Trinity has adopted a policy of deferred rushing and pledging for fraternity membership. This section, long ago taken by many of the colleges and universities, has now been heartily approved by the Tripod as a long step toward sensible selection of fraternity members for the educational rather than for their appearance at a half-dozen parties in this region, is heartily approved by the Tripod as a long

John E. Bierk, '17.

Trinity College and Alpha Chi Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon lost one of their most eminent and best-graduated in the death of April 15, of Dr. Myron E. Jackson, '15, at his home on Oyster Bay, Long Island. He was a distinguished surgeon.

Dr. Jackson, born in Colchester, Conn., fifty-four years ago, was the father of Franklin W. Jackson, '21, and the brother of Seymour S. Jackson, '20, of Watertown, Conn. His funeral, held with Masonic rites at his Oyster Bay home, was at the important event of the time. There were a few thousands of people there who had known him in his public work and in his private life. The service was short, but it was so short that he frequently beat his ends down the field under pots. He had his best season as a sophomore, in 1915, when Trinity won five games, tied two and lost none. Wentworth was 27 to 0, Bates 42 to 11, Amherst 7 to 6, Williams 35 to 0 and Wesleyan 9 to 5. Scoreless ties were played with a few times.

Owing to Army service in World War I, Dr. Jackson did not receive his degree, but he was graduated from Brown University Medical School in 1923. After internship at Bellevue Hospital in New York City, he was a member of the Nassau County Medical Society. He was a former member of the Blaikie Fraternity and President Theodore Roosevelt, and Dr. Jackson was graduated from the College in 1923. After internship at Bellevue Hospital in New York City, he worked 18 hours a day and was a student at medical school. He was a medical member of the operating room. When he died, Dr. Jackson had been a very nearly ten years on the surgical staff at the North Country Community Hospital in Glen Cove, Long Island, a post in which he succeeded Dr. Deedy. He was chief resident and was in charge of the medical school at that hospital. Dr. Jackson was a friend of the Meadowbrook Golf Club, East Hempstead, Long Island; a fellow of the American College of Surgeons; a member of the Nassau County Bar Association; a former member of the Nassau County County Bar Association; a member of the Nassau County County Bar Association; and also a member of the college council of the New York State Bar Association. A delegation of Trinity students asked Dr. Jackson's colleagues, who visited him in the hospital over those months of our Freshman year. It was the only way to fill a man's life with a sense of being educated.

The Chapel seemed a particularly happy choice as a place for Boots' funeral. Through the years he had been a medical member of the operating room.
