Faculty Resolution Fixes Grading Laws

In another move to tighten the academic system, the faculty passed a resolution providing for conditional and incomplete grades.

The old ruling stated that "a student conditioned in a course will be credited with the course if he passes an infernal examination, or otherwise satisfies the instructor." The new ruling limits the time a provisional grade will be allowed to stand. It states that the instructor must provide for the student who is absent or make up his work during the semester following the receipt of a deficiency, such deficiency must be removed during his next semester in college."

The "incomplete" grade will remain if a student has a valid excuse for missing a final exam. An "incomplete" grade will be given if a student who is not adequately fulfilled. The purpose of this resolution is to put down the laxness of the students who are making up deficient grades.

Senior Plans College Smoker

In an effort to promote closer contacts among the junior class, the Senate will present an all-college smoker this Friday evening. The smoker will be held at 11 a.m. and will feature archaeological and historical exhibits from the college. The smoker will be addressed by George Kennedy (Psi U), Bob Sind (Off-campus), Van Roberts, and Diane Lambrecht (Brownell).

A WORD OF ADVICE...

As the college year once again draws to a close, the trouble from both the freshmen and the upperclassmen turn to rushing. The Mason Plan, begun yesterday and scheduled for the fall term, has found those freshmen face to face with the choice that they must make in ten minutes.

We offer for what is worth a word of advice to those freshmen, and we understand that the number of those with casting error small, who have signed up for the Mason Plan. Use to your greatest advantage. By this we mean visit all the fraternities on campus. We realize that many of you have not had much experience in life, and some in mind in as to the houses that you are most interested in. A vague idea at this time is excusable, but not a complete decision to join this fraternity or that one.

Attempt to keep an open mind until, and even after, you have visited all the houses. The Mason Plan and even the brief rush week in the fall together are actually not sufficient time to give you a picture complete of the various fraternities. Do not, however, reason that because you have found that you are not interested in the house which you have desired, you should commit yourself to one of two reasons. First, you may be passing over the house in which you would be best fitted, and second, if you show no interest in a fraternity during the Mason Plan, it is not likely to show much interest in you next fall. Take no chances; support the Mason Plan and attend all the fraternities.

The college has rushed the freshmen and even after, you have visited all the houses. The Mason Plan and even the brief rush week in the fall together are actually not sufficient time to give you a picture complete of the various fraternities. Do not, however, reason that because you have found that you are not interested in the house which you have desired, you should commit yourself to one of two reasons. First, you may be passing over the house in which you would be best fitted, and second, if you show no interest in a fraternity during the Mason Plan, it is not likely to show much interest in you next fall. Take no chances; support the Mason Plan and attend all the fraternities.

Continuing on the topic of rushing, there is one other point that many first-year students fail to see made. We feel that a complete set of rushing rules, similar to those set forth in the freshman yearbook, is not enough. We feel that their explanations should be made available to freshmen and sophomores no matter which side of the fence they are. To the incoming freshmen especially, to whom the rules of rushing are usually a foreign language, the complete set of rushing rules is explained in this column.

Some of us may have had a great new year's resolution, a hair of the dog that bit you, a hassle on hold. What effect did it start to show in the day-to-day life of an American college student? If you are thinking of rushing, we urge you to read this article and consider your options. By rushing, you can avoid committing to a fraternity that is not a good fit for you, and you can learn more about the college and the community as a whole.

"GENEVIEVE"

By PAUL TERRY

Some movies are good, and some are bad...some movies are funny, and some are sad...so go the lyrics of an old song long ago forgotten by theater-goers. There is a picture now playing at the New Parma which proves that the days of the old lyric are not forever. "Genievie" is the kind of picture which is at once both "good" and "fairy." The Arthur J. Rank production deals with the annual trip from London to Brighton made by a group of antique-car enthusiasts. Genevieve, the mechanical star of the movie, is a 1904 Darracq, and its painful progress from English channel to Brighton and back again reminds this reviewer of his own bitter experience with an Irish bus and his back-breaking outward roll.

Starring in this role, John Gregson does a competent job of piloting and directing Genevieve along the thirty-two mile run, and at the same time, he performs the act of part of his task equally well. Mr. Gregson portrays the figure of Allan McKinnon, a struggling young lawyer whose primary joy in life is putting the old Darracq and getting it ready for the yearly sortie to Brighton. His lovely wife, played by Dinah Sheridan, adds the female element and sets up the framework for a very humorous husband-wife relationship.

The foundation of the plot rests on a feud between Allan and his pal, Ambrose Claphamhouse. These two characters become ever more enthusiastic about their automobiles, and decide to race back to London. What happens during this madcap peregrination is worth seeing. From blowouts to broken steering columns, Alan meets Genevieve across the lovely English countryside toward the finish line.

The subtle wit of the English pen has created a thoroughly enjoyable moving picture in "Genevieve."
Snider, Rosen to be Batting Champs

The intramural athletic program has been in existence here at Trinity College for many years and its future is practically indistinguishable from that of the college itself. The competition has become an important part of the student's life on campus. The importance of the Intramural program is due to the fact that it is more, to a large extent, inclusive in the sense that it is open to all students, including those who cannot participate on varsity teams.

Perhaps the most valuable asset that Intramural has is the closer ties, both internal and external, that it creates between those who participate. The competition is taken far more seriously than the outsider might imagine. Each event is usually preceded by a serious training period to prepare the participants of putting their best efforts forward and to bring each individual closer to his companion. With such men turning out its finest performances in quest of victory, the atmosphere of harmony and friendship is created.

Sports and Social Interest

Still another important aspect of which it provides for college activities.

Harvard Receives TV Bid from NCA

It was announced last week that the National Collegiate Athletic Association had asked permission to televise the 1964 Harvard-Yale football game. The TV bid was thought by some to mean a handsome sum of money to Harvard. Harvard is expected to bring in the $300,000 which the NCA has over pridet televisors.

Reasons For Break

Last season Harvard severed relations with the NCAAs over television. This move was based on the belief that the NCAAs regulations were against the anti-trust laws, as well as the University's desire to remain independent of any national organization.

This television proposal may be an attempt to regain the support of Harvard and Yale—which also broke relations due to a stand against TV. Harvard, along with Pennsylvania and Notre Dame, has been a leading figure in the increased resistance of the schools shown over the television issue.

Amherst Considers New Cut System; Many Views

A new system regulating class cuts at Amherst will . . . make every other college's (own). It was reported last week by that college's newspaper, the Student. Although each instructor will inform the Dean's office of his cut policy at the beginning of the semester, the Dean reserves the right to limit any cut policy from unlimited cuts to cuts at all Dean's discretion, and has been asked to follow the regulations set up in their respective courses, even should the instructor allow no cuts at all.

Each Instructor Keeps Own

As the system is now envisioned, each instructor will be responsible for keeping his own attendance records and will only report to the Dean when someone has been absent. The new system is scheduled to go into effect next semester, Sept. 1954.

Although the new system was voted by the faculty before spring vacation, and has been extensively discussed all over the campus for several days, the administration has said nothing official as yet. Therefore the exact workings of the system are not definitely known.

“Too Busy”

When approached and comment on the details, Dean C. Scott Porter replied that he was “too busy” to make any comment on the new system, but would comment on the details.

A small sampling of faculty opinion indicated that some of the members are not wholly in favor of the “new dean” system, “as a rule” keep the same standards as the College now holds. The students felt that the merits of the system would depend on how liberal the faculty members would make it, and there was some fear that certain instructors would allow no cuts, which would “week all my weeks.”

Norman F. Ramsey, also a physics professor, said that he had been associated with Oppenheimer for the past five years and that in that time he has given no reason for anyone to doubt his integrity. Another professor, a physical chemist at the University of California, also expressed confidence in the investigation "means and crazy." Perry Miller, professor of American literature, said that "the charges were nothing but a question of words and facts, and the case will be concluded in a few days.

YALE: A Yale University economics instructor who tried to beat some records by example has flunked his own course on the stock market. It began when instructor Robert E. Will decided to give his freshmen a crash course in stocks. Will passed on 89 by telling them that the Standard Oil of New Jersey, Ltd., was on the way up and a "good investment."

Within no time, the boys were buying gifts and won. Professor Reynolds said only 1,000 were bought. Reynolds said Will has failed to reimburse his students for the venture. Since the stock has fallen instead of rising, Will stands to lose five cents a share, plus brokerage fee, so he sold it immediately. He thus will suffer $500 loss on the $3,000 he invested. U. OF WASHINGTON: A time-honored tradition hit the dust at the University of Washington recently when sorority editor.

Freshman Adjustment Said To Be Inadequate by Professor

A new approach to the perennial problem of freshman adjustment was tentatively tackled at Colby College by the help of Professor Theodore M. Greene of Yale University. Dr. Greene, a philosophy professor, declared that "typical freshman indoctrination" in college is an address by the president, and suggested at that time a Freshman Convocation.

We fail to use imagination to get inside the minds of the newly arrived freshman and to help them understand, to some extent, the climate of the freshman student. We have failed to make the freshman understand that he is not alone and that he is as able to make the best of himself as the rest of the students.

The new Freshman Convocation was held in the College auditorium and was attended by the entire freshman class. At the beginning of the program, a series of questions was asked of the freshmen, such as: "What is your major field of study?" "What are your interests?" "What do you hope to accomplish in college?"
