The need for success

The majority of young people of college age move with a contrary form. Few feel that the burden of supporting those who cannot support themselves should be placed on their shoulders when they themselves are not yet self-supporting. For this and other reasons of lesser importance the annual Campus Chest Drive at Trinity has, in the past few years, fallen short of its goal. If it continues to do so it will very likely fail in the eyes of the students to the point where it will be viewed as something to be regarded with suspicion and perhaps will be forced to discontinue. A drive that continually fails to reach its goal quickly loses the respect and interest of potential contributors. Exception must be made, however, when there is an effort to see a few thousand professors walking around a hotel lobby talking about important matters. This drive was presented by a group of five men, one of whom had a radically different point of view and Dr. Downs on the same subject, that Trinity stands near the head and is well ahead of the rest in the scope of historical knowledge and enables one to hear about important works that are being written at the present time. In the near future the first volume of a five-volume history of the Crusades will be published sometime about our past history of the world. It was as interesting as it was stimulating. It reveals the volume of a five-volume history of the Crusades that they are particularly interested in and to find out what is being written or studied in other colleges. "That," said Dr. Downs of our department, "is one of the most important functions of the meeting. We are able to meet and talk with some of the great men in the field of history, particularly to ask some of the questions that we have been thinking about during the day.

Trinity was well represented among the galaxy of historical stars, and held its own along with the greats of the Association. I found that after hearing a talk on "History in American Colleges" and talking to Dr. Thompson and Dr. Devos on the same subject, that Trinity stands near head and shoulders above the rest of the colleges in the United States in the manner and subject matter that is taught in our History Department. "We teach pure history," stated Dr. Thompson. "We don't teach what is called social sciences." The mixing of social sciences with history, a common fault in many colleges, was criticized at the convention. In conversations with men of other schools, it was gratifying to learn that many of the Trinity graduates doing work on their Masters and Doctorates turn in extremely competent work because of the firm foundation they received as undergraduates.

During the three-day series of lectures it was impossible to cover all of the talks that were given. Many of them were too technical for the student who has not studied one particular field. There were also some highly interesting talks such as "Conformity in American Life." This particular subject was presented by a group of five men, one of whom had a radically different conception from that of his other colleagues. The result was a hot debate among the members of the panel and a few heated comments from the audience.

THE TRINITY TRIPOD

American Historical Association

By DUNCAN STEPHENSON

Last week the American Historical Association held its annual meeting at the Hotel Commodore in New York. Nearly three thousand professors of History representing most of the colleges and universities of the United States and some visiting scholars from Europe and Asia convened to discuss phases of history that they are particularly interested in and to find out what is being written or studied in other colleges. "That," said Dr. Downs of our department, "is one of the most important functions of the meeting. We are able to meet and talk with some of the great men in the field of history, particularly to ask some of the questions that we have been thinking about during the day.

The result was a hot debate among the members of the panel and a few heated comments from the audience.

Present at the meeting were some of Trinity's Most Loyal—Allan Nevins, Dr. J. Kroul, and Combes Reed. I must say that it is some experience to see a few thousand professors walking around a hotel lobby talking about their pets of History. It also revealed that there is much to be written about our past history of the world. The meeting of the American Historical Association was an extremely enjoyable conference. It was so stimulating that it reveals the scope of historical knowledge and enables one to hear about important works that are being written at the present time. In the near future the first volume of a five-volume history of the Crusades will be published sometime this year. In the field of American History an important book on Stanton, Secretary of War under Lincoln is being written by Benjamin Thomas, this author of a recent book on Lincoln. History and historical writing is a living and important part of our culture.

The American Historical Association with its many members is one of the finest and most creative institutions functioning today.

Not to be Back at Good, 604, Cherry, Entertaining, Relaxing Trim, isn't fans? You can all rest and get over the worries of many by doing nothing. You can still be amusing.

Being (believe it or not) a publication of sorts, the Tripod is fairly flooded by roams of publicity flyers from various organizations and individuals. Your Edition do the kindness of ignoring most of the trash which comes from such institutions as the Spooling, Five Chamber of Commerce, the Connecticut Hotel of Penny, etc. (which incidentally offers student rates during the mosquito season), Boone News (official publication of the Tequila industry), and many other fascinating organizations. Their hustle to be rid of this mess, several interesting publications are filed away. Or would be, if it were not for Your Faithful Old Column. We have been having for some time and feel that this is an opportune time to tell all.

Most of the interesting flyers (we feel) deal with temperance. Temperance Unions sure know where to send their staff, your. Right to where it makes the most dough the temperance salesmen and they think that the college man has any interest in knowing that, "(in France) 1% per cent of the... can... can..." We can imagine the editors, fiery-eyed and stern, mounting the barricades, "WHERE,oh WHERE..."

Another such publication, the Pennsylvania Citizen, tells a long story of statistics linking crime and drink. It states that prisons give mixed results. The best prison, the "beautiful Merritt Parkway," by beer cans and whiskey bottles.

But by far the most fascinating of all this year's beauty was born from one Isabelle Barlow of Philadelphia, who addressed her monument to "Colleges of the world." Mrs. Barlow informs us that on January 5, 1955, she will proudly announce, and said, "If they fourths of the peoples of the earth ask God their Father for Peace, He will grant it unto them. You tell them."

We are proud of our beloved institution, and in a malleable or maybe-productive whisking. Anyway, are we intrigued by the letter.

We happened to see a conversation up with a bridge driver into one night a few weeks ago. "Schoolin' sure stickies-things the dough, don't it," he said. "What?"

"Higher education. It's what education that to those who desire higher incomes," he snapped. We agreed.

The principal theme in the president's speech, however, had to do with the financial development of the College. President Jacob stressed the fact that a discussion of the financial status of the college is necessary because 1.) the endowment at Trinity is much smaller than that of the other colleges, 2.) the size of the student body has increased materially in recent times, 3.) the tuition tax (for only one-half of the actual cost) faces the College a student's education.

Take advantage of new materials such as hardboard pulp, aluminum, and titanium from Canada, oil from Venezuela, and the introduction of electric furnace steel from scrap metal. 2. Fully exploit research-based innovation, utilizing the knowhow of the region's technological research organizations. 3. Expand foreign trade. Imports will provide the materials to support established industries. 4. Recognize that because of its manufacturing emphasis, the area is well equipped to innovate new industries and wrap them through state development, credit cooperatives and local industrial foundations. Dr. Neal concluded his talk by stating, "New England's future income and well-being appear to be reasonably assured if it continues to upgrade its manufacturing industries."

the Campus Chest campaign is carried out.
Faculty of Shine Shoes
In a letter mailed to every member of the student body last Monday, Chairman Nitter outlined the plans of the Campus Chest and the various activities that will be taking place during the drive. Tomorrow there will be a student assembly held in the Student Auditorium with Dr. Albert C. Jacobs speaking. After the assembly is over, eleven distinguished members of the faculty will be shining shoes in the auditorium for $1 a pair. Again on Friday, twelve more faculty members will be practicing the art of blackshoeing in the Student Auditorium at the same prize.

in an interview with Ros Foster, Vice Chairman, he stated, "Other colleges comparable to Trinity, such as Wesleyan, Amherst, and Williams, have always been way over their goal and I am sure that this year Trinity students will respond enthusiastically to our Campus Chest by putting it far over the goal of $500."

STUDENTS ARE ECSTATIC about Luckies. That's the word, straight from the latest, largest college survey ever made. The No. 1 reason Luckies lead in colleges over all other brands, coast to coast—border to border: Luckies taste better. They taste better, first of all, because Lucky Strike roasts fine tobacco. Then, that tobacco is ground to taste better. This famous Lucky Strike process tones up Luckies' light, good-tasting tobacco to make it taste even better. So be smart, like the student in the Drodle above, titled: Luckies Are Roasting in Harmony Swinging to Luckies yourself. Enjoy the better-tasting cigarette... Lucky Strike.

STUDENTS Urged to Attend Jacobs' Talk
The Senate urged at its Monday meeting that all students attend President Jacobs's speech this Thursday. This very important speech will be given at 11:00 tomorrow in the Chemistry Auditorium. The Senate also requested that the five organizations which have not yet turned in their budgets for the next term do so. If these budgets are not turned in, the organizations in question will get no more money.
