or you don't read the Tripod. I have never been able to figure out how the editorial staff turns out such consistent performances; it is really a revelation. I mean, after all, you'd expect that once in a while the law of averages would catch up with one or the other of the writers. But no! the powers behind our editorial writers are wonderfully diligent young men. Time and again they have shown that they can produce the diliest, dullest, most uninteresting stuff that could possibly pass by the board.

But perhaps I am too hasty; maybe the law of averages will catch up with them before the term is over. If it ever does—well, all I can say is that we're going to be in for some of the cleverest editorial comment that print has ever known. We can all drop our books and spend our evenings reading page two of the Tripod, because, if our editorial writers are equal to the task, they should be able to make amends for past productions and determine to balance the good with the bad, it's going to be one edifying page for the next two months. The subject matter of the editorials is passable—in fact, there is a strong possibility that it might be read. If so, the papers will be able to find an interesting manner. Of course, at this point we may have to mention a slight difficulty; the subject matter is not put forward in an interesting manner. As I have said, the writers use the English language. That's an admirable start; and there's nothing like getting off on the right foot. But the trouble is that there are many ways of using the English language. Unfortunately, our editorialists have (Continued on page 4.)

Discovery the most tiresome way. They have all agreed, it seems, that the only way to write editorials is to pound them out in a dull, tedious style. This style may have its merits, but at the moment I am forced to admit that I fail to see them. But, of course, it may be that our commentators are miles ahead of me. Perhaps their columns are reeking with a subtle humor which escapes my feeble efforts to penetrate its depths.
