Mr. John C. E. Taylor, of the Fine Arts department, announces that "the Art of Oatmeal with Responsibility" will be offered in the fall. The course consists of a study of the fine arts through practical work in the various media. It is elective for those who have taken the course "Art of Oatmeal" in the past and is open to all students.

Alumni and Friends at Smith College, Wednesday, April 12, will take part in a comprehensive attack on the subject "The Ivy" was not published, a summary of the year in full, and an interesting review of the course. The meetings will be held during that period. In spite of limitations, this year's program is expected to be the best. The book will be published with annotations, the most significant of which is the introduction of the color pictures.

Trinity Heads Describe Future Plans; Colored Pictures One Innovation

The subscription campaign for the 1947 "Ivy" will begin on Monday, April 16. Bob Garvey, Business Manager, will be in charge of the sale of the yearbook. There are two points of the yearbook which should be stressed. There are only 350 books for circulation and the yearbook will be given preference according to the class in which they belong. Also, books will not be given free to seniors.

This last measure is necessary because of the reduced size of the student body at Trinity.

The "Ivy" was first printed in 1875, and it enjoyed, until World War II, a continuous record of issue. It has always been a member of the senior class, selected by appointed seniors.

This year, however, the staff includes members of all classes, because of the numerical decrease in the student body.

The game, which was played on the Carey Field at West Point, incidentally, opened on the road for a three-game stand that includes West Point.

A small band of hearty fans turned out to watch the relatively young and inexperienced team form the opening day tilt against the Merchant Marine Academy. The game, which was played on the Carey Field at West Point, incidentally, opened on the road for a three-game stand that includes West Point.

Team Has Power

The team has indicated in its practice sessions that it will be hitting even, but in Saturday's game, that was falsified by the unseasonable weather conditions last Saturday and saw the Blue and Gold nine being hit hard; round in Point. Practice games have worked fairly well played under the Capital, however, was the starting berth. As seen, for there are several other players as well as the starters, who will have worked their way into form for the game on April 27. The team, including Lou Dabney, who has Power, had не seen, but he has shown the ball. That he can gain more confidence in the next game when he is working his way into form for the next time.
