Maxwell Anderson's "Masque of Kings" Presented Successfully by Jesters

Brush, Albee, Bonson and Hall Lead Cast; Play Seen at Avery

The Jesters presented Maxwell Anderson's "Masque of Kings," the latest of his "Modern Epic Mimesis," in Avery Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings.

The play was inspired by a news story of the 1890's, that Prince Rudolf of Austria-Hungary, the so-called "Svice King," had been killed in a hunting accident at his lodge in Austria. Around this story, Anderson had written a tragic explanation of what might have happened.

It concerns the struggle of Emperor Franz Joseph to retain control of the fast-decaying Hapsburg dynasty in the face of simmering intrigues, and the stubbornness of his son who is disgusted with royalty's methods of obtaining and wielding power.

The Jesters presented the play in its full length, with all the acting and scenery which they could put on, with a cast who were as well as they could make it.

Robert Obrey. A meeting at the beginning of this term was held at which Professor Vogel, Hartford College World Federalists, discussed the possibility of a world government. He pointed out the need for some understanding of the problems involved in world government. The meeting was also considered. These problems in our time is a Utopian project, but rather many periods will be required in which to decide these issues.

Alpha Chi Bho enjoyed an "odd clothes" party Saturday evening. It was the whole-heated opinion of all Crow that the twelve o'clock curfew is a safety and survival issue. The Louis fight was strongly contested, with Parker and Stuart-Alexander saying frantic prayers to the Old Crow on the mantel. Jenkins is giving the House nightmares with his "well- eye" tricks. Alpha is once more on the wounded list with a badly cut paw. The House congratulates new Brothers Page and Meredith.

Delta Kappa Epsilon takes pleasure in announcing that we possess one painter extraordinary plus apprentice — namely, Brothers Bob Norment and Bill Wilson. "Shoulders" has spent numerous hours painting our new room on the third floor while all the time trying to close-up behind apprentice painter Wilson. However, even with Bill's help, the room has some a long way in the past week and should soon be ready for active service. Beware all competitors! Watch out for the Delta Basketball team!

Pat Upsall wasted little time in recovering from the pleasant but varying effects on the Thanksgiving vacation. The event of the week was the long awaited fight between Louis and Walton. Mac McAllister made up a pool and sat next to the radio, his betting sheet in hand, gloomily counting off names as the rounds went by. Most of the brothers in the kitchen with their superior presence paw. The House congratulates new Brothers Page and Meredith.

 Delta Phi held its first post-foot­ball season party on Saturday evening last as parties in the old rooms go, this one was surprisingly quiet and sedate. It took a labour two, the oil burner company to inform the combined forces of our various majors and chairmen of the House Committee Wirzschwolter that the reason for the failure of our heating unit was a lack of fuel. Harvard sports writers informed us that basketball star Watson has gained weight since last year.

Delta Phi's heart has been stolen this week by Geeks. We have all said, "It can't last," but so far so good. Even Bill Smith and Hump Heppenstall have finally had to cry, "Enough!" Over the weekend, the Leopardsma had a field day with sev­er­al of the Brothers. Don Farrow and Julio did the Quaker Town and Ben Forey went to the Army-Navy Game; Television, that is.
